McNutt Gets Trappings Of New Deal For '40 Race

Security Chieftain Singled Out for Hyde Park Bid, Inner Circle Dinner

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Presidential bandwagon of platinum-haired Federal Security Administrator McNutt yesterday gathered New Deal trappings as it rumbled out an answer to the strong 1940 bid of Vice President Garner.

That the McNutt parade is receiving something more than cursory right-of-way from inner New Deal circles was emphasized here three times this week and it may hang out new pennants at Hyde Park tomorrow.

The Federal Security administrator, former Philippine Commissioner and former Indiana Governor, has been invited to be present when the President lays the cornerstone of the Roosevelt Library at Hyde Park. Presence of no other official dignitary thus far has been announced.

A Favored Guest

Indications that extreme New Dealers may be preparing to board the bandwagon if the third-term movement collapses were provided by other earlier developments.

Surrounded by secrecy, McNutt was put on show at a highly exclusive dinner at the Cosmos Club attended by such left wing New Dealers as "Tommy" Corcoran, Supreme Court Justice Black, Federal Works Administrator Carmody, SEC Commissioner Eicher, and David Cushman Coyle, author of "Why Pay Taxes." Only 14 were present. Ben Cohen, of the Corcoran-Cohen team, was invited, but was out of the city.

Previously McNutt, who in the past has drawn charges of "Fascist," was guest speaker at a luncheon of the Washington Lawyers Guild, composed largely of left-wing lawyers and Administration legal aids opposed to the American Bar Association.

A conference with the President at the White House later in the week afforded a sounding board for the Federal Security Administrator (and possible 1940 candidate if Roosevelt fails to run) to outline the benefits of recent social security act liberalizations that affect 1,000,000 persons.

May Be Answer to Garner

The week's sudden prominence given McNutt was regarded by some observers as a sort of unofficial answer to the announcement of Garner managers that the Vice President is in the 1940 race "to win" whether or not Roosevelt runs.

McNutt has made clear he will not be a candidate if the President seeks a third term. That decision the President is withholding, but some minor indications, including the President's own jocular references to third-term speculation at Hyde Park yesterday, have persuaded even some members of the inner group that perhaps he will not. In the meantime, they at least are not hindering the progress of the McNutt parade.

Farley Seen as Obstacle

One apparently large rut in the road was the undisguised impression received by the McNutt forces themselves that Postmaster General Farley does not care for the Hoosier as a candidate.

Efforts to bring Farley and McNutt together have been reported recurrently, but the Democratic National Committee chairman is said to be unchanged in his views.

Recently Earl Peters, former Indiana State Democratic chairman, and an old friend of Farley's, came here to see the Postmaster General on this point. Peters went out when the McNutt regime took over in Indiana, but dickering has been

A. M. A. Urges Health Officer In Cabinet, Program for Needy

Doctors Propose Platform to Offset Wagner Plan; Oppose Federal Control Of Medicine, Compulsory Sick Insurance

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 17.—The American Medical Association, representing 115,000 doctors, tonight made public a platform for solving the Nation's health problems.

An eight-point document, proposing creation of a Federal health agency and expansion of care for the needy, but opposing Government control and compulsory sickness insurance, was drafted by the board of trustees.

It could be used as the basis for legislation, although not so offered. It was propounded amid criticism of the pending Wagner national health bill.

"In these times when the maintenance of the American democracy seems to be the most important objective for all the people of this country," the trustees said in a formal statement, "the people may well consider whether some of the plans and programs that have been offered for changing the nature of medical service are not in effect the first step toward an abandonment of the self-reliance, free will and personal responsibility that must be the basis of a democratic government."

'Local Responsibility'

The planks in the platform were:

"The establishment of an agency of Federal Government under which shall be coordinated and administered all health functions of the Federal Government, exclusive of those of the Army and Navy.

"The allotment of such funds as the Congress may have available to any State in actual need for the prevention of disease, promotion of health and the care of the sick on proof of such need.

"The principle that the care of the public health and the provision of medical service to the sick is primarily a local responsibility.

"The development of a mechanism for meeting the needs of expansion of preventive medical services with local determination of needs and local control of administration.

"The extension of medical care for the indigent and the medically indigent with local determination of needs and local control of administration.

"In the extension of medical services to all the people, the utmost utilization of qualified medical and hospital facilities already established.

"The continued development of the private practice of medicine, subject to such changes as may be necessary to maintain the quality of medical services and to increase their availability.

Public Health Expansion

"Expansion of public health and medical services consistent with the American system of Democracy."

The trustees suggested that the proposed Federal Health Agency, with a Secretary in the Cabinet, or a commission including competent physicians, would be able to handle Government health affairs "with far more efficiency."

Such an agency would see that funds are alloted to the States only after receiving proof of actual need. Communities would do their utmost to meet such need with local funds.

The trustees also urged that Federal funds be utilized in caring for the needy sick in hospitals already established before launching a "vast" hospital building program.

5 Days to Go, Chest Still Lacks $660,000

Carmody Appeals For Gifts, Warns Time Is Short

The drive to raise $2,000,000 for the Community Chest is "a dramatic story of help-one-another," John M. Carmody, administrator of the Federal Works Agency, declared yesterday at the volunteer solicitors' report luncheon in the Willard Hotel.

Pledges totaling $1,340,609, or 67.05 per cent of quota, have been received from 95,380 contributors so far. Approximately $660,000 still must be raised by Wednesday, it was announced.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, in a circular to District employes, said only 38 per cent of the city government's quota has been raised.

The Board of Commissioners, he added, is "anxious to see the District government reach its quota."

Deadline is Near

Hazen pointed out that "the Chest method of raising funds for private welfare is the best yet discovered," and asked that subscriptions be turned in promptly because the campaign will "be over in a very few days."

Carmody also drew attention to the brief period remaining for solicitation of funds.

"When people realize that the end of the campaign is near at hand you may find yourselves getting a new kind of cooperation," he said.

U. S. to Make Sure Capone Goes Straight

Guards Withdrawn, But FBI Will Keep Eye on Activities

As Al Capone yesterday began treatments designed to head off insanity, Attorney General Frank Murphy said that the Federal Government was determined that he would be given no chance to regain his throne as underworld czar.

The Attorney General said that Capone would be kept under surveillance for some time.

"We are going to be sure," he said, "that there will not be a renewal of activity by the crowd that at one time gathered around Capone."

In the Union Memorial Hospital in Baltimore the one-time "King of the Bootleggers" ate a fish dinner and played dominoes while preparing to have malaria parasites injected into his system. These, it was hoped, would generate a fever to combat the syphilis which has brought upon Capone the ravages of paresis, a brain disorder.

Healthy at Alcatraz

Dr. Joseph E. Moore, widely known syphilologist and an instructor at the Johns Hopkins Medical School, was attending the gangster. He issued a statement saying that Capone would be treated "as a patient . . . and not as a public personality."

Attorney General Murphy said that when he saw Capone at Alcatraz last June he appeared to be "in perfect condition, brown and clear eyed—apparently healthier than anybody in this room."

"But," Murphy continued, "what

Roosevelt Chuckles at Reaction To 1940 'Bid' in Speech Here

By the Associated Press

Hyde Park, N. Y., Nov. 17.—President Roosevelt is keeping his intentions for 1940 secret, but with almost impish amusement he disclosed today that on one recent occasion he had invited speculation about a third term.

And, he said at a press conference, everybody "bit."

What they bit on was an offhand remark in a speech in Washington Wednesday at the laying of the cornerstone for the Jefferson Memorial.

It was, he said then, the second time he had come to the memorial in an official capacity. By January, 1941, he added, he hoped to be able to come to the final dedication of the memorial itself—scheduled for that month.

The mention of 1941 interested the politically minded because the President's second term ends on January 20, 1941. They wondered whether he wanted to come back to the memorial a third time, either before or after that date, in an official capacity or as a private citizen.

Numerous other subjects were dealt with at the press conference today.

Prompted by questions, the Chief Executive said:

If he were writing a story, he would say that unless there were an emergency he would wait until January to fill the vacancy left on the Supreme Court by the death of Justice Pierce Butler.

Some 15 Federal officials who received recess appointments after the last regular Congressional session must receive new appointments—many already have—so they can draw their pay and their actions will be legal. That is because no nominations were submitted to the Senate during the special session, which was devoted to neutrality legislation.

Plan Devised To Dodge U.S. Debt Limit

Federal Agencies' Borrowing May Avert Increase In Election Year

By Cecil B. Dickson

A secret plan to avert the necessity of Congressional action increasing the present $45,000,000,000 national debt limit in the election year of 1940 has been devised by Administration financial experts, it was learned last night.

The plan, calling for use of the borrowing powers of New Deal lending agencies to help finance Government expenditures, was conceived after Democratic leaders advised the Administration that the issue of raising the debt ceiling imperiled chances of a Democratic victory in the Presidential election.

Under President Roosevelt's budget estimates, the national debt will reach $44,458,000,000 on June 30. The Treasury reported today it passed the $41,210,000,000 mark on November 15.

The secret plan entails the selling of securities by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Home Owners Loan Corporation and the Federal Housing Administration to private investors, the funds to be used to retire obligations of those agencies held by the Treasury.

Calls for Use of Silver

Another phase of the plan calls for the use of $559,000,000 in silver seigniorage, representing the Treasury's profits on its silver purchases, and a reduction by about $1,000,000,000 in the Treasury's working balance, which is now $1,578,000,000.

A technical loophole in the public debt law also has been discovered, whereby the Treasury's outstanding debt may be increased to $46,000,000,000 without action by Congress. An expert pointed out that the present $45,000,000,000 limit was fixed in the second liberty loan act passed in the World War, and that it did not apply to a previously authorized prewar debt of approximately $1,000,000,000.

Thus, the experts conceived, it would be possible for the Government to raise upward of $4,000,000,000 through its plan, without submitting the politically hot debt issue to the Congress.

While it was pointed out that President Roosevelt has full authority to issue $3,000,000,000 in currency under the Thomas amendment to the farm act, officials doubted that this power would be exercised.

Wallace Offers Plan

Another phase of the money-raising program is the proposal by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace for a "certificate tax plan," estimated, if approved by Congress, to provide about $400,000,000 to help pay for an estimated $750,000,000 in farm benefits.

10 Lives Lost As Boats Collide At Beaufort, N. C.

By the Associated Press

Beaufort, N. C., Nov. 17.—At least ten persons were known to have drowned tonight in a boat collision in the inland waterway 6 miles north of here.

The drowned were aboard the menhaden vessel Southland, proceeding from Ocracoke to Morehead City with a cargo of menhaden fish. She went to the bottom after she was in collision with the tugboat Escape towing the barge Escapo, bound from Wilmington to Hopewell, Va.

The identified dead were E. J. Fulcher and Charlie Fulcher, brothers, of Stacy, in East Carteret County, and three colored men, Robert Lee, of Southhope; Isaac Clarriby, of Bolivia, near Southport, and Joseph Eagles, of Southport. The other dead were colored men.

9 Die, 1,200 Jailed as Nazis Punish Prague for Disorders; Hitler, Army Reported at Odds

London Observers See Signs of Split In Failure to Press War After Threats

By James B. Reston

London, Nov. 17.—Responsible persons who ought to know gave confirmation today to reports of a sharp, serious dissension between Fuehrer Hitler and the German high command.

Those who hold this belief say that it is only a logical deduction from the fact that Germany has allowed the war to drag on without any determined attack by air or land in the war in the west and has failed to follow repeated threats with action.

Papers Support View

They buttress their deduction with the argument that if the army were prepared to fight a war in the west they would never have allowed the French to mobilize and the British expeditionary force to pass safely to France.

In the last few days reports in British papers have presented virtually the same school of thought. They say:

The German army never wanted to fight war on the Western Front and told Hitler so. In reply Hitler said he was not asking them to and ordered them into Poland.

At first it looked as though he was completely right because the Allies could not help Poland, but later the German generals found themselves settled down to positional warfare with the power of the British navy behind it. They have now gone to Hitler and said in effect, "Now look what we are in for."

As a result Hitler is confined at sea and is acting like a "caged beast."

Just how much is behind all this smoke remains to be seen, but it is true that there have been reports lately of a good deal of optimism in the war cabinet.

No Crackup Forecast

Some of these reports have gone so far as to quote Viscount Halifax, secretary of state for foreign affairs, as saying the war would be over before Christmas, and another report is that some foreign office officials have been talking about going to the Grand National at the end of March.

If history of the last few weeks repeats itself, the present boomlet in cautious optimism probably will be followed by stern semiofficial warnings of what lies ahead.

Those who say there is dissension between the German high command and the Nazis do not necessarily claim that this means the hoped-for

Nazi Navy Aids Russian Economic Blockade of Finns

By the United Press

Paris, Nov. 17.—German submarines and warships have arrived in the Gulf of Finland, the newspaper Paris Soir reported tonight, to aid Russia in setting up an economic blockade of Finland because of the latter's refusal to grant Russia's military and territorial demands.

The German naval units were sent, the dispatch said, under an agreement between Germany and Russia on zones of influence in the Baltic.

Russia asked the German warships to halt Finnish sea-borne exports because the German vessels could use their belligerent status.

The Paris Soir's dispatch, dated "The German Frontier," said that four Nazi U-boats, two destroyers and five torpedo boats were in the Gulf of Finland and were based at Russia's Kronstadt naval base.

France, Britain Pool Finances In New Economic Alliance

Purchasing Power Is Merged, With Aim to Get as Much as Possible From Each Other Before Buying From Any Other Nation

By Raymond Daniell

London, Nov. 17.—Great Britain and France perfected their alliance today at a meeting of the supreme war council here, by extending it from military and diplomatic fields into the realm of economics.

In an unwitnessed ceremony at 10 Downing street, the two countries agreed that they would pool their purchasing potentialities to avoid competition in the neutral markets, but that if there were any privations in store for either, each would share them.

It was the third meeting of the council, and the second to be held in England.

Chamberlain Is Host

Today's meeting, which found Prime Minister Chamberlain playing host with his gouty foot propped on a chair, was held in this fog-enshrouded center of the empire while enemy planes drew fire from antiaircraft batteries in the hinterland. German planes flew over the Shetland Islands, Lancashire, Cheshire and North Wales, but were driven off.

French Premier Daladier headed a group of French delegates here to follow up the discussion of French Minister of Finance Reynaud and British Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon. Others who attended were Charles Corbin, Gen. Gamelin, Admiral Darlan, Gen. Vuillemin, embassy officials, and their military and naval aides. British representatives included the secretary of state for foreign affairs, Viscount Halifax; minister for coordination and defense, Lord Chatfield; air minister, Sir Kingsley Wood; Sir Cyril Newall, Sir Edward Bridges, Gen. Ismay, Sir Alexander Cadogan, Sir Edmund Ironside, Sir Dudley Pound, and other military and civil officials.

After the discussions, all were guests at a luncheon given at a hotel by the premier. The French delegation went home after the luncheon.

After the departure of the French delegation, which crossed the Channel by steamer instead of by air, a communique was issued setting forth details of the agreement.

Nearby Troops Streamlined as Division Nuclei

Maryland, Virginia Units May Be Cores Of Two Mobile Groups

By John G. Norris.
Post Staff Writer

Army officials disclosed yesterday that troops of the Third Corps Area have been reorganized to fit many units into the new streamline divisional plan.

Left out of the first five new infantry divisions now concentrated in the South or Northwest for mass maneuvers, Maryland and Virginia troops have been rearranged so that their infantry and supporting units conform to the new setup. With other regiments some of the nearby units will become the nuclei of additional divisions the Army hopes to form this winter.

Under plans to ask Congress in January to enlarge the Army to 280,000 men, four additional infantry divisions would be created and continuous mass training authorized. If these plans are approved, the units from nearby posts may be expected to form part of the core of one or two new divisions and be moved south next spring for large scale war games designed to whip the new units into a well-knit fighting machine.

Plans for the new divisions and Southern maneuvers are incomplete and it is not yet decided which regiments will go into the new divisions. The Thirty-fourth Infantry at Fort Meade, Md., probably will be assigned to the new units, officials said, while assignment of the Signs Indicate Nazis to Take Offensive Soon

Ferocious Air Attack In Hope of Speedy Victory Is Expected

By P. J. Philip

Paris, Nov. 17.—The long-awaited German offensive will begin very soon, it was indicated today by adding together all the available military signs.

This conclusion is based first on signs that Hitler's "patience" is becoming exhausted. His technique has always been the same and is being repeated.

There was first the relative coldness, both in manner and matter, of the Fuehrer's reply to the Dutch and the Belgian sovereigns' offer to mediate peace.

There was, secondly, the reported feverish activity at the chancellery in Berlin.

There was the mounting fury of the press against England, with side thrusts at neutral countries, a. the third phase.

All German newspapers today display "destruction" in their references to the British Empire. An official spokesman, speaking to neutral correspondents, insisted the time is now past for hesitation and patience.

The Dutch and other neutral correspondents have reported to their newspapers that the Fuehrer has been insisting on an offensive by land, sea and air, but that he has met with opposition among his generals, especially on the violation of Holland and Belgium. But Hit-

Other Nations Besides Finland Pay Their Debts in America

By Felix Cotten.

Despite contrary statements, there are several European governments besides Finland that pay their debts.

The Finns should make room for Norway, Denmark, the Irish Free State, Sweden, Holland and Switzerland. These countries, while not among those receiving United States Government loans, either owe United States citizens and are paying, or have paid their debts. Sweden, Holland and Switzerland have owed substantial amounts and have paid up. So far as Commerce Department records show, Spain and Portugal have not borrowed.

The inference that no other European government pays its debts has been resented, with the usual reservations, over diplomatic teacups in Washington. There is no desire to deprive Finland of credit, but representatives of other debt-paying governments would like to keep the record straight.

It is recognized that with Finland's independence threatened by Russia, her straightforward way of dealing with the United States Government will shine. The effect is to make others in the banner class wish they were on the war debt list, too.

Finland, according to Commerce Department records, is a through-and-through debt-paying country. There is not a single Finnish dollar debt, either government, municipal or private not being serviced. But the same is equally true of Norway and Denmark, and the debts of these countries are much larger.

The Irish are second to none in honoring their debts. In their case, there are no municipal or private dollar debts. The Irish Free State borrowed $15,000,000 in this country in 1927 and at the close of 1938, had reduced the amount, by retirements and conversion into sterling, to $400,000.

Repression in Prague

By Percival Knauth,
Copyright by New York Times.

Prague, Nov. 17.—Nine Czech students, charged with being ring leaders in the recent anti-German demonstrations, were stood against a wall and shot by Schutzstaffel troops today.

The Czech University at Prague which was occupied by armed S. S. troops during the night was ordered closed for three years.

It was stated that the Czech students had repeatedly disregarded warning placarded throughout the city that violation of ordinances for the preservation of law and order was considered as sabotage of the Reich's interests.

The demonstrations by students last Wednesday after they had received news of the death of one of their number in prison, culminated in a series of outbreaks, which were allegedly traced to the slain students.

Night One of Terror

The executions followed a night of terror. Late last night Schutzstaffel troops occupied the Czech university buildings, posted guards outside its doors and began a round-up of students which netted 900 arrests.

The Czech police were detailed to watch Czech newspaper offices which were suspected of being frequented by those who were held responsible for the riots.

This morning three regiments of Schutzstaffelers, "Germania Standarte," "Deutschland Standarte" and "Fuehrer Standarte," began to march into town and for hours kept all traffic tied up while citizens watched and wondered. The motorized troops were completely outfitted for war. They came ostensibly as replacements for the former garrison of the "Adolf Hitler Garde," which departed a few days ago, but in numbers they far exceeded the troops they replaced.

It is estimated that the Schutzstaffel garrison now numbers about 10,000 men.

Their entry into the city in many respects is reminiscent of last March when the first German soldiers drove into the town.

More arrests followed during the day, and it is estimated tonight that 2,000 students were rounded up, and about 800 later released.

The city remained quiet throughout the day. The news of the executions caused no further demonstrations or violence.

Builders Paint Rosy 1940 Trade Picture

Labor Chief Tells Parley Here of Plan To Curb Stoppages

By John B. Oakes,

A rosy picture of business prospects for next year was painted yesterday by speakers at the closing sessions of the Construction Industry Conference held at the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Necessity of holding down building costs and of keeping this country out of war was stressed by leaders of the industry, while governmental agencies, ranging from the FBI to WPA, came in for their share of criticism.

A new and successful method of eliminating jurisdictional disputes among building unions was described to the 300 conferees by John Coyne, president of the A. F. of L.'s building and construction trades department.

Coyne said that the plan, developed through cooperation of the Associated General Contractors and the A. F. of L., requires "no stoppage of work" when a dispute arises. He said it has "reduced requests for decisions about 90 per cent in the 45 days since it has been effective, and in the future, if the plan continues, it will entirely eliminate the jurisdictional dispute hazard in the building and construction industry."

7 Per Cent Building Gain Seen

A 7 per cent increase in total construction volume over 1939 was forecast for 1940 by Thomas S. Holden, vice president of the F. W. Dodge Corporation, statistical organization for the building industry.

Asserting that "the menace of rapidly rising construction costs seem to be allayed," Holden predicted that private construction will jump 11½ per cent and public construction, 1 per cent.

"It looks very much as though general business and industrial activity, employment, and national income would average substatially higher in 1940 than in 1939," he said, although he mentioned "the possibility of a temporary setback in the early months of next year."

Holden predicted "a modified PWA program" would be approved by Congress to supplement defense measures, but he said the Federal-aid highway and the USHA programs would "carry over in a large way."

Baker Assails F. B. I.

Clyde Shute, manager of F. W. Dodge's statistical department, said that "better business conditions were due for this fall and probably for next year, regardless of the war stimulus."

Principal attack on governmental policies came from Melvin H. Baker, president of the National Gypsum Co., of Buffalo, N. Y. Although he, too, predicted that "building for 1940 will be comfortably in excess of that for 1939," he stated that "this industry must face the problem of attracting to it new capital."

As a "deterring element" in the construction business, he denounced "acts of the Government in spying on industry, penalizing the whole industry for the evils of a few, such as is now being done by the Federal Bureau of Investigation in the building field."

Baker mentioned "direct Government competition in the building field through its many bureaus, such as WPA, USHA, utilities and others too numerous to mention."

He said other "deterring elements" were on securing new capital, as now provided under regulations of the Securities and Exchange Commission;" "the whole method of taxation by State and Federal Government for reform instead of for income;" and "the present capital gain and loss tax, which acts to discourage shift of capital from present investments to provide cash for new ventures in the building field."

Fears Effect of War

Pointing out that "we have here a potential annual business of about $10,000,000,000, including construction, furnishings and equipment," Baker warned that the war might bring "a grave danger of curtailment through too rapid increase in cost."

With the assertion that labor accounts for "a round 65 per cent of present building costs," he urged labor leaders to curb "jurisdictional disputes arising from the arbitrary attitude of the building crafts."

"Now is the most propitious time in the last decade for plant modernization," said Stuart M. Crocker, vice president of the International General Electric Co. "Caution advises us to give first consideration to producing more out of our present plants and not to increasing our productive facilities," he added.

William A. Clarke, member of the board of governors, Mortgage Bankers Association of America, said that the Federal Housing Administration "made a mistake" in reducing interest rates from 5 to 4½ per cent last summer. He said that "further FHA reductions would drive many investors out of the mortgage market." Clarke said he looked forward "to good times for builders of houses."

Apprentice Policy Given

In a discussion of apprentice training, Douglas Whitlock, general counsel of the Structural Clay Products Institute, quoted Henry C. Bates, president of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union, as saying: "We will continue our liberal policy of apprenticeship for young men, but we will refuse to recruit from the half-baked workers turned out by the WPA, or boys who are taught part of a trade by any system of so-called vocational training."

Analysts for the chamber of commerce predicted yesterday that construction activity in the United States, including maintenance and work relief, would reach $9,500,000,000 for 1939—$500,000,000 more than last year, and that the average for the next "several years" would be kept at $10,000,000,000 to $12,000,000,000."

Business Approaching Capacity in Many Lines, Report Indicates

The Federal Reserve Board indicated last night that American industrial production is close to the peak of 1929.

A board statement, while giving no definite figure, said that in the first half of November "industrial activity increased further" from the 120 index rating of October. This would place the November figure close to the 125 reached by the index in the prosperous early part of 1929. The board will not give a definite estimate for a few weeks yet.

The November advance, the board said, was "less rapid than in earlier months" because production in many industries was approaching capacity. In October, for instance, the board's production index jumped from 111 to 120.

The rapidity of the advance has worried some economists who fear that production may outrace consumption and force factories to slow down next spring while consumption catches up.

Most of the report referred to earlier months in which, the board said, "reports from leading industrial States indicate that factory employment and pay rolls increased sharply between the middle of September and the middle of October. Increases were particularly large at steel mills and related industries. There was also a considerable increase in employment on the railroads in October."

Retail distribution, the board said, gained about the usual seasonal amount in October, but "in the early part of November, department store sales increased considerably."

Corcoran Art Sales Are Brisk

Alumni of the Corcoran School of Art who are selling paintings and sculptures at an exhibition at the Corcoran Gallery are finding men make better customers than their wives, Richard Lahey, principal of the school, reported yesterday.

The show will continue through Thanksgiving Day.

Harter Opposes CCC Army Training

Representatives Harter (Democrat), of Ohio, yesterday declared his opposition to proposals for military training in Civilian Conservation Corps camps.

Harter, a member of the House Military Committee, described the plan as "discriminatory" and tending to destroy democracy because members of the CCC "come from relief families and there is no reason why the sons of the poor should be called upon first to do military duty."

McNutt Guest Of New Dealers

reported over Peters' running for Governor.

With McNutt being drummed through the hustings by his organization chairman, Frank M. McHale; with Garner forces militantly organizing to get the nomination for their candidate; and with Senator Wheeler, of Montana, Democratic dark horse, launched on a speechmaking campaign, Democratic politics were beginning to pick up in this latest of all campaign starts.

Meanwhile there was an energizing stir in Republican ranks, as New York District Attorney Dewey prepared to follow on the stump the early hat flingings of Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, and Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire.

Dewey, who leads all other G. O. P. prospects in popularity polls, is expected to speak out for the first time on national issues in the first of a series of speeches, tentatively scheduled in Minneapolis December 6. His initial invitation was extended by the Minnesota Republican State central committee. Follow-up speeches will be made in St. Louis and other cities, but no dates have been set.

Although close political associates of Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, have urged him to take an active role on the stump, the Michigan Senator (second to Dewey in the polls), to date has no speeches scheduled before February, when he will make Lincoln Day addresses in Detroit and St. Paul. Vandenberg's campaign has been largely to organization work and letter writing by Howard Lawrence, former Michigan State Republican chairman, and head of the Michigan Vandenberg movement. Vandenberg, like Dewey, is as yet unannounced as a candidate.

McNutt Maps Speech Tour

McNutt himself is outlining a speechmaking itinerary to follow his Hyde Park appearance, but his remarks as Federal Security Administrator may shy clear of politics.

New Dealers attending the private Cosmos Club affair are said to have gained the impression from McNutt's remarks that he was 100 per cent for the Roosevelt theories of Government. A reported motive for the dinner was to convince some extreme New Dealers that McNutt wasn't as conservative as painted.

Steers Middle Course

Businessmen attending a recent meeting of the Commerce Department's Business Advisory Council likewise were reported well satisfied by remarks made by McNutt in a lengthy talk before the business group. Some of his speeches have steered a guarded course between both right and left extremes. In one public address he called for "statesmanship which can successfully withstand the temptation to withdraw completely from the field of economic regulation and at the same time resist the pressure to regiment and restrict the economic activities of the Nation in a single pattern."

Moving spirit behind the Cosmos Club private dinner was said to be Fowler Harper, former dean of the Indiana University law school, and now general counsel here in the Federal Security Agency. He received some New Deal help in arranging his guest list.

Mexico Urges Credit Backing For Americas

Proposes Financial Institution to Stabilize Currencies

By the Associated Press

Guatemala City, Nov. 17.—Mexico's proposal to create a financial institution to stabilize currencies of American republics through credit extensions brought the first debate today among committees of the Pan American Treasury Conference.

The monetary and exchange committees held a joint meeting on the issue, with members of the banking committee sitting in as observers, but the issue was referred to Eduardo Villasenor, Mexican undersecretary of finance, for a compromise resolution.

Mexico proposed to extend credits to Latin-American republics for investments in industrial and agricultural development.

The monetary committee, which approved the proposal last Wednesday after the banking group had voted to reject its consideration by the conference, worked to bring the isue before the plenary session.

Informed sources said the United States delegates took the position that the proposal had merit but "all of us are not competent to pass on such a complicated and far-reaching proposition and should defer consideration here to make some arrangement for a complete study by a committee of experts."

The treasury committee approved a proposal to establish quotations on all American currencies directly in terms of each other, instead of in terms of the pound or the dollar.

Welles Made Chairman

By the Associated Press

A subcommittee of the Inter-American Economic Committee elected Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles yesterday as its chairman.

The same subcommittee, appointed to study problems involving monetary and financial relationships among the American republics, chose Dr. Esteban Jaramillo, of Colombia, as its reporter.

Dr. Leon de Bayle, Minister of Nicaragua, was named chairman and Dr. Gustavo Herrera, of Venezuela, reporter of the subcommittee on commerce, transportation and communications.

Ambassador Augusto Boyd, of Panama, was elected chairman and Dr. Julian Caceres, Minister of Honduras, reporter of the subcommittee on problems of "individual and urgent character."

Tuberculosis Association Elects Finucane, Coulter

Dr. Daniel E. Finucane, superintendent of Glenn Dale Tuberculosis Sanitarium, and Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director of the tuberculosis bureau of the District Health Department, were elected yesterday to the board of directors of the District Tuberculosis Association. The board met at 1022 Eleventh street northwest.

The board voted $1,000 toward continuance of research in the cause and treatment of tuberculosis under direction of the medical research committee of the National Tuberculosis Association.

Funds for extended X-ray examinations in cooperation with the Health Department were voted. Beginning November 27, examinations will include 4,500 senior high school students, 50 Miner and Wilson teachers and 800 students, 1,106 members of the NYA, 60 members of the Police Boys Clubs, 500 seniors in parochial high schools and 200 employes of the American Automobile Association.

'Evil' Texas Editors Discuss Best Ways to Help Garner 'Sin'

By the Associated Press

Dallas, Nov. 17.—Spittoons were placed 40 feet away from tobacco chewers and snuff dippers as a bunch of "evil old men and wicked old women" toasted Vice President Garner with milk.

But don't be misled by the milk in their goblets, it was no namby-pamby affair.

The vile occasion was "dedicated to sin and corruption by the friends of John N. Garner, of Texas, Vice President of the United States of America."

If it smacked of decency or of law and order "such incident or incidents were purely coincidental and had no reference to nice persons, living or dead," the bunch roared after a few rounds of liquid.

The rowdies, members of the Texas Editorial Association and friends of the Vice President for 20 years, started "sinning" precisely at 7:30 p. m. last night.

The dinner was inspired by a remark made by C. I. O. President John L. Lewis. He called Garner "a poker-playing, whisky-drinking, evil old man."

Garner wasn't there. He was down in the brush country banging at deer.

Through fire and brimstone and scorching milk cocktails, the old-timers waded. Then they emerged in a political field of daffodils, convinced the Democrats will nominate Garner in 1940 and elect him President.

They parked their barlow knives, brass knuckles and six guns at the door. Only six aces were allowed in each poker game. An early check of the morgue revealed nobody dug up a seventh during the night.

The program of misdeeds included a round-table discussion of the "Best Ways to Sin."

The "evildoers" gobbled up "wicked Texas grapefruit, repulsive celery hearts, corrupt olives, unwholesome Texas turkey, calamitous pickled peaches, pernicious cranberry sauce, depraved lettuce, worthless French dressing, baleful ice cream and cake and sinful rolls and butter—a meal that would make any ordinary bad man sick.

Some literate man among them went back to Milton for a slogan: "Evil which our misdeeds have wrought."

G.M., Affiliates Fined $5,000 Each by U. S.

Four Corporations, With Officials Cleared, Plead They're 'Ghosts'

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 17.—General Motors Corporation and three affiliates convicted with it of violating the anti-trust act were fined $5,000 each today by Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley.

Judge Lindley imposed the fines after overruling motions for a new trial and arrest of judgement.

John Thomas Smith, New York attorney for the corporation, was granted 90 days to file exceptions on which an appeal may be made to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago.

The trial judge assessed half the prosecution costs — estimated by Government attorneys at approximately $100,000—against General Motors, and the remaining half against General Motors Sales Corporation, one of the affiliates convicted. The others convicted are General Motors Acceptance Corporation and General Motors Acceptance Corporation of Indiana.

No "Flesh and Blood"

The jury's split verdict, convicting the four corporations of violating the Sherman act by forcing dealers to place instalment financing of automobile sales with G. M. A. C. but acquitting 17 officials who were individual defendants, was returned last night.

Smith, arguing the motion for arrest of judgment, asserted that the individuals and the corporations were charged with conspiring to volate the anti-trust law.

The acquittal of the individuals, Smith said, "has taken the flesh and blood out of this conspiracy."

"The corpus delicti in this alleged crime has vanished by the acquittal of these individuals," Smith continued. "Thus the ghosts that are left should not be sentenced."

Verdict Called "Anomalous"

But Judge Lindley said he would not "sustain any claim that the acquittal of the individuals destroyed the conviction of the corporations."

At Washington a Justice Department official termed the verdict "anomalous" but added that there was considerable satisfaction in the department over the trial's outcome.

Justice Departement officials were of the opinion that the verdict would have no effect on consent decrees signed by the Ford Motor Co. and the Chrysler Corporation who, with their affiliates, had been indicted on similar charges.

Ford and Chrysler under consent decrees signed here by Federal Judge Thomas W. Slick November 15, 1938, agreed to discontinue the practices complained of, with a proviso, however, that the decrees would become inoperative if General Motors was not brought under a similar decree by January 1, 1941.

Speech Reaction Amuses President

months ago Finland was after a loan to build a railway and was referred to banks.

There was no news story in the conference last week between Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands and United States Minister George A. Gordon.

The metacentric height of some naval vessels was too great, but the condition has been corrected and the ships no longer are top-heavy.

Mr. Roosevelt did little to clarify the Jefferson Memorial remark today. He merely tossed back his head, clapped a hand on his knee and laughed uproariously when reporters observed that there had been some speculation about what he meant.

With the exuberance of a schoolboy who had "got by" with a prank, he said he deliberately had thrown in the sentence about 1941 and that everybody bit.

Then, exaggerating a bit for emphasis, he added that he had expressed the perfectly terrific thought that he hoped he would be able to go back to the dedication in January, 1941.

And, glancing at the reporters, he remarked with a chuckle that "all you fellows—oh, you have been having an awful time since."

A reporter's statement that Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, had suggested Congressional investigation of faulty ship design started the President on a lengthy discussion. He said that he did not know what metacentric height was, but that the Navy always told him it was different from the center of gravity.

At any rate, he said, when some ships were designed and the plans drawn, some naval architects and engineers both in Federal and private employment felt the metacentric height was too high. Eventual tests of some of the earlier ships, following the addition of more weight, because of new designs and inventions, showed this height was too great. But the height since has been lowered.

That is all there is to it, Mr. Roosevelt said.

Transamerica Cases to Be Pressed by SEC

Murphy Discloses Program for Action Is Being Formed

The Securities and Exchange Commission announced flatly yesterday that it would proceed "in regular order" with three major proceedings against Transamerica Corporation, big California bank holding company, and the Giannini interests.

The announcement followed a statement by Attorney General Murphy at a press conference that conferences had been held concerning the Government's difficulties with the Giannini banking empire with the view to formulation of a "program."

The SEC attempted to clarify the Attorney General's statement, which was interpreted by some as indicating that the entire Giannini controversy might be settled out of court. Murphy had said plainly, however, that the "program" did not contemplate an out-of-court settlement.

At no time, the commission said, has it discussed with either the Justice or Treasury Departments settlement of the following proceedings:

The action before the commission to determine whether the stock of Transamerica should be delisted from stock exchanges because of "false and misleading statements" filed with the commission.

The action before the commission to determine whether to revoke or suspend the registration of Walston & Co., as a brokerage house and its membership on stock exchanges as a result of charges that it failed to reveal to the SEC its connection with Giannini interests.

The injunction suit against Timetrust, Inc., in which the commission accused A. P. Giannini and other Bank of American officials of engaging in a fraudulent scheme to sell stock of the bank to "unwary" persons under the guise of an investment plan "similar to a saving bank account."

The commission said Murphy's explanation of conference between the Justice and Treasury Departments and SEC over the Giannini difficulties apparently had been misunderstood. The announcement was issued, it was learned, after commission members had consulted with Murphy following the latter's press conference.

Murphy had said that Treasury and SEC officials had discussed at his office the Transamerica and other Giannini cases in order that each agency could understand what the other was trying to do. The object, he explained, was to work out a unified program.

Asked about the possibility of settlement, he said any arrangement would have to be on the basis of complying with the law and the regulatory procedure of the SEC and the office of Comptroller of the Currency, which has supervision over national banks.

The Justice Department, he said, is "interested in some phases" of the matter. He did not amplify this statement.

Murphy said he had talked Thursday with A. P. Giannini and his son, L. Mario Giannini, president of Bank of America. The Gianninis, he said, also had conferred with officials of the Treasury, of which the comptroller's office is a part.

He said the Giannini proceedings involved the interests of many depositors and stockholders and care would have to be exercised "to protect the interests of the general public."

Justice Department interevention in the battle between the SEC and the comptroller's office and the Giannini interests has been discussed from time to time. Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold and SEC counsel, in a brief filed with the District Court of Appeals last March, said information obtained in the stock delisting action against Transamerica "may yet lead to criminal prosecution."

It has been reported, however, that the Administration, confronted with a bitterly fought Presidential campaign next year, was soft-pedaling the "criminal prosecution" aspects of the case.

Expects "Understanding"

San Francisco, Nov. 17 (AP).—L. M. Giannini, president of the Bank of America, issued a statement today saying he thought conversations with Washington officials would promote a "better understanding" between the Administration and Giannini groups.

Asked about the talk he and his father, A. P. Giannini, had with Attorney General Murphy, the bank head commented:

"We saw the Attorney General yesterday and had a friendly discussion with him to clarify the issues. We feel that out of the conferences will come a better understanding."

Roosevelt Kin Named To Study P. and R. Co.

Philadelphia, Nov. 17 (AP).—Federal Judge William M. Kirkpatrick has named Nicholas G. Roosevelt, a distant cousin of the President, as special examiner for an investigation of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co., which is seeking reorganization under the bankruptcy laws.

Naming an examiner was at instance of the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission. It sought an explanation of why the company assertedly has lost upward of $65,000,000 in the last ten years.

4 Convicted In District Bank Robbery

Georgia Avenue Institution Looted Seven Years Ago

The first trial for bank robbery in the District ended yesterday with the conviction of four New York men for the robbery of the Washington Mechanics Savings Bank, 3608 Georgia avenue northwest, seven years ago. Justice Gordon will sentence them after the 10 days in which they may ask for new trials.

Facing prison terms of 3 to 15 years are James Foley, 49, Samuel Rubin, 46, James Flynn, 35 and Barney Neufield, 45. All have just completed seven-year terms in New York prisons for robbery.

Half Hour for Verdict

The men stood expressionless before Justice Gordon while the 10 men and two women jurors returned their verdict after half an hour's deliberation. Foley broke into a grim smile as "guilty" was repeated after the name of each defendant. He was smiling when led to jail.

Several times men ha been accused of bank robbery here, but the prosecutions have ended in guilty pleas.

The bank has been merged with the City Bank. The accused men were not brought to trial until now because they were held by New York authorities.

District Attorney Pine attended court to see the prosecution closed by Assistant District Attorney Tarver, who covered the robbery as a newspaper reporter. After the verdict, Pine congratulated him for skillful handling of the prosecution.

Detective Sergt. Frank O. Bass was in court, ready to arrest Neufield and Foley upon a warrant issued by Philadelphia authorities. The two were indicted in Philadelphia for robbing the City National Bank and Trust Co. of $37,000 in 1931.

The Georgia avenue bank was robbed by five men. The fifth man, Spencer Walden, long ago pleaded guilty and is serving a 13-to-15-year sentence in Alcatraz Penitentiary.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Friday Morning Music Club presents Sylvia Meyer, harpist, in Barker Hall. Assisting artists: Quinta Jensen Frey, piano, and Ralph Hersh, viola. Program: Impromptu (Faure), On Donkey-Back (Salzedo), Pirouetting Music Box (Salzedo), Divertissement (Caplet), Introduction and Allegro (Ravel), Fantasy Sonata (Bax).

Beginning its fifty-fourth season, the Friday Morning Music Club paid honor yesterday to Sylvia Meyer, virtuosa harpist of the National Symphony Orchestra, by placing in her charge the program presented in Barker Hall for members and guests. This token of esteem is fully justified, not only by Miss Meyer's competent service with the orchestra since its inception, but also by her fine talent as a muscian. She is one of the best players of the harp before the public today, an artist in her work and an executant whose skill almost equals that of Carlos Salzedo, with whom she studied.

For her opening group, Miss Meyer chose two pieces by Salzedo, an impromptu by Gabriel Faure and a divertissement by Andre Caplet. Delightfully performed, these short numbers demonstrated the resources of the harp in tonal color. In the divertissement, the composer utilized some of the effects invented by Salzedo, who has made many valuable contributions to the technique of the instrument.

In the lovely "Introduction and Allegro," by Ravel, Miss Meyer was assisted at the piano by Quinta Jensen Frey, who was an able collaborator. This was the second performance given this work this week, for the original version was played Monday afternoon for the Washington Chamber Music Society by Miss Meyer, the Pro-Musica String Quartet, Albert Tipton, flautist, and Paul Garrett, clarinetist.

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Budapest String Quartet (Josef Roismann, Alexander Schneider, Boris Kroyt and Misha Schneider) in the Coolidge Auditorium Friday night. Quartet in E flat major, Op. 51 (Dvorak), Quartet in E minor (Smetana), Quartet in F major, Op. 22 (Chaikovski).

Again the Stradivarius instruments in the Gertrude Clarke Whittall collection in the Library of Congress emerged from their exhibition niches last evening for a concert in the hands of the Budapest String Quartet. Coolidge Auditorium was crammed to capacity, and other listeners filled the entrance corridor and the adjoining pavilion, for Josef Roismann, Alexander Schneider, Boris Kroyt and Miss Schneider are always welcomed with pleasure on their recurrent visits.

Anticipations of an enjoyable occasion were not disappointed by the musicians, who played with contagious verve a program entirely Slavic in origin. There was continuous zest in the performance and eloquence in the interpretation, while the technical excellence of the players was as admirable as the consentience of their readings.

They began with one of Dvorak's less frequently played quartets, the "Dumka" in E flat major, written in 1876 at the time when the composer was winning recognition through his devoted championship of Bohemian folk music. The work is ardent and impetuous, even in the slow Romanze which glows with the fire of poesy, and it abounds in melodic themes of an intense vitality. Its most endearing quality is the spontaneous naivete of expression, a fundamental trait in Dvorak's nature.

Smetana was represented by his E minor quartet, one of the most touching autobiographical documents in all the range of musical literature. Afflicted with the deafness which was the first sign of an approaching mental collapse, he wrote in tones both his reminiscences of past struggles and successes and his fears for the future with a simplicity that gave his revelations a perennial appeal.

The third quartet on the program was Chaikovski's F major, a work much richer in content than the popular D major. Not only are the thematic ideas more forceful, but there is more skill in rhythmic devices, such as the triplet figure that runs like an obsession through the Scherzo. Introspection is at a minimum, and the music has an extroverted quality.

1,400 Pupils Cheer Kindler and Symphony Till Rafters Ring at First Children's Concert

Western High Boys And Girls Delighted, Demand Encores

Fourteen hundred children shook the rafters of Western High School auditorium with their cheers yesterday afternoon, and then sat silent in rapt attention.

Their beloved maestro, Dr. Hans Kindler, and the National Symphony Orchestra had appeared before them in the first of the season's children's concerts, to prove that "music is a language."

Dr. Kindler started with Weber's "Oberon" overture, the language of fairies; and though none of the children would admit they believed in fairies, they understood the language and loved the music.

The audience was mostly drawn from grammar school grades, and for weeks before they had been prepared in their music appreciation classes for yesterday's concert. They had been tought the meaning of the music, and had heard the themes played over carefully, and they had been shown how to follow each theme through. They even had been told about the lives of the composers.

But to many of them it was their first symphony concert, and for the first time their imaginations played in the rich field of a perfect musical whole.

Dr. Kindler said little, rather to the children's disappointment. He reminded them at the beginning that their music classes had been the preparation for this moment; and later he described in a few words the picture Debussy painted in his tone-poem "Clouds."

The children didn't quite understand "Clouds," but they loved the William Tell Overture (by Rossini) and shouted their delight as they recognized the first few measures. And the comic and exciting "Hall of the Mountain King," from Grieg's Peer Gynt suite, brought such a roar of approval it had to be played again.

These were the best of the day, the children thought, but they also liked MacDowell's "To a Wild Rose," Tchaikowsky's "Slavic March," the "Dance of the Sylphs," by Berlioz, and Sylvia Meyer's two harp solos, "Behind the Barracks" and "Night Breezes" (by Carlos Salzedo). For an encore she gave them "On Donkey-Back," from the same group.

The concert will be repeated at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday at Roosevelt High School, and at the same time at Anacostia High School on November 28, Woodrow Wilson, November 29, and McKinley, December 1. The orchestra will play two other concerts in the series, which is planned with the cooperation of the Board of Education.

Maestro Hans Kindler, director of the National Symphony Orchestra, was the cynosure of youthful eyes as District school children heard the first concert of this year's students series, played at Western High School yesterday. Eugene Miller, Western freshman, and Alice Brunner, of the Grant School, sought his autograph after the concert. Lower—A rapt listener was Evelyn Mae Brown, of the Stoddard School, as Dr. Kindler's baton demanded their best of the musicians

U.D.C. Chooses Hibbard To Sculpture Davis

Charleston, S. C., Nov. 17 (AP).—Frederick Cleveland Hibbard, of Chicago, was chosen tonight as the sculptor for the Jefferson Davis Monument at Montgomery, Ala., by the general convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

The convention ended with the installation of Mrs. Charles E. Bolling, of Richmond, Va., president-general, and other new officers. The convention will meet next year in Montgomery.

Nude Revels Wrecked Her Home Life, Says Mrs. Pantages

'Didn't Have to Look, Did She?' Says Judge, as Counsel Accuses Husband Of Maintaining 'Vulgar' Environment

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Nov. 17.—Rodney Pantages' divorce hearing brought an attempt today at introduction of evidence that nude swimming parties were held on the Pantages estate and that Mrs. Pantages was forced to live "where these lewd and vulgar performances were going on constantly."

As defense counsel Clarence Conlin sought to bring this up, Superior Judge William Baird asked what relevancy it had. Conlin replied it would show an unfit atmosphere for his young client, but the judge came back:

"Mrs. Pantages didn't have to look at them, did she?"

"She had to live there—her husband was there—where could she go with a young baby?"

Judge Baird suggested she could have obtained redress in the courts and Conlin argued: "Maybe she loved her husband—maybe she wanted to stay with him."

"Maybe," observed the court.

There was no formal offer of evidence along that line immediately and no ruling on its admissibility.

Aurelio Briones, former houseboy at the Pantages home, testified earlier that while Mrs. Pantages was on Catalina Island in 1937 he found lipstick and hairpins in Pantages' bedroom. Briones said the lipstick was not the kind Mrs. Pantages used.

Each accuses the other of infidelity, and each is asking a divorce.

Conlin attempted to show through questioning of Pantages that a $500 loan Pantages made to the couple's former nursemaid had not been repaid.

Previous testimony was that the nursemaid, Geraldine Graham, told Pantages of an affair between Mrs. Pantages and a Palm Springs bartender, Pete Bedwell. Miss Graham was dismissed last May 1.

Pantages testified yesterday he paid her $50 for a trip to San Jose, loaned her $500 on her home and that repayments on the loan had been deducted from her salary. Defense counsel produced several pay checks today and elicited testimony from Pantages that there had been no deductions from them.

Booze and Seltzer Definitely Don't Mix in the Court

Booze and seltzer may be perfect companions in a glass but they were unfriendly before Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran yesterday.

Booze, Lloyd A., colored, 23, was the defendant. Seltzer, Abraham, proprietor of a grocery store at 1418 Twelfth street northwest, was the plaintiff.

Seltzer was robbed Monday of $80 by a colored man. Booze, apparently irked by unfair press notices, stalked into the Second precinct the next morning with a clipping in his hand.

"Eighty dollars," he rebuked. "I'm the man that done it and I only got $6.75." Police charged him with the robbery. Booze went to jail in lieu of $2,500 bail while held for grand jury action.

High Requiem Mass Said for Justice Butler

Family Accompanies Body to St. Paul, Minn., for Burial

High requiem mass for Associate Justice Pierce Butler, of the United States Supreme Court, was celebrated in St. Matthew's Cathedral yesterday by Mgr. Edward J. Buckey, pastor of St. Matthew's.

Chief Justice Hughes, the seven active Associate Justices and two retired Associate Justices, two cabinet members, and a number of Catholic bishops and archbishops attended. Inside the cathedral and outside on the street a throng stood with bowed heads in homage to the late jurist.

Justice Butler died Thursday in Garfield Hospital at 73, after 16 years on the Supreme Court beach. His body was sent to St. Paul, Minn., his birthplace, for burial. It was accompanied by his family.

Justices Attend

The bier was borne into the cathedral by six members of the Supreme Court Building's special police, headed by Capt. Phil Crook. The active justices, and retired Justices Van Devanter and Sutherland, formed an aisle between the crowd on the cathedral steps, and followed the bier into the church. Mrs. Butler, in a deep mouring veil, entered on the arm of her eldest son, Pierce Butler, jr. Red roses and green ferns adorned the black casket as it lay before the high altar.

Within the sanctuary in their red and purple cassocks sat Archbishops Glennon, of St. Louis, and Murray, of St. Paul; Bishops Armstrong, of Sacramento; Boyle, of Pittsburgh, and Kelly, of Oklahoma City; the Right Rev. Mgr. Patrick J. McCormick, vice rector of Catholic University, and the Rev. Dr. Edmund Walsh, S. J., regent of the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service.

In the congregation were Attorney General Frank Murphy and Postmaster General James A. Farley, Capt. Daniel Callaghan, naval aide to the President; Mrs. William Howard Taft, widow of the President and Chief Justice, and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson, and Circuit Court Judge Parker, of Charlotte, N. C.

Bar Represented

Representing the American Bar Association were Frank J. Hogan, Robert N. Miller, Henry I. Quinn, George Maurice Morris and William P. MacCracken. The District Bar Association was represented by the same group and Robert F. Cogswell.

Chief Justice Hughes appointed the three senior members of the court, Associate Justices James C. McReynolds, Harlan F. Stone and Owen J. Roberts, to represent the court at the services at St. Paul.

With the Supreme Court in recess until Wednesday, the three senior associate justices, James C. McReynolds, Harlan F. Stone and Owen J. Roberts, accompanied the funeral party to St. Paul.

John L. Laskey Named Assistant District Attorney

District Attorney Pine yesterday announced the appointment of John L. Laskey, 28-year-old native of Washington, as an assistant in the civilian division of the prosecutor's office, which is directed by Assistant District Attorney Fihelly, chief of division.

LASKEY

The new deputy prosecutor is the son of John E. Laskey, who was district attorney here in the Administration of President Wilson. Since being admitted to the bar in 1935 Laskey has been associated with his father in the practice of law.

Laskey attended Western High School, the University of Michigan and Georgetown University, where he was graduated in law in 1935. He received the master of laws degree from Georgetown in 1936. He lives at 108 West Underwood street, Chevy Chase.

A.A.A. Rejects Ickes Plea to Limit Trucks

Returns to Committee Model Bill to Aid Traffic on Week-ends

The American Automobile Association yesterday accepted Secretary of the Interior Ickes' stand that motorists should pay for their enjoyment of national parks, but refused to support his proposal to keep trucks off the highways on week-ends.

In resolutions adopted at conclusion of the thirty-seventh annual convention, the association rescinded its 1937 stand against park admission fees and sent back to committee a proposed model bill to limit truck operations over week-ends in the peak travel situation.

This action followed a debate on the truck situation between John V. Lawrence, general manager of the American Trucking Association, and R. W. Peterson, chairman of the Public Service Commission of Wisconsin. Lawrence derided Secretary Ickes' speech of Thursday as "a comic interlude," and pointed out that certain perishable commodities have to be moved constantly. Truckers have begun limiting week-end operations voluntarily, he said.

Truck Limit Supported

Peterson said Wisconsin's pioneer effort in limiting week-end trucking had benefited truckers as well as the general public, by introducing a five-day trucking week. He advocated administration of trucking laws by a commission, to make more flexible.

Other resolutions adopted called for a campaign against abuses in automobile financing and the fee-splitting system of paying enforcement officials; pledged support for land-acquisition programs for future highways; reiterated opposition against toll highways; approved speed zoning and lower speeds for night driving; demanded that police highway patrol cars should be marked, and urged a cooperative program to speed construction of the Pan-American and Alaskan highways.

The association sent back to committee a proposal to prevent the further spread of unsightliness along highways. The American Bar Association and the National Association of Judicial Councils were called upon to appoint a joint committee for the study of fee-splitting.

U. S. Roads Chief Talks

Speakers of the day included Frank E. Whittemore, of Akron, Ohio, who talked on "streamlining our highways;" Thomas H. MacDonald, commissioner of public roads, who called for a "national highway program as the objective of combined Federal, State and local efforts;" and Pyke Johnson, executive vice president of the Automobile Manufacturers' Association. Johnson stressed the importance of free competition in making it possible for the automobile industry to give the public the best service.

Edgar F. Zelle, of Minneapolis, Minn., spoke on bus transportation and Col. E. V. Rickenbacker, of New York, on the A. A. A. contests at the morning session.

Thomas P. Henry, of Detroit, Mich., was reelected president for his seventeenth term. The following were elected vice presidents: John H. Wright, Jamestown, N. Y., first; John R. Bentley, Cleveland, second; John A. Rupp, Allentown, Pa., third; Senator Reynolds, Asheville, N. C., fourth; Sam W. Burchiel, Providence, R. I., fifth Arthur H. Breed, Oakland, Calif., sixth, and Dai H. Lewis, Buffalo, seventh vice president. John L. Young, Cleveland, was elected secretary and Corcoran Thom of Washington, treasurer.

Rabbit Hunters Warned Of Tularemia Danger

Richmond, Va., Nov. 17 (AP).—Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, issued a warning today to exercise caution in handling rabbits, pointing out that Tularemia, sometimes called rabbit disease, is more prevalent in hunting season than at any other time.

Last year the State Health Department received reports of 144 Tularemia cases, of which 12 proved fatal.

Officials View New X-Ray Device

A new X-ray machine, which can picture the lungs of 1,000,000 men a month, was demonstrated yesterday before Federal medical officials meeting in the Veterans' Administration Building.

Representative Sirovich, of New York, a physician, declared the device to be "the most revolutionary patent I've ever seen in my life."

The machine, which prints on sensitized paper rather than glass plates, would save the country millions of dollars if used during mobilization, Sirovich asserted.

Frank T. Powers, inventor of the device, said it had only been perfected about a year ago.

Cayton Declares Poor Man's Court Serves Democracy

Expansion of a court system to serve the poor man means an expansion of democracy, Judge Nathan Cayton, of the District Municipal Court, last night told the Student Affiliate of the National Lawyers Guild at the Rochambeau Apartments.

Judge Cayton said the District Small Claims Court has tried almost 3,000 cases since its introduction in April, 1938.

He declared "the problem of the poor man in court has not been dealt with adequately. If a segment of the population finds that it has insufficient funds to get into court, we do not have truly democratic government."

Historian Fears Nazis Will Turn On Christians

Predicts Russians Will Persecute Jews Next; Fears World Disaster

By Howard W. Blakeslee

Philadelphia, Nov. 17.—Prediction that presently Germany may be expected to persecute Christians and Russia to persecute Jews was made to the American Philosophical Society today by Carlton J. H. Hayes, Columbia University history professor.

The society, oldest scientific body in America, devoted most of today's session to discussions of totalitarianism. Prof. Hayes defined how totalitarianism differs from all previous Government systems.

"In Russia," he said, "Christians and in Germany Jews are first gotten rid of. Presently it will be the turn of Christians in Germany and Jews in Russia, for if you are to erase the most constant memory of the western mind you have to destroy Judaeo-Christianity both in its roots and in its flowers."

Not One Well Educated

There always have been dictators, he said. But they came from good families, from good educational or military training. Now, he said, a new genus of dictator has arisen.

Mussolini's father, he said, was a blacksmith, Mussolini educated in a minor normal school, his career "that of an unsuccessful elementary school teacher and a second or third-rate journalist whose military service was brief and inconspicuous."

Stalin, he declared, was generated by a peasant shoemaker, dismissed from a theological seminary and further schooling at 17 and "self-trained in the strong-arms arts of highway robbery and factory disorder."

Adolf Hitler he described as son of a minor Austrian customs official, with a minimum of formal schooling, frustrated efforts at painting and drawing, and rank no higher than corporal in four years of World War.

Fears Terrible Cataclysm

"Not one of these world-shaking despots of our day," he went on, "comes from what we would deem respectable antecedents, not one of them was well educated, or had impressive military repute."

This he attributed to a fundamental new change in the masses of people. These masses count today as never before.

Totalitarianism which has come with this change, he said, is something entirely new in the world. It is the government taking over all regulation of all functions of living.

He warned, however, that the totalitarian dictatorship is not likely to end except through another and terrible cataclysm, and that a great international war is the biggest possible gamble in cataclysms.

Missing Fireman Found a Suicide

Carvel W. Hebb, 39, fireman attached to Engine Co. No. 28, was found dead in his car near Sharpsburg, Md., yesterday.

Hunters told police a hose led from the exhaust pipe into the car. Washington County Coroner S. R. Wells gave a verdict of suicide. Hebb, who had been with the Fire Department fifteen years, had been missing since early Friday morning, officials said.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Virginia Taylor Hebb, 3520 Connecticut avenue northwest, he leaves a daughter, Mrs. Floris H. Beard, of Hagerstown, Md.

Grange Hails Roosevelt Efforts to Keep Peace

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 17 (AP).—The National Grange expressed the conviction today that "only a blunder upon the part of the Government" could involve the United States in the European war.

A resolution, adopted unanimously by delegates to the farm organization's seventy-third annual convention, commended President Roosevelt and Congress for the announced determination to keep this country out of war. Adequate national defense measures were advocated.

rowing plan, the Treasury recently had the Reconstruction Finance Corporation sell $250,000,000 of its securities to private investors. It proved successful and the RFC retired an equal amount of its debentures held by the Treasury. The funds went into the Treasury's general fund. Another test was the recent sale of $50,000,000 in securities by the FHA to private investors.

Liquidation of outstanding loans by the RFC and other lending agencies also are a part of the plan. Payments of loans by borrowers are to be returned to the Treasury to help its cash till.

With the upturn in business, many banks and other concerns that have borrowed from Federal agencies have indicated a desire to retire their obligations, and this will be encouraged.

Cleveland, Nov. 17 (AP).—Senator Robert A. Taft (Republican), of Ohio, today suggested that Congress create a budget committee to police Federal expenditures.

Declaring "the fiscal policy of the Federal Government today is an insane policy," the avowed Republican Presidential candidate said "I believe a budget committee should be created to rewrite the so-called budget presented by the President."

He accused Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau of attempting to pass the buck to Congress on the "insane" policies.

Adams Favors Double Check

By the Associated Press

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, a member of the Appropriations Committee, disclosed yesterday that economy-minded legislators have discussed proposals to set up a group of independent experts to "double check" on the need for all departmental appropriations.

He said the preliminary outline of the proposal contemplated establishment of a joint Senate-House group similar to the Joint committee on Internal Revenue and Taxation. It would study appropriation needs, he said, in much the same manner as the revenue committee looks into tax requirements and reports to Congress.

Facing Operation, Deb Cuts Up At Cromwell Hamburger Party

Plebean Fare Served At Swank Philadelphia Roof-Garden Dance

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 17.—Philadelphia's orchid set stepped out tonight to taste the exclusive hamburger at a swanky downtown roof-garden party given by James H. R. Cromwell and his wife, Doris Duke, for an injured debutante's eighteenth birthday.

The deb, pretty Peggy Anne Huber, of suburban Bryn Mawr, got out of bed for the party. Afterwards, she planned to enter a hospital for a minor operation necessitated by a scalp injury received in an automobile accident a week ago.

An evening of dancing amid spunglass festoons and decorations of silver and white to match Miss Huber's bouffant costume of silk net with a hoopskirt, came before the hamburgers.

They were dished up at a typical roadside diner. It was rigged up on the roof in a setting of transplanted trees and hedges.

Philadelphia society hasn't been so agog since the Peter A. B. Wideners took over two floors of a hotel, invited 1,500 guests and paid out $100,000 two years ago for the coming-out party of Mrs. Widener's daughter, Joan Peabody.

The Cromwells—both well known for elaborate parties—invited only 250.

On the guest list were Mr. Cromwell's daughter by his first marriage, Miss Christine Cromwell, a close friend of Miss Huber; Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, Mr. Cromwell's mother, and Ernest L. Biddle, 20-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Livingston L. Biddle, of Bryn Mawr.

U. S. to Make Sure Capone's Reformed

his mental condition may be is something else. We must rely on what the doctors say, and they have told us that it is serious."

Dr. Moore issued a bulletin from the hospital last night, which said:

"The patient, Alphonse Capone, is chronically, not acutely, ill. His condition is not likely to change from day to day."

Attorney General Murphy said that no Federal agents were now guarding Capone, and in Baltimore the chief of police announced that he had withdrawn guards from the hospital.

Explaining why Federal guards accompanied Capone on the secret trip across the continent, Murphy said that it is often necessary to see to it that an outgoing prisoner suffering from a mental disease is institutionalized. In the case of Capone, he said, the Federal Government cooperated with the former gangster's family and arranged for his journey across the country to the hospital in Baltimore.

"When a person who may become a menace is being taken to an institution," sad Mr. Murphy, "it is in the public interest to make such arrangements."

Looking back on it, Murphy said that it might have been better not to have had so much secrecy. But Director of Prisons James Bennett, he said, had told him that the physician retained by the Capones threatened to withdraw if there were any publicity.

A United Press dispatch from Baltimore said that Capone was in good spirits and eager for treatment. His wife had a room adjoining his in his $30-a-day suite. His mother, sister and brother had quarters in a nearby hotel.

Said one hospital attache of Capone:

"He's tickled pink to be out of prison. But—he doesn't like to be kept in bed."

The gangster's illness served to concentrate interest on the weapon which medical science has to combat it—a weapon whose effectiveness is a matter of controversy. The malarial treatment, it was said, has been used effectively in some cases and failed in others.

Usually it is applied in this manner:

Five to 10 cubic centimeters of serum from a malarial sufferer is injected into the bloodstream of the patient. The culture incubates for two or four weeks, the time being dependent upon the type used and the resistance of the patient to it.

Success of the incubation is reflected by a fever which may reach 105 or 106 degrees. It requires three or four weeks for the fever to run its course, and during this time the patient is kept under constant observation.

When the fever subsides, samples of the patients blood and spinal fluid are tested to see whether spirochetes remain.

There are two schools of medical thought on the treatment. One group holds that the intense fever kills the spirochetes. The other contends that the heat merely stimulates the resistant processes within the patient's body and that the spirochetes are not destroyed.

Capone's brother, John, a slim, fashionably dressed Philadelphia businessman, told reporters that the fallen czar of Windy City gangdom would go to his Miami estate for a "long rest" after leaving the hospital.

He said stories that Capone fears gangland vengeance are based on an unjust assumption that he is guilty of a host of crimes. Actually, he said, the patient has been blamed for a myriad of things "he hasn't even heard of."

given an 11-year-old boy suddenly stricken blind.

By funds received from the Community Chest, the boy "did not have to leave his home to go to a school for the blind," Miss Plant said. He was able to continue his work with his normal class in a parochial school, she said.

"What About Your Boy"

He was encouraged to make his own way about the school to develop self-confidence and continued to write compositions and do arithmetic problems in longhand.

Miss Plants explained he was aided only by a Braille writer and student from the National Youth Administration, who read his lessons to him.

Emphasizing the importance of such assistance, she asked, "What would you do if your 11-year-old son received a blow on his head in a football game and went blind—totally and permanently blind—as a result?"

Chauncey G. Parker, general chairman of the drive, urged solicitors to "go out and get" pledges from the 75,000 contributors not yet reached and "to ask for increased gifts no matter how small the increase may be."

Raymond Leavitt reported the suburban unit has received 1,777 pledges for $17,017, or 32.73 per cent of the goal.

Advance gifts, Arthur Hellen, vice president of the Chest said, total 434 for $369,243, or 70.87 per cent of the unit quota.

The metropolitan unit has obtained 7,332 pledges for $135,312, or 67.3 per cent of the quota, Mrs. Maurice Bisgyer, a division chairman, reported.

Dr. Harold G. Moulton reported for the group coliciation unit that pledges had been received from 24,235 contributors for $255,240, or 56.34 per cent of the goal.

The Government unit, Mrs. Carrol Lee Stewart said, has obtained 83,265 pledges for $561,194, or 73.36 per cent of its quota.

Ten private schools, giving through the group solicitation unit, have turned in pledges for $2,138. Contributing were Holton Arms, Mount Vernon Seminary, Landon School, St. Albans School, Chevy Chase Junior College, Sidwell Friends School, Arlington Hall, Gunston Hall, National Cathedral School and Lewis Hotel Training School.

Guests at the speakers' table were Kenneth Berkely, John Dodge and Fred Shawn, of the National Broadcasting Co.; Miss Madeline Ensign, Mutual Broadcasting System; A. C. Willard, of Columbia Broadcasting System; Bruce Allen, vice chairman of public relations, Community Chest; Miss Mae Schnurr, chief of the public relations, Bureau of Reclamation, and Miss Helen Bonorden, chairman of a solicitation division in the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation. The Rev. Orris G. Robinson, pastor of Calvary Methodist Church, gave the invocation.

Dies Predicts Conviction Of 'Hundreds'

Foresees Punishment For Those Spreading 'Subversive Propaganda'

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 17.—Representative Dies, chairman of the Congressional committee investigating un-Americanism, predicted today that "there will be hundreds of indictments—and convictions—of persons who have violated the laws of this country in spreading subversive propaganda."

The Texas Congressman made this statement upon his arrival to resume, after a lapse of several weeks, an investigation of Communist, Fascist and Nazi activities in Chicago. Dies said the Department of Justice was working on indictments based on evidence produced in its own investigations and by the Dies committee.

He said these indictments would be based on violations of passport regulations, and mishandling of organization funds. He said he expected most of the indictments to be returned in New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, and on the West Coast, which he termed the "worst spot" in the Nation.

Alphonse Malachi, erstwhile member and former president of Local 347 of the Packinghouse Workers of America, a C. I. O. union, testified today at a hearing conducted by Dies.

Dies said Malachi's testimony was "vitally important" in relation to "communistic influence in the P. W. O. C.," but told reporters it would not be made public immediately.

Ben Strabrawa, who was identified as secretary-treasurer of the Packinghouse Workers Council, also testified. Dies announced Herbert March and Henry Johnson, officials of the P. W. O. C., would appear tomorrow.

Another witness was Renzo Sereno, who was listed as a research worker and student of Fascist activities.

Dies said he had "received some very important and far-reaching testimony with regard to Fascist activities and propaganda in the United States which concerns certain newspapers, organizations and individuals." An investigator reported later the newspapers were foreign language publications in Chicago and New York. He did not name them.

State Department To Confer With Soviet Envoy

State Department officials will hold a political conversation with Constantine A. Oumansky, Soviet Ambassador, next week, Acting Secretary of State Welles said yesterday.

Oumansky, who recently returned from a trip to Russia, conferred with Welles yesterday but the latter reported no official business was discussed.

Welles also said that the American Embassy in London was discussing with the British government the question of continuing British purchases of American fruits.

Great Britain on Thursday issued restrictions on the importation of fruits.

Ecuadorean President Dies

Quito, Ecuador, Nov. 17 (AP).—Aurelio Mosquera Narvaez, President of Ecuador, died at 1:15 a. m. today, following on emergency operation Wednesday.

Mosquera Narvaez was elected President by the National Assembly on December 2, 1938. Arroyo del Rio, president of congress, now will act as President.

Under the constitution, the acting President must issue a decree within eight days convoking presidential elections within 60 days.

Pontiff Calls Consistory to Create Bishops

Chicago Archbishop May Be Named; No New Cardinals Slated

Copyright by New York Times.

Vatican City, Nov. 17.—The Pope has called a secret consistory "to fill vacant sees" on December 11, it was announced today. No cardinals will be created, but various Episcopal and Archiepiscopal sees will be given bishops. Chicago may be among them, as it has been vacant since George Cardinal Mundelein's death.

A secret consistory is composed of cardinals only. The Pope generally makes an allocution at the beginning and it is expected that he will do so this time. The Pontiff will certainly name a new camerlingo, a post which he himself held before his election to the papacy.

Finally, the cardinals present will offer two suburbicarian or "cardinal" sees to seniors of their order. These are the sees of Sabina and Palestrina made vacant by the deaths of Donato Cardinal Sbarretti and Angelo Cardinal Dolci. Since William Cardinal O'Connell is the dean of the cardinals, he will doubtless be offered one of these sees, but as it means living in Rome, it is taken for granted he will decline.

District's Best Cockadoodler Wins Food Show Prize

A "barnyard contest" was the feature of last night's gathering at the Food Show sponsored by District Grocery Stores, Inc., in the Packard Washington Building, 1242 Twenty-fourth street northwest. A matinee at 2 p. m. and an evening meeting at 7:30 p. m. today will conclude the week's show.

Isadore Butts, of 1245 Thirty-first street northwest, won the "barnyard contest" over five other contestants with his imitations of a large and small rooster, and a large and small dog. Other prizes given patrons were an electric washing machine to Mrs. W. H. Dougherty, of 3925 Davis place northwest; a cocker spaniel dog to Eilaine Merrman, of 427 Whittier street northwest, and a collie puppy to Paul C. Stocksiager, 2542 Thirteenth street northwest.

Three children tied for first place in the baby parade. The winners included Jackie Campbell, 17 months, of 1743 North Capitol street; Evelyn Sue Hampton, 14 months, of 1000 I street southeast, and 3-year-old Joan Marie Oden, of 407 Seward square southeast.

A heavy, waterless cooking set will be awarded to a show patron at today's matinee, and an electric sewing machine will be given away at the evening show.

18 Are Indicted In Crime Wave in West Virginia Jail

Sutton, W. Va., Nav. 17 (AP).—Seventeen prisoners, including two women, and a turnkey were indicted today on charges ranging from adultery to conspiracy to kill and rob by a Braxton County grand jury after a three-day investigation of the county jail.

The jurors handed a resolution to Judge Jake Fisher recommending dismissal of the turnkey, Curt Ellison.

The resolution asserted the jury had found a "kangaroo court" in the county jail assessed a fine of $2 against every new prisoner and extracted payment by force or threats, that one prisoner possessed a key to the women's quarters and admitted fellow inmates, and that recalcitrant defendants in the "kangaroo court" were severely beaten.

In all 41 felony indictments and 20 for misdemeanors were returned. Sutton is 50 miles northeast of Charleston.

Prosecutor Dewey Denies Hate for Kuhn But Admits He Called Him 'a Common Thief'

Questioned by Defense, District Attorney Calls Bundsfuehrer 'Nuisance'

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 17.—With District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey as one of its chief witnesses, the defense in Fritz Kuhn's trial for the theft of funds from his German-American bund made a last, extraordinary effort today to prove that the prosecution was based on "politics" and "hatred."

Testifying for the first time in his life in a criminal case, Dewey conceded that he once had called the accused bundsfuehrer a "common thief," and said he felt "contempt" for him, but denied any personal animus.

". . . I must say," he remarked, "that I regarded him (Kuhn) as a nuisance to the community and a threat to the civil liberties of the community if he became more important than he was."

Dewey was but one of a series of high local officials, including Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and Police Commissioner Lewis Valentine, called by Peter L. F. Sabbatino, defense attorney, to show, as he put it, that:

". . . Politics motivated the bringing of these charges."

". . . Such a feeling of hatred and hostility has been created against this defendant that it has affected the district attorney of New York County."

No material defense examination of Mayor LaGuardia, Valentine, City Treasurer Almerindo Portfolio and City Commissioner of Investigations William B. Herlands was permitted by the court.

At one point, when his questioning of Herlands was cut off at the start of an attempt to show a connection between the commissioner's office and that of Dewey's in what he termed was a scheme of "underlings" to bring about a conviction, Sabbatino raised his voice in angry protect and was sharply rebuked by Judge James G. Wallace.

Kuhn is charged specifically with grand larceny—accused of having misappropriated some $1,800 from the bund's treasury.

10,000 Called To Army Duty By Mussolini

Rome Attacks Soviet, Warns of 'Meddling' In Balkan Affairs

By Reynolds Packard
United Press Staff Writer.

Rome, Nov. 17.—Premier Mussolini today ordered a further increase in the strength of the standing army, which the Fascist press said is being made as formidable as Roma Fascista, of Cremona warned "say the final word" when the time comes to make peace in Europe.

Mussolini's order for the addition of 10,000 men of specialist rank to the army coincided with bitter Fascist attacks on Russia, warning the Soviets to keep out of the Balkans and the Danube and strongly supporting Finland's stand against the Russians.

Soviet Lashed Over Radio

At 9:30 p. m. London heard the Rome radio broadcasting, in Russian, a violent attack on the Soviet Union, repeating the warning against any Soviet "meddling" in Balkan affairs.)

The Fascist party newspaper Regima Fascista of Cremona, warned Russia that Finland would offer serious resistance and expressed strong sympathy with the Finns.

Mussolini's order for an increase of 10,000 specialists in the regular army, in conformity with his statement two days ago that "Fascist peace is an armed peace," was the third such order from Il Duce in two weeks.

On November 5 he called up 1,500 additional officers and 1,500 non-commissioned officers and last Sunday added 5,000 more non-commissioned officers and 18,000 specialists.

The Official Gazette today published a decree revealing that 44 Italian merchant ships had been requisitioned during August and September for use as mine-sweepers.

The Fascist press made it clear today that, whether Italy enters the war, any peace settlement must satisfy Italy's Mediterranean demands, particularly her claims against France.

Italian Ships Are Held

Rome, Nov. 17.—How the British are hampering Italian sea trade was told in the Telegrafo today. One Italian ship was held at Gibraltar for 29 days. The French then picked it up and held it at Marseilles for ten more days.

Other Italian vessels have been detained 23 and 25 days—so that their cargoes deteriorated disastrously, it was declared.

Italian ships are indirectly serving Belgium and Holland, it was revealed today in an article printed in the Regime Fascista. Goods coming through the Suez Canal are being unloaded at Italian ports and sent by rail to Belgium and Holland.

Twelfth Infantry—the "President's Own"—is doubtful.

Divided between Fort Howard Md., and Arlington Cantonment, Va., just across the river, the latter troops may be kept separate because of their special duties as "White House Guardsmen."

The Sixteenth Field Artillery, at Fort Myer, Va., and the Sixth Field Artillery, at Fort Hoyle, Md., under present plans, would be placed under General Headquarters in time of war, rather than with a dvision. Should they be motorized, they might go into one of the new divisions. The Third Cavalry at Fort Myer and the Sixty-sixth Tank Regiment at Fort Meade, likewise have war assignments with General Headquarters.

While brigades were to be abolished under the new Army setup, both the Washington provisional brigade and the Sixteenth Infantry Brigade at Fort Meade have been continued for the present.

The Twelfth and Thirty-fourth Infantry regiments have adopted the new "triangular" organization—the term the Army prefers to "streamlined." An antitank platoon has been added to each regiment, a company of heavy machine guns and mortars to each battalion, and a section of light machine guns and light mortars to each rifle company. The latest guns for the new units, however, have not yet been delivered.

A six weeks period of intensive field training has been ordered to perfect the troops in the new organization. Cavelry, artillery and engineer troops, reorganized to a lesser degree, are likewise undergoing the special training. Each unit will be issued additional ammunition and be moved to the firing range at Fort Hoyle for additional target practice.

Col. George Patton's Third Cavalry will leave Fort Myer Monday for two weeks of maneuvers at Fort Belvoir after which they will go to Hoyle. The Sixteenth Field Artillery of Fort Myer will train at Fort Meade and Hoyle next month, while the Twelfth Infantry will concentrate at Fort Hoyle, the week of November 27 and again from December 11-16. Engineer troops from Fort Belvoir move to Hoyle, December 4.

Some of the Fort Meade troops are at Hoyle firing range this week, while others will go to the range Monday.

China Rushes Troops To Guard Supply Lines

Hongkong, Nov. 17 (AP).—China today rushed crack Kwangsi Province units to south Kwangtung Province, to stem Japanese driving toward the Chinese southwestern supply routes. The Japanese stated tonight that their forces were consolidating around Yamhsien, about 30 miles inland from the place where the Japanese landed Wednesday.

an outstanding dollar debt of more than $100,000,000, of which, according to Commerce Department figures, $60,400,000 was held by American citizens at the end of 1938.

Some of the original debt has been retired, and a substantial part bought by Norwegians and others.

The debt, divided into five bond issues, was sold to American citizens and originally paid 6 per cent interest. Norway refunded three of the issues at maturity in 1936 and 1937 at from 4 to 4½ per cent. The amount involved in the refunding was $77,500,000.

Two of the original 6 per cent issues, floated in 1923 and 1924, mature in 1943 and 1944. The total amount outstanding is $23,007,000, but these issues have sinking fund arrangements under which a considerable portion of the original amount has been retired.

Cities' Debts Serviced

In addition, the Norwegian municipalities of Oslo, Bergen and Trondheim, and the province of Akershus, have outstanding about $50,000,000 in dollar debts, of which, according to Commerce Department records, only $4,800,000 was still in the hands of American citizens at the close of 1938. This debt likewise is being fully serviced.

At the end of 1938, $63,600,000 of the Danish government's dollar bonds, and $23,800,000 of the dollar bonds of Danish municipalities and provinces, were still held by American citizens.

Belgium, France, Italy and Great Britain, although in default on war debts, are not in default on debts owed American citizens. Other European countries, according to the Commerce Department, are, either on war debts or debts to American citizens.

Finland still owes $8,233,157 on her war debt. Each June 15 an interest payment is made on the debt and each December 15 a principal and interest payment. The principal was reduced by $71,000 in 1938.

War debts in default aggregate more than $11,000,000,000.

Ship Raid Off Africa Is 'Page One' in Reich

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Nov. 17.—The sinking of the British tanker Africa Shell off the southeastern coast of Africa by a German "warship" is front page news in the German press. The German public had not had any previous indication that German raiders were at work so far from the home bases.

German reports from Lourenzo Marques in the Mozambique, state merely that a German "warship" sank the tanker near Zavala, off the coast of Portugese East Africa. The crew, it is stated, was landed in Inhambane, while the captain was taken aboard the "warship."

Allies to Unify Economic Dealings

between Germany and the allied democracies, the communique asserted, it was determined that the economic war effort of the two countries should be coordinated in the fullest possible manner.

Best Use Is Provided For

The decisions previously reached by Premiers Daladier and Chamberlain at the last meeting had been "strengthened and completed" in such a way that "common action" was assured in the fields of economic warfare, shipping, food, oil, raw materials, munitions, and aircraft.

The measures adopted, the afternoon communique asserted, would provide for the "best use in common interests of the resources of both countries" in raw materials, means of production, shipping and similar assets. More important was the statement that the agreement involved provisions for an "equal distribution between them of any limitations should circumstances render necessary a reduction of the programs of imports."

This meant that if French cash credits ran low, Great Britain either would lend a hand to her ally financially or share her own purchases. It was supposed both countries would reduce their imports to materials essential for carrying on a successful war.

Important for American manfacturers and exporters was the part of the agreement wherein the two countries would draw up import programs jointly, and "avoid competition."

Will Act as a Unit

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, Nov. 17.—Announcing the Daladier-Chamberlain economic accord adopted by the Supreme Allied War Council in London today, a French official spokesman said that it means that henceforth the two countries will act as a single economic unit.

Aims are to eliminate competition between the two countries in their purchases in the world markets, to combine their resources and those of their empires, to reduce unnecessary imports, and to control distribution.

Aside from the importance to France and Great Britain, the accord will have far reaching consequences for countries such as the United States, where Franco-British purchases are likely to be made. Under the accord, first purchases would be of products France and Great Britain cannot furnish themselves immediately, or cannot conveniently obtain from their possessions.

France, however, under the new accord, would endeavor first to place her orders for oil in the British Empire, and would apply for Canadian wheat. So it would go for all minerals and other raw materials.

One of the first effects of the accord is expected to be an increase in the exchanges between France and Great Britain, and also trade with their colonial domains.

The program calls for strict collaboration in consumption. This is to be effected by equal distribution of goods and similar restrictions within the two nations.

French Finance Report

Paris, Nov. 17.—French Minister of Finance Paul Reynaud today submitted to the Chamber of Deputies' finance commission the French budget for civil expenditures, balanced at 71,000,000,000 francs. War costs will be met by an armaments tax, defense bonds and armaments bonds.

The 1940 budget compares with 54,000,000,000 francs in 1938.

London, Nov. 17.—Edward Leslie Burgin, minister of supply, gave the first official indication of what the war is costing Great Britain today by telling dominion representatives and leading engineers that his department alone had spent about £2,000,000 a day since the outbreak of war.

This does not take into account the vast expenditures of the royal air force or the admiralty, nor does it suggest the cost of maintaining the navy or keeping up the British expeditionary force in France, or paying the bill for home defense.

ler, it was remembered here, acted against the advice of his army chiefs when he entered the Rhineland and invaded Austria.

It is known that he has with him most of the younger men in the army, and all of those whom Neville Henderson, the former British Ambassador to Berlin, called "wild men" in his party. It was argued here he must attack, for although the blockade may not be a complete weapon, it is serious enough to demand action.

If and when he does attack, it was realized here that although England may be the first objective, the war in the air alone will be waged with utmost ferocity.

A Polish airman, describing in the French magazine, La Guerre Aerienne, an air attack in Poland, puts the number of airplanes used there at 3,200 and says that at least 15,000, and probably more, are waiting to attack Great Britain. An equal number would be reserved for the front and home defense.

Frightful Attack Expected

The fact that in the attack on Poland an excessive amount of fuel was used, and fuel is short in Germany, leads this writer to conclude the attack would be frightful in an attempt to obtain a victory at once, either by destroying the British air fleet or by demoralization of civilians.

All the German pilots who were killed or mamed prisoners in Poland were youths of from 17 to 22, the Polish airmen said.

While at first they refrained from bombarding and machine gunning the civilian population, they soon acquired a taste for this kind of sport, deliberately choosing market days and festivals in the Polish towns to go "hunting."

Instructions given to parachutists landing behind the Polish lines, he continued, were to kill any and all witnesses to their landing.

The first objectives of the air bombers were the water reservoirs and supplies, roads and railroad communications.

Paris, Nov. 17.—Only in the air was there any marked activity today in the military field, but it raised important points affecting neutral states.

German reconnaissance planes flew over northeast France, as usual, and also far into the south. There were two air raid alarms in the region of Lyons. It has become the regular practice of German airmen to take a short cut across Belgium above the Meuse Valley, and there is reason to believe Swiss territory is being similarly used.

It is understood that Paris has protested to Brussels, and that Brussels made representations in Berlin, but without effect. It has been noted that German planes crossing Belgium fly very high, and there is belief here that Berlin may advance the theory of "territorial air" akin to territorial waters, contending that at maximum altitudes, the skies should be free to all.

On land nothing of importance has occurred for a month.

The French G. H. Q. communiques today follow:

"No. 149 (morning)—A quiet night on the whole."

"No. 150 (evening)—Local activity on the part of first-line elements and artillery."

Nazi Plane Over England

London, Nov. 17.—A German reconnaissance plane flew westward across the midlands of England this morning and swooped low over Manchester, Liverpool and neighboring cities before being driven off by British fighters.

Another Nazi plane flew high over the Shetland Islands, where anti-aircraft gunners chased it.

Neither of the Nazi "invaders" dropped any bombs. It was presumed that their purpose was to survey industrial and military objectives.

Church of the Week:

15th Street Christian to Play Big Part in Southeast Survey

40 Parishioners Will Be Among 300 From 9 Churches Conducting Unique Census Next Week on Use of Character-Building Agencies

Parishioners of Fifteenth Street Christian Church will play an active role in the new Southeast Interchurch organization's unique community survey, slated to get under way next week.

Forty of the members will be among the 300 men and women from nine churches and six denominations who will enter 56,000 homes to determine what use is being made of the various character-building agencies in the community, and to ascertain other facts.

The Fifteenth Street Church delegation is to be led by Eric Daenecke, also chairman of the congregation's scout committee. Assisting him will be Mrs. Robert Newell, secretary of the Women's Council. The area within the boundaries of Fifteenth street, East Capitol, Nineteenth street and Potomac avenue, embracing some 2,000 families, will be covered by the group. It will include about 13 blocks.

The Rev. Leslie L. Bowers is a member of the executive council of the new organization and also committee member of the School of Christian Education to be started in January under the same sponsorship.

Under the pastorate of Mr. Bowers, who also served a previous pastorate there, Fifteenth Street Church has made tremendous strides, and always has tried to concentrate its spiritual tasks upon the immediate community.

Some of the members are affiliated with the staff of nearby Gallinger Hospital. They are Dr. William Lambert, admitting physician; Charles A. Gay, technician, and Mrs. Howard Salzman, head of the statistical department.

Ever emphasizing the importance of youth activities, the congregation has three young people's discussion groups, who tomorrow night will have as their theme—"Must We Have War?" Mrs. Vetura Melchior is counselor of the Junior High unit, of which Jack Crickenberger is president; Mrs. Robert Crump is adult adviser for the Senior High unit, with Howard Salzman as president, and the Young Adults, of which Mrs. Mary Hill and Mrs. Teresa Jones are counselor and president, respectively.

Mrs. Bowers is president of the Women's Council and Mrs. Harold Snyder serves as chairman of the executive committee. Mrs. Snyder's husband, deacon of the church, is the well-known Community Center stage technician.

Circle leaders of the woman's work are Mrs. Robert Crump, Mrs. Mary Gill and Mrs. E. R. Gaylor. Also active in the congregation are George A. Melchior, chairman of the official board; L. A. Butler, Sunday school superintendent, and F. L. Loofler, for 25 years financial secretary.

Mr. Bowers, who served from 1915 until 1920 and from 1932 until the present, in the interim was pastor of Mount Rainier Christian Church, the Calhoun Street Christian Church, Baltimore, and the West End Christian Church, Danville, Va.

He preaches tomorrow morning and evening on "The Imperatives of Christian Living" and "Alarming Suppositions."

Organized in 1902 with a nucleus of five members, two of which are still living, Fifteenth Street Church had as first pastor, Dr. J. A. Stewart. Its first edifice was at Fifteenth and D streets southeast, and the present building at 526 Fifteenth street was erected in 1922. Mrs. Jennie Spire, 80, and Mrs. Celeste Schuerger are the surviving charter members.

Banquet to End Mission Fete

Men's role in the life of the church will be stressed in many local Protestant churches tomorrow as a part of the national observance of "Men and Missions Sunday."

Pastors will refer to the occasion from the pulpit, laymen will give brief talks preceding sermons, Bible classes will hear special messages, and prayers will be offered for the continuance of laymen's evangelistic efforts.

The observance will be climaxed with a banquet on Friday at Reformation Lutheran Church, 212 East Capitol street, with Dr. Dan Poling, president of the World Christian Endeavor Organization, and pastor of Baptist Temple, Philadelphia, as main speaker.

In a message emphasizing the "Men and Missions" observance, the Rev. Clarence O. Hawley, director of promotion of the disciples of Christ, Indianapolis, says:

"If the Christian Church is to fulfill its mission of bringing the life of Christ to the soul of the world, it will do it only through Christian men and women whose souls are alive in Christ.

"Money is an evangel when out of a loving heart it is given for the enterprises of human redemption. It is the Christian's response to the world's need of Christianity, a response which grows as Christian love grows."

The Golden Text is from I Corinthians 6:19: "What? Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?"

Dr.McCartney's Topic 'Defense'

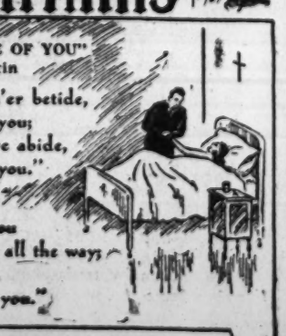
Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS

"GOD WILL TAKE CARE OF YOU"
*Mrs. W. S. Martin



"Be not dismayed what-e'er betide,
God will take care of you;
Beneath His wings of love abide,
God will take care of you."

Chorus:
"God will take care of you
Thro' ev'ry day, O'er all the way;
He will take care of you,
God will take care of you."

"The words of this hymn were written by Mrs. W. S. Martin while she was convalescing from an operation. Just before her operation she said to her husband, "Never mind hubby; God will take care of you." This thought formed the basis of her song. Her husband composed the tune.

Japanese Urge Russian Pact Ignoring U. S.

Domei Sees Numerous Obstacles to Delay Accord With America

By H. O. Thompson.
United Press Staff Writer.

Tokyo (Saturday), Nov. 18.—Powerful elements are urging the government to conclude a nonaggression treaty with Russia "without paying the slightest attention to displeasure felt and loudly voiced" by Britain and the United States, the Domei News Agency said today.

The agency, which usually expresses the opinions of the foreign office, said it is felt that "a fundamental adjustment in relations between Japan and Russia is needed in connection with the maintenance of peace in the Far East."

Japan's attitude towards Russia, Domei said, need not necessarily be connected with her relations with Britain and the United States. The government naturally desires to improve its relations with Washington and London but some officials fear that negotiations with the United States necessarily will be delayed "by innumerable obstacles."

The question of coming to an accord with Russia, on the other hand, is one of immediate urgency.

Those in favor of a nonaggression treaty with the Soviets, Domei said, believe that Russo-Japanese friction is a "dormant powder keg . . . fraught with the danger of developments which might lead to a full-dress war."

U. S. Stands on Rights

The State Department made it plain yesterday that the United States has made no suggestions, formal or informal, to Japan indicating any deviation from the position taken in the note of December 31 last which utterly rejected the Japanese contention that developments in the Far East should be recognized as a new order in Asia.

In what amounted to a flat denial of recent intimations of a Japanese foreign spokesman that the United States "in official communications" had now admitted that this country was not blind to the "new realties," Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles referred again to the reiterated American position.

This he said was best stated in the note of December 31 in which Secretary Hull had replied to a Tokyo note of November 13 insisting upon Japan's right to limit by decree the American sphere in China. This note, which in effect, informed Japan that the United States was reserving all rights of equality and opportunity in China which its treaties accorded, still stands, Welles indicated.

Japanese Occupy Yamchow

Shanghai (Saturday), Nov. 18 (U.P.).—Japanese forces in South China have completed the occupation of Yamchow, an important communications center near the borders of French Indo-China, and are driving toward Nanning, Kwangsi Province, the Japanese Domei News Agency reported today.

In Chungking the Chinese admitted that Japanese forces, including cavalry, had landed on Yamchow Bay, in the gulf of Tongking. The landings were made at Lungmen, Chisha and Fangcheng.

Protest of Allies Delays Naming Of Mine Board

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Nov. 17.—Sharp British and French protests are understood to have delayed appointment by the Yugoslav government of a commission to control production and exportation of Yugoslavia's minerals, including copper, zinc, lead and iron pyrites produced in British and French controlled mines.

The protest was believed to be based on an Allied determination to prevent minerals from reaching Germany.

If the commission is formed, the British and French governments will propose a conference in Belgrade.

Next week, according to well informed circles, will be decisive. The appointment of commissioners cannot be delayed much longer without indicating that Yugoslav authorities have bowed to the Allies' requests.

ported by DNB, German official news agency. Other news items filtering into Berlin provided sketchy details of the events in the capital of the former Czecho-Slovak Republic.

Regime Set Up in Paris

The news agency's communique said:

"For some time a group of Czech intellectuals associated with the fugitive former President Benes have sought to disturb peace and order in the protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia with greater or smaller demonstrations and resistance.

"Investigation established that leaders in these acts of resistance were to be found particularly in colleges and academies.

"In consequence of the fact that on October 28 and November 15 these elements assaulted individual Germans, Czech academies have been closed for three years, nine perpetrators were shot and a large number of participants arrested."

Tonight the propaganda ministry and other officials in Berlin said they knew nothing more than the information contained in the DNB communique.

The Czech legation in Paris Friday announced formation of a Czecho-Slovak national committee to exercise sovereign rights for the physically non-existent state. The main purpose was said to be to carry out the October 2 accord with France authorizing formation of a Czech legion to fight with the French army against Germany. Former President Benes is a leading member of the committee.)

Czechs celebrated the twenty-first anniversary of the founding of the Czecho-Slovak republic on October 28 in defiance of a German ban on public demonstrations. Several clashes with police resulted and many arrests were made. Two persons were known to have died of injuries received during the day.

The funeral of one of these victims, a Czech student, on November 15, was made the occasion for a second mass demonstration. Approximately 2,000 students demonstrated against German rule and 16 were arrested.

Trek of 650,000 Jews To Polish Pale Begun

Copenhagen (Saturday), Nov. 18 (INS).—A gigantic migration of an estimated 655,000 Jews into the territory around Lublin, set aside for Jewish settlement, is already under way, the Danish newspaper Politiken reported today.

From Germany proper 240,000 Jews will be evacuated and moved by April 1 into the Lublin area, which was formerly part of Poland, the dispatch said.

Many Jews have committed suicide while en route to the region, the Politiken's Berlin correspondent reported.

Mexico Supreme Court Debates Oil Seizure

Mexico City, Nov. 17 (AP).—Prolonged debate by the Mexican Supreme Court today brought forecasts of a hard-fought battle before it reaches a decision on legality of the government's expropriation of the foreign oil industry.

The court decided to resume tomorrow its discussion of a proposed opinion by Justice Rodolfo Asiain upholding the government.

Allies Triple Strength of Maginot Line

250 Miles of Forts Completed From Sea To Swiss Frontier

By Ralph E. Heinzen
United Press Staff Writer.

With the French Army, on the Western Front, Nov. 17.—The defenses of France's $300,000,000 Maginot Line have been tripled in strength since the outbreak of the war and today solid fortresses stretch for more than 250 miles along the German, Belgian and Swiss frontiers.

The Allies have completed the last fortifications stretching from the English Channel to Switzerland, adding steel and concrete forts and planting long-range guns.

In advance of the underground fortifications stretch two rows of field positions.

For every soldier manning the forts and underground casemates there are four soldiers on the surface holding supporting positions in front, behind or between the fortresses.

Tank "Whipped," French Say

The job of these "covering troops" on the surface is to engage the enemy. The role of the fortresses is to keep the enemy out of France.

French commanders declare that the tank, the most sensational development of the World War, already has been whipped in this new war. This war, I was told, will find airplanes the chief arm of attack, along with mobile artillery.

Tanks cannot penetrate the lines of steel and concrete fortifications and there must be great concentrations of artillery to batter holes in the forts before any infantry assaults can be ventured.

New Artillery Predicted

Experienced tacticians predict that this war will see an all time high in artillery perfection.

Today there is not a gap in the Maginot Line. A high general directing work on the forts told me that "only time and experience can tell" whether the Maginot or Siegfried line is better.

crackup of the Third Reich. It is pointed out here that in most wars there is dissension between the generals and politicians.

Nevertheless, it should perhaps be recorded that the suggestion was made weeks ago that the end of this war might see Germany under the control of the army and joined with England and France in opposing Russia. It was first made as a sort of fantastic joke, but at present at least, it is regarded as something which may be just a little more than that.

Bloody Purge Reported

New York, Nov. 17.—Unsubstantiated rumors of the shooting to death of Gen. Werner von Blomberg, former German war minister, and the imprisonment of 500 officers of the German army were broadcast tonight by the London radio, which said that the rumors had emanated from Berlin.

The London announcer recalled that Blomberg, whose resignation was announced in Berlin on February 5, 1938, had been reported last month interned in a German fortress.

Neutral quarters, the announcer said, had described the internal situation in Germany as being "very critical." Danger of strife and rebellion, he added, virtually were admitted yesterday in a Nazi paper allegedly distributed to Nazi organizations in which internal strife was said to be the greatest enemy of the state.

400 More U. S. Planes Ordered by Britain

Inglewood, Calif., Nov. 17 (AP).—A $17,000,000 order for 400 training planes, duplicating an order last year, was received today from the British Air Ministry by the North American Aviation Corporation.

Company officials said the order increased its backlog to approximately $47,000,000.

Baltimore, Nov. 17 (AP).—Five attack bombers left the Glenn L. Martin aircraft plant today bound for New York and transshipment to France.

Cut-in on President Costs Autoist $2

Warren Steele Grubbs, 54, of Alexandria, Va., paid $2 yesterday for driving in front of President Roosevelt's automobile.

While the President was on his way to the Union Station Thursday night, it was testified, Grubb drove between his automobile and the motorcycle escort. He was charged with failing to obey an official signal and forfeited $2 collateral.

Iowan Gets 5 Days For Dragging Dog

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Nov. 17 (AP). Municipal Judge Ardell sentenced M. H. Ellsworth, of Council Bluffs, to five days in jail today after Juvenile Officer Arthur Elgin testified Ellswortn drove his car so fast a small dog on a 12-foot rope could not keep its feet and was injured.

"The highest dignity of the court is found in the protection of the poor and weak, and that extends to animals," Judge Ardell told him.

Two Youths, One 13, Die in Plane Crash

Olney, Ill., Nov. 17 (AP). — Two youths were killed late today as their plane crashed into a field 8 miles northeast of here.

The victims were Carl Berger, 21, of Olney, the pilot, and Truman Rodgers, jr., 13, of West Liberty. The plane was demolished.

Crash Shakes Rogers

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 17 (INS).—Forced landing of the airplane in which he was riding today caused Buddy Rogers, orchestra leader, to be badly shaken, but otherwise not injured. The plane was badly damaged when it landed at Pell City, 36 miles east of Birmingham.

Crash Kills U. S. Flier

Balboa, C. Z., Nov. 17 (INS).—Second Lieut. Philip O. Potter, 22, of Chicago, member of the Air Reserve on active duty, was killed this afternoon when his plane crashed near Albrook Field.

The ship was one of 18 en route to Rio Hato for gunnery practice.

Planning Is Not Enough

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission is moving to close the largest loophole in the planning of public improvments for this city. It proposes to outline a ten-year program of orderly development for Washington and suburbs, with the object of coordinating Federal and District projects as well as eliminating unnecessary conflicts and waste of public funds.

Considering the extensive program of public works carried out here in the last few years, it is surprising that a wholly coordinated plan has not been worked out heretofore. This lack of planning is evident in the fact that the Social Security and Census Buildings are scheduled to be completed before the opening of streets adequate to serve them. In the plan now undertaken a special effort will be made to develop a harmonious relationship between Federal and local improvements.

It is to be hoped, also, that the commission will bring forth some clear-cut recommendations to prevent the erection of costly private structures on property that has been designated for governmental use. At present governmental agencies stand by helplessly while large apartment buildings or business establishments are erected on land which the Government intends to buy. They know that taxpayers will have to pay for the destruction of these buildings when Congress gets ready to appropriate funds to buy the desired sites. Yet they have no means of avoiding this inexcusable waste.

Washington has attained sufficient maturity to permit the drafting of long-range plans with comparative ease. The Park and Planning Commission may be depended upon to work out such plans in the public interest. Obviously, however, mere planning is not enough. Unless Congress gives some agency authority to buy up property needed for future public buildings, or at least to control its use until it is needed for such purpose, much of the advantage of careful planning will be lost.

Under The Swastika

Long after its wars and turmoils are forgotten, our age may be remembered as the one in which the practice of torture was given new refinement.

There is nothing new about the systematic infliction of pain within, but only just within, the limits of human endurance. However, both ancient and medieval tortures confined themselves for the most part to the infliction of physical suffering. This was even true of the Asiatics who, on the whole, have exhibited greater ingenuity in this field than Europeans. It has remained for our own Western civilization, and our own age, to explore the infinite resources of psychological torture.

Even more terrible than anything yet reported about the methods of the Communist OGPU is the story that comes from Vienna, via London, of the special form of torture devised by the Nazi Gestapo for Kurt von Schuschnigg. Since the enforced anschluss the former chancellor of Austria has been confined in a hotel attic room said to be little larger than an elevator cage. Outside the room, hour upon hour, day and night, a loud speaker screams out phonograph recordings of Hitler's speeches. Schuschnigg is said to know every speech, every inflection, by heart.

Those who have listened even once to even one of Hitler's speeches will agree that the description of Schuschnigg's fate as "hell on earth" is mild.

The story is not, and of course never will be, confirmed from Nazi sources. When Schuschnigg is finally killed a plausible explanation undoubtedly will be offered. But indirect confirmation of what it is to be a dissenter under the Nazi yoke came yesterday from Prague. When unarmed Czech students rise hopelessly against the German terror the strength of the incentive for such suicidal action is made clear beyond the power of censorship to suppress.

Preserving The Balance

With the selection of a successor to Justice Butler, the majority of the present Supreme Court will owe its appointment to President Roosevelt. So the President will assume a large measure of responsibility for the character of our highest tribunal.

Of the incumbent justices who ascended the bench before the advent of the New Deal two were appointed by President Hoover, one by President Coolidge and one by President Wilson. Even if these jurists held closely similar views of the Constitution, which they do not, they could be outvoted by the four justices named by President Roosevelt plus the fifth justice soon to be selected. There is no reason to suppose that the Court will be divided into pre-New Deal and New Deal blocs. But the rapidity with which vacancies have occurred of late does emphasize the influence over the development of the Court which rests in Mr. Roosevelt's hands.

In making his first appointments the President obviously tried to redress the balance of the Court by selecting members with a definite type of social outlook. For many years the Court had a majority of conservative justices. Now, however, the liberals are clearly in the saddle. Indeed, with the passing of Justice Butler, the sole remaining exponent of rigid interpretation of the Constitution seems to be Justice McReynolds. It is no longer a question of whether a flexible construction of the basic law shall prevail, but of whether the more conservative viewpoint shall continue to be represented.

From this standpoint the choice of a successor to Justice Butler will prove a test of the President's attitude toward basic American institutions. He is confronted by the question of whether he will further enlarge the majority reflecting his personal viewpoint on constitutional issues, or whether he will preserve in some degree the traditional balance in the Court's membership.

The best practice is to select the most capable jurists in the country for the Supreme Bench, with little regard for their place of residence, politics or economic and social philosophy. If men of broad judicial experience and temperament were always chosen, there would be little danger that the Court would ever step out of its role as an instrumentality vital to the preservation of our Federal system. With a Court of eminent jurists, chosen only for their judicial qualifications, there would be little need for concern over the maintenance of a balance between liberal and conservative thought.

It is well known, however, that judicial experience, learning and temperament have not been the sole test applied by President Roosevelt in selecting his Supreme Court appointees. Some of the justices he has named are eminently qualified from this viewpoint. Yet the one requirement applied to all of them appears to have been wholehearted sympathy with the New Deal. If continued, this practice will create a biased tribunal. Should the President rule out a strictly judicial appointment, therefore, his most reasonable course would be to select a highly capable constitutional lawyer in no way associated with his Administration.

There is ample precedent for appointments designed to preserve a balance in the Court. Wilson appointed the liberal Mr. Brandeis, who recently retired, as well as the conservative Justice McReynolds. Hoover named the late Justice Cardozo as well as the more conservative Justice Roberts. Justice Stone, who is a bulwark of liberal jurisprudence, was an appointee of Calvin Coolidge.

In this period of increasing tensions and of far-reaching transitions the President has a clear responsibility to avoid the appearance of trying to build up a Court representing any particular school of social philosophy. The Supreme Court is likely to retain its vital role as a balance wheel of the American governmental system only if its own sense of balance as well as its truly judicial character are retained. When fate places in the hands of one man the power to metamorphose the Supreme Court his sense of restraint ought to be as great as his prerogative.

Fruit After Tobacco

As the result of French and British bans upon importation of fresh apples and pears American fruit growers have lost a market amounting to about $17,000,000 annually. The sum involved is not enormous, but the closing of any export outlet upon which producers have come to depend is always demoralizing. The plight of the fruit growers, like the hardships inflicted upon domestic tobacco growers by the cessation of British buying, is a reminder that nations at war are not dependable customers.

Because they are compelled to increase purchases of commodities essential to the conduct of war, France and Great Britain are forced to cut down on buying of nonessentials. The necessity of conserving their cash resources has perhaps become more imperative since passage of the present neutrality legislation. But under any circumstances, the French and British would be disposed to buy cautiously. When, as in this case, fruit purchases can be made for British account within the empire, trade will inevitably be diverted to our detriment.

In estimating the trading gains of the present war, we must not forget to make allowance for the economic losses that are an equally direct result of war. Americans do well to realize that the adjustments ahead of us are frequently going to be painful.

Out Of Bounds

In an address delivered last week in St. Louis, Marriner S. Eccles outlined a tax program which would, in his opinion, diminish the pressure of idle funds on investment markets, narrow the gap between Government income and outgo, and thus pave the way for "as much new investment as can be profitably undertaken."

As Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Mr. Eccles is of course deeply interested in the profitable utilization of the huge volume of idle funds accumulating in the country's banks. He also has a wholly legitimate interest in governmental spending and taxation policies which affect the rate of growth of excess bank reserves and deposits.

It does not follow, however, that he is justified in invading a field of governmental activity which is primarily a responsibility of the Treasury Department. The conviction that Mr. Eccles has wandered beyond the domain of the Reserve System is strengthened by the paradoxical character of his tax program, based upon the assumption that investment activity can best be stimulated by imposing additional tax burdens upon corporations and individuals with surpluses at their disposal.

Evidently the Treasury authorities do not view the Eccles program with favor. For the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, who is also the department's leading tax expert, has made no effort to conceal resentment. Referring to Mr. Eccles' tax proposals, Mr. John W. Hanes says: "I don't think he spoke for the Administration. I doubt seriously if he spoke for the Congress, and I am absolutely positive he did not speak for the Treasury."

Here, then, is fresh evidence of that conspicuous lack of teamwork which appears to be a characteristic feature of the Roosevelt Administration, despite the emphasis placed by the President upon the importance of coordination. In private conferences public officials should feel at liberty to express their views fully on matters of policy that concern other departments of the Government. But in public they should scrupulously refrain from taking positions that might embarrass or obstruct the operations of another department. They cannot sidestep the issue by claiming to speak in an unofficial capacity. No Government official can ever entirely dissociate himself from his office.

Efficient administration calls for interdepartmental cooperation in the attainment of well-defined objectives. To insure the necessary teamwork, Government officials must attend strictly to the business under their own jurisdiction and avoid passing judgment in public upon policies that are under the authority of others.

Winston Will Wince

History may repeat itself, but the dangers of historic analogy are many. And none should know this any better than Mr. Winston Churchill, himself an historian of note. Notwithstanding, it is a moral which the First Lord of the British Admiralty forgot when he recently made a radio speech drawing a parallel between the position of the South in the Civil War and of Nazi Germany in the present conflict.

"Britain may take good heart," Mr. Churchill said, "from the American Civil War, when all the heroism of the South could not redeem their cause from the stain of slavery, just as all the courage and skill which the Germans show in war will not free them from the reproach of Naziism with its intolerance and brutality."

This remark has understandably evoked charges from the United Daughters of the Confederacy, who term it "a gratuitous insult" due to "both ignorance and stupidity." The insult would have been protested at its source, according to the president general, Mrs. Walter D. Lamar, except that "the times are too troubled to start out on the errand of educating an English statesman."

And that, to those who feel neutral both between North and South and between Britain and Germany, would seem to leave the honors with Mrs. Lamar.

If you can remember when second gear was referred to as "intermediate," you don't have to worry over the possibility of being blown into the Army by a war draft.

A friend is in the doghouse. His wife asked him, "How do you like my new hat?" and he recklessly replied, "Why, it would be the very thing to wear during a blackout."

We've almost reached the point where if we continue to keep abreast of the news of the day, we'll die of excitement, and if we don't, curiosity will kill us.

"Close Relationship"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read the letters in your forum columns for and against Lindbergh, the embargo, the Dies Committee et al. for some time. Day after day, letters are printed in which are given the causes of the present conflict and ways and means by which America may save her youth and be spared a devastating economic post-war crash.

The more one reads, the more astonished does one become that no writers seem to sense the close relationship between ideals of racism, creeds of intolerance, bitterness of spirit toward unlike peoples and the causes of our present impending world war.

Lindbergh would not fight in the present conflict except to fight a race war between the colored races and the white. To me this one statement of the colonel's identifies him with the ranks of the Nazi regime more than his receipt of medals or of social honors from the Hitler followers.

His inference of a race war based on color or peoples was totally gratuitous and entirely unnecessary, especially in a country where millions of colored men have fought and are ready to fight again to keep America the happiest country for men to live in.

Lately I heard Elliott Roosevelt telling over the air of the feeling of pride in Americanism that surged through him as he walked down Constitution avenue flanked by the mighty symbols of democracy and power. I wondered if Elliott realized that no one of a large group of 12,000,000 Americans could feel exactly the way he did.

Entry into no public place in Washington was denied Elliott. No Negro could have played on some of the areas adjacent to Constitution avenue under the jurisdiction of the United States Government.

Chinese Battle

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At a time when our only answer to the predatory claims of the European nations engaged in an imperialist war can be, America, stay out of the war, we should turn our attention East.

Here we find the Chinese people fighting a tremendous battle against the Japanese invader. The sentiment of the American people is overwhelmingly in favor of China. This makes it even more ironic than it might otherwise be that America supplies over 50 per cent of Japan's war materials.

Individually, therefore, we must boycott Japanese goods. This is particularly important with the Christmas season coming on and the markets being flooded with all sorts of articles. The Chinese people deserve our help. They are real fighters for democracy.

In addition to our individual boycott, we should work for action by our Government to help China resist the grasping claws of the Japanese imperialists. A victory for the Chinese people would be a victory for democracy, and would help insure to the American people the existence of our own democratic form of government which is menaced by every act of aggression anywhere. HELEN LEVITOV.

Twenty Rounds To Go

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some people think that the war is phoney. Of course, a lot of people expected a big grand slam when Germany and France and England came to life and they have been disappointed.

This is going to be an ingenious war. We have to find out where land mines, secret aerodromes, and a hundred and one things are before we "kick off" and unless Hitler's mob go daft and try a big "suicidal slam" France and England will sit tight until spring and so far as we in Great Britain are concerned we are not going to worry overmuch.

We always say there are 20 rounds to go and having to make up a bit of leeway as regards preparations we may be put down as slow starters, but once we get warmed up we will commence to do our stuff and whatever happens one thing is a certainty—we'll be slamming good and hard at the finish and maybe land a K. O. halfway.

History repeats itself now and again and Hitler is trying to do what Napoleon did. Well, we handed old Nap the K. O. after a helluva lot of chasing and it's a cinch Hitler is not half as good a man as Napoleon—so wait for it.

JOHN BROWNING.

Resources For The Allies

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his radio speech broadcast November 12, Winston Churchill has summed up the position of Britain and demonstrated quite clearly that the two great European democracies are equally determined to crush Hitlerism. Mr. Churchill does not doubt "that time is on our side," but no illusions are entertained about the stupendous task confronting the Allies, adding: "I am sure we have very rough weather ahead."

The First Lord of the Admiralty's words will make those who have been asking for a statement defining British war aims realize that civilization as it is understood under democratic institutions must be defended at all costs; otherwise Mr. Churchill justly fears that "all will be enslaved and the United States will be left single-handed to guard the rights of man."

Our own country has already taken one step that may shorten the war and, by the same token, keep us from being involved; yet it would seem that nothing we can do to remain neutral voids the grave responsibilities that devolve on us. It is this aspect of the situation that confronts America today; therefore the United States should not hesitate to place her immense reserve of resources at the disposal of the Allies, along with moral support.

Nevertheless, some business leaders feel that they cannot benefit in the long run by turning out war materials; but if our industrial plants hang out the "No war orders" sign because losses might subsequently be incurred, such a policy could defeat the purposes for which the arms embargo was lifted.

Were Hitler eventually to become the master of western Europe, if what has happened to American interests in China is a case in point, our industries would then suffer more injury than the cost of expanding plant capacity at present will entail at the expense of subsequent retrenchment.

So, I repeat, let us spare no pains and by every legitimate means contribute to Hitler's downfall, whose methods may bear a resemblance to those of Philip of Macedon, of whom Demosthenes once said: "He is detested, feared and envied even by his allies seemingly now most friendly to him." GUY d'AULBY.

A Wholly Sovereign Nation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an editorial which appeared in your paper a few days ago, and again in the leading editorial of today's issue, you wrongfully state that Panama is a virtual protectorate.

I wish to call your attention to the undeniable fact that Panama is an absolutely sovereign nation, governed by democratic ideals, and that its people enjoy all the rights and privileges pertaining to such a state and that in no sense whatsoever can it be called a protectorate.

In so far as our relations with this great democracy are concerned, Panama is a traditional friend of the United States and she contributed with her soil and with her man power to the construction of that gigantic waterway, the Panama Canal, which so enormously has helped to bring the nations of the world closer together and so greatly has contributed to the prosperity and security of the United States of America.

Under the provisions of the treaty recently ratified by this Nation, which governs the relations between our two countries, Panama has become a partner and a loyal ally in the protection and defense of that marvel of American engineering, the Panama Canal.

JULIO E. BRICENO,
First Secretary of the Embassy.

"Pivotal Point"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To be neutral or not to be neutral, that is the question Belgium and Holland must answer in the near future.

The Netherlands in the hands of the German forces may well serve as a spearhead with which to pierce the bulwarks of Britain's might.

As likely as not, the pivotal point of the renewed World War rests upon what these two countries will do. As two peace-loving nations their decision of necessity will be with the Allies, since their basic forms of government are similar. Lambs do not cast in their lot with wolves.

Although Belgium and Holland may be sympathetic to the war aims of Great Britain and France still they cannot afford openly to declare themselves against Germany. The one great restraining fear is the threat of Germany's new tactical weapon "lightning war," which knows no mercy to those who oppose their cause.

Fortunately, the American people do not have the sights of 16-inch guns leveled at their heads to help them make a decision where their neutral status is concerned.

This is certainly something to be thankful for, and may it ever be thus. FRANK J. SALAMON.
Washington, Nov. 16.

American League

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to the Dies investigation of this League for Peace and Democracy, I want to ask, as did another correspondent, if this league is lawful and honest, and in no wise pernicious or illegal, why should any member object to his membership being known?

Members of all legal and law-abiding associations are proud to make known their membership of same. E. S. BLAKE.

War Costs

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Fifty-five billion dollars is what it has cost Uncle Sam thus far for allowing himself to be lured into Europe's war in 1917.

I would suggest that dear Uncle Sammy keep his nose in the ledgers in which are written the ever-growing costs of the World War and he shall be less prone to nose about in the war now going on in Europe.

The Post Impressionist

Waiting, Or Listening?

While the other fellow is talking, do you listen to what he says, or do you carefully hold in mind what you intend saying to him, and merely wait for him to pipe down?

More people do this latter thing, than you know about—yes, even more than they themselves know about. Chances are, you start talking at the end of one of the other man's phrases, instead of waiting for a paragraph- or chapter-end. So, bursting with his own uncompleted lecture or monologue, he waits with ill-concealed impatience for your next silence. Then he resumes where he left off. No matter what you said, unless you gratuitously and purposely insulted him, he doesn't know, or attach any importance to anything you have uttered.

Too many "conversations" are merely two rudely interrupted monologues.

A real conversation consists of talk between two people, one of whom listens to what the other says, and then comments upon it, agreeably or argumentatively. This actually necessitates that one listens while the other talks. But if ever the talkers of the world were to be arrayed pugnaciously against the listeners of the world, the fight would soon be over because of numerical inequality. After that one battle the world would consist, for a while at least, of talkers only.

There is something to be said now and then for the one who wishes to talk and cannot do so without interrupting somebody. Some potential good listeners are occasionally driven to desperation by the way in which the monologist (who thinks he is a conversationalist) keeps it up, like Tennyson's "Brook." The listener will be able to maintain his politeness, his air of interest until at last—at long last in most instances—the talker pauses for breath, then, just as the listener is just about to begin talking, himself, so that something can be said that is really worth listening to, the monologist hastily says:

"And so"—— and he's off again. The only way you can talk to a chap like that is to interrupt him. And you never can stick around until he is through. He never gets through. When you leave him you have to go in the middle of a sentence. His terminal facilities are apparently nil.

There is another peculiarity about these non-stop talkers: They will begin a statement of fact or open a narrative that, in itself, could be printed in large type on one side of a postal card and give a wide margin. But after the first half-sentence he will insert a parenthesis (usually with a "by the way, this fellow I'm mentioning saved my life once, and that, too, is a story worth telling," etc.)—a parenthesis that would fill volume Gic to Har of the Encyclopedia Britannica.

So by the time he has finished (if ever) you have the narrative or statement of fact all muddled up with Bill Zilch and his heroism, and various other parentheses that interrupted his main parenthesis that interrupted his remark. The continuous talker never tells, in any of these parenthetical libraries, just why his life was saved. The listener finds himself wondering.

When you, after a long term in a hospital under the care of cut-ups and surgical nurses, finally stagger back home, sure that all the neighbors have been sitting up nights worrying about you; and when you stop that old pal on the street and explain to him to his complete surprise that you have been to the hospital to be operated upon; and when you proceed to tell him all about your operation—all about it—omitting nothing whatever, that friend stands there while you tell him.

Nobody could find any fault with the way he stands there. His standing in the community is unquestioned for the moment. But do you think for a solitary minute he is listening Don't kid yourself. He is not listening—he is waiting; waiting for you to calm down and keep silence while he gives you his own organ recital.

Yes, they can look you right in the eye and tune you out.

One of the most graphic incidents of inattention that looked like the other things that I have ever known, happened to a good friend of mine who prided himself on his marvelous prowess as a raconteur, particularly to children. One Sunday afternoon he was sitting in the back garden of a friend with the 4-year-old darling of the household parked on his knee. He was telling her the story of Goldilocks and the Three Bears. As he noted her wide eyes and gaping mouth, her lips wiggling in perfect unison with his own, he said to himself

"This is absolutely brutal! This poor little thing is helpless. She is enthralled, spellbound, hypnotized, mesmerized with my eloquence. An incalculable responsibility accompanies the God-given power of expression that charms innocent childhood quite out of itself. Her little white soul is wax in my fingers. I am molding it to my will!"

So, under inspiration of her 125 per cent absorption in his every cleverly arranged phrase, he stepped on the gas, pulled out the choke and made of the yarn such a version of Goldilocks and the ursine trio as never before was heard under any canvas. And when he had dropped the last beautiful word, the little girl exploded with,

"When I eat grapes, I spit black!"

Now maybe I, not always the perfect listener, but always too much inclined to monologue, ought to follow up a treatise like this with some general advice on the subject of conversation. I am loath to advise anybody about anything. People smart enough to follow good advice have sense enough to get along without it.

But if I were going to advise and feel sure I were advising soundly, I would make this inclusive rule: Keep the conversation away from things that are of no possible interest to anybody but yourself. This means, among other things, do not talk to people about yourself or about people you know and they do not. The further you steer the talk away from things of interest to you only, the nearer will you approach the interest of the listener.

And beware—oh how you should beware!—of the fellow who seems to betray such a keen and absorbed interest when you are talking about yourself and your children—that man is going to sell you something later on.

The Maverick Case

MAURY MAVERICK, who is Mr. New Deal in the Texas section, is supposed to go to trial on the twenty-seventh of the month on a charge of buying the votes of a number of members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union in the campaign of last summer in which he was elected Mayor.

This is what it is all about:

Both Maverick and John Shook, the prosecutor, are members of old Texas families, and no member of the D. A. R. is more vain of her lineage than these two Texans are of theirs. Maverick makes a pretense of not giving a damn for such things, but he is sure to mention that his own election to the office of mayor occurred just 100 years after one of his ancestors won the same honor.

Spent $50,000 Fortune In Politics

THE NAME of Maverick is a place name in town, like Beekman and Dyckman in New York. Maury's branch of the family turned up poor in his generation after a long spell of easy going on the profit taken from the increase in the price of land, and he is broke now and dependent on his salary of $8,000 a year, having lost or spent in politics a fortune of $50,000 or so which had accumulated by his own efforts after starting from scratch.

When he was beaten for Congress he weighed the question whether to quit politics and hustle up some fresh money as a lawyer or lobbyist-lawyer, but decided not to bother about money, being influenced, no doubt, by the feeling so common nowadays that it's no use, because this Government or some government would be sure to blow it full of wind or grab it back in income and inheritance taxes.

Shook's father and grandfather were local judges, and he and Maverick went to school together and entered politics at the same time, so that fiery Texan stuff about Maverick out of Washington didn't impress Shook and may have stimulated his desire to bat Maury's ears down. They pretend to be personal friends still and that this prosecution is strictly a matter of sworn duty and so forth, but you can play that on our concertina. This is no friendly contest.

Shook's Charges Are Outlined

SHOOK CLAIMS to have evidence that on a trip to New York Maury got from David Dubinsky, the president of the garment workers—who is no Communist, incidentally—a promise of a campaign contribution. He will undertake to show that Dubinsky did send a check for $1,000, payable to a third person, and that this person cashed it and gave the money to Maverick. At this point, says he, the union was cautioned that the transaction might violate the election laws, but, nevertheless, the next day Maverick cashed his own check for $200 in half dollars and gave the money to a representative of the union. The tax is $1.50, and Shook says he can prove that Maverick offered to pay 50 cents toward the poll taxes of members who were unable to pay their own.

Garment making is a low-pay industry, and Maverick has been helpful to the union, so he can crack right back with the obvious fact that he was in line for the garment workers' support, anyway, being the only politician in San Antonio who had ever done anything for them and for the wretched pecan shellers, now organized into the C. I. O. The garment workers can cast about 1,500 votes, and Maverick won by about 2,900, but the poll tax is serious money and the ballot a luxury to people earning the disgracefully low wages prevalent in this industrial slum.

Tax Is Required From All Voters

WITHOUT DISCUSSING the purpose of the poll tax, it will be seen that among people making $7 a week and, until lately, as little as $2 a week, it amounts to annulment of the right to vote. Shook can't say for sure whether a person of, say, 35 years, resident in Texas from the age of 21, who took a sudden notion to vote for the first time, could be required to pay accumulated taxes for all those years, plus interest, as the case is in a couple of Southern States. Probably, under a strict interpretation of the law that would be so, for the poll tax is literally a tax on the hair of a person's head, but is collected only from voters, even if they be bald as the palm of your foot, and its effect and intent from the very beginning have been to exclude from the polls those who had more urgent use for the $1.50.

From Shook's remarks on the structure of his case I draw a suspicion that some of Maverick's friends on the labor side have been squealing against the one man who has shown some effective interest in this dreadful poverty. The offense is a felony, and, considering the shape of things, it is not difficult to understand why Maverick has become a political misanthrope.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

On Mr. Roosevelt's Mystery

IT IS RELIABLY reported that at least until after the Christmas holidays Mr. Roosevelt will not spoil everything by declaring himself about a third term. Let us hope the report is true. Until he has pronounced the fateful words we can all continue to enjoy the agreeable suspense, and if we are politicians, to profit by it. For it will be a dreary morning after when at last he announces that he is not a candidate.

The worst sufferers will be the Republican candidates because without Mr. Roosevelt as a conspicuous target at which they can all shoot, they are bound to begin shooting at one another. Minus Mr. Roosevelt, the Democratic Party is for political purposes invulnerable to Republican attack. What can a conservative Republican say against Messrs. Garner, Hull, Byrd, George, Glass, Tydings? And how is he going to attack Mr. McNutt, Mr. Wallace, Mr. Ickes or Mr. Murphy without causing devastation in the sector occupied by Messrs. La Follette, Nye, Borah, Capper, Johnson and McNary? For the time being, that is to say until the Republicans have recovered more than they have as yet recovered, Mr. Roosevelt is the great unifier of the Republican Party.

Suspense Is Boon To The Democrats

THE DEMOCRATS also will suffer when the mystery is solved and the suspense is ended. Mr. Garner might have to take a position publicly on some controversial question. So would the other candidates. Yet, with the situation what it is, the issues what they are, the only strong candidate is a strong silent candidate. Mr. Roosevelt himself has demonstrated how potent is silence: in the past two months he has talked less and gained more in popular favor than at any time since his second inauguration. The candidates who would like to succeed him must know in their secret hearts that if they have to speak out, they will almost surely talk themselves into oblivion. So Mr. Roosevelt's little mystery is a boon to the Democratic candidates; and to the Democratic politicians it is a life-saver, protecting them from the awful necessity of making a choice in which they will be damned if they do and damned if they don't.

For the rest of us the unraveling of the mystery will bring to an end a game to which we can turn for diversion from the grim realities of the world.

As time goes on the game becomes better and better, subtler and subtler. In the beginning the hunt was as crude as the third degree compared with work of a really brilliant detective. In fact, it was no more than a blunt demand that Mr. Roosevelt give himself up and confess, accompanied by the laying of verbal traps in which it was hoped he would betray himself. But he was too tough to be bulldozed and too smart to be tricked. So the game has passed to a higher level in which some of the detectives are following the methods of Sherlock Holmes, relying on circumstantial evidence, and others the more elegant methods of M. Hercule Poirot and Lord Peter Wimsey.

Exploring The Mind To Solve Mystery

FOR THE BENEFIT of those few illiterates who may not have read the novels of Miss Agatha Christie and Miss Dorothy Sayers, it may be necessary to explain that M. Hercule Poirot and Lord Peter Wimsey rarely rely on vulgar clews but get their man by imagining how his mind must have worked. And since Mr. Roosevelt is too smart to leave fingerprints and tell-tale cigarette butts around, the only way to get him is by imagination, intuition, and brain-power. So I note that whereas Mr. Ernest Lindley still thinks he can solve the mystery by interviewing the servants at the backdoor of the palace, Mr. Mark Sullivan scorns such devices and is following Lord Peter Wimsey.

It is the best method for dealing with an accomplished suspect like Mr. Roosevelt, and after much deep thought and prolonged exposure to the gossip of Washington, I have some suggestions to offer. They are based (one) on human nature in general; (two) on the nature of Presidents in general, (three) on Mr. Roosevelt's nature in particular.

I submit that it is self-evident that any man who has been President of the United States, or only vice president of a barber shop, will, when the appointed time comes to retire, wish to feel, and have it appear, that no one can bear to have him go. For that reason there never was a President who did not want to be elected for a second term, and never was there a President, who, having served two terms, did not want to be able to refuse a third term.

The Usual Ritual Hard On The Nerves

THE TRADITION was set by George Washington, and the tradition is that a successful President is elected for two terms and then voluntarily renounces a third term. So when Gov. Landon insists publicly that Mr. Roosevelt must renounce a third term, he is running counter to human nature in general and to the Presidential tradition in particular. The ritual calls for placing the President in a position where to the infinite regret of all concerned he voluntarily renounces a third term and thus takes his historical place in the line of President Washington.

I realize, of course, that the ritual is hard on the nerves of anxious spirits: what if the incumbent should take them at their word, and say, "Thank you, I'll be delighted to accept a third term"? That came so near to happening in the case of Mr. Coolidge in 1928 that it was no joke for Mr. Hoover's managers. Nevertheless, there is no need for anxiety: the custom about the third term is one of the most nearly perfect usages of the American constitutional system.

For if the ritual requires that the President be given the opportunity to refuse a third term, the practical situation will at the same time compel him to refuse it. Such is the force of the tradition that the only man who could conceivably obtain a third term is one who convinced the country he did not want it. Nobody can obtain a third term by seeking it. The effort to get a third term would convince the country that the man must not have it; it would be the proof that he was using the power of his office to perpetuate himself in office. That would surely split his own party: it would certainly provide the opposition with the greatest of all issues, namely the defense of free institutions against personal government.

War Has Brought Out Best In Him

FOR THESE reasons it has seemed to me that the more Mr. Roosevelt re-united his party and recovered his popularity, the more certainly he would renounce a third term. Last year when his party was split, his personal prestige at low ebb, and a bipartisan coalition was working against him, I should imagine that he may have considered seriously making a fight for a third nomination. There were many indications that this was in his mind. But such a fight would never have gotten him a third election; it would have gotten him only a meager kind of revenge and the approval of Mr. Ickes.

But now the situation has been changed, not by the war but by Mr. Roosevelt's reaction to the war. The war is the thing which he understands much more clearly than he has ever understood the purchasing power of wages or the effects of deficit spending. The war is also a subject on which, because his mind is clear, his convictions are resolute. The war, therefore, has brought out the best that was in him, and he has become what he might always have been but was not, the President and not a factional leader.

One has only to read his admirable speech at the Jefferson Memorial to see how much he has risen above the animosities of his Jackson Day speeches, how evidently his great ambition is to be remembered as a President who in a critical time was above faction and above party, "a great moderator," like Washington, in bringing together discordant elements in the formation of a constitutional Nation.

The popular confidence which he has been earning since he rose to the occasion of the war will grow greater as he holds himself firmly to the line he has so wisely taken. An inevitable and necessary corollary will be a renunciation of a third term, not in ambiguous language but in plain words like Washington's. The rest will be determined by events which he could not seek to control without hopelessly dividing the Nation, which the rest of us cannot finally control until we know what the future is to bring.

Curley Offers Mass to Close Catholic U. Fete

Concludes Celebration Of 150th Year of American Hierarchy

A solemn pontifical mass celebration by the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore-Washington, in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University yesterday morning concluded a week of ceremonies and meetings in celebration of the 150th anniversary of the foundation of the Catholic hierarchy in the United States and the fiftieth anniversary of the Catholic University of America.

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States; Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia; 16 archbishops, and 59 bishops, as well as more than 2,000 of the faithful crowded into the shrine for the mass.

The prelates had participated in the three-day observance of Catholic University's semicentennial, the meeting of the university's board of trustees, and the annual meeting of the hierarchy.

The Right Rev. Mgr. Edward P. McAdams, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, outlined in his sermon the history of the Catholic Church in America since Eric, Bishop of Garda in Iceland, contacted the Norse colonists in Narraganset Bay in 1121.

He described John Carroll, who was selected the first bishop in America in 1787, as "the outstanding priest of the colonies." Carroll, he said, "was the complete man, a gentleman of a distinguished lineage—priest, patriarch, patriot."

Officiating at the mass besides Archbishop Curley were the Very Rev. James M. Campbell, assistant priest; the Rev. George Johnson and the Rev. Dr. Francis A. Mullin, deacons of honor; the Very Rev. James W. O'Brien, deacon; the Rev. Martin J. Higgins, sub-deacon; the Rev. William Lallou, master of ceremonies; the Rev. Walter J. Schmitz, S. S., assistant master of ceremonies; the Right Rev. The Changed Court

By Mark Sullivan

President To Have Majority

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT will now have five appointees on the Supreme Court, a majority of the nine.

From this, certain consequences will follow. But not necessarily the precise consequences that were anticipated when Mr. Roosevelt began his drive to change the court. (A drive that now turns out to have been unnecessary.) Attempted revolutions, in their final working out, do not always conform to the expectations of those who start them.

So far as it is possible to reduce to simplicity the basic situation created by the death of Mr. Justice Butler, it may be put thus:

The complaint of the New Dealers, two years ago and before, was that the Supreme Court, as then constituted, trespassed on Congress; that the court "legislated." Congress would pass a law. The court would hold it unconstitutional. This, in many cases, the New Dealers cried out against. They said that Congress knew the Constitution as well as the court did; that members of Congress took oaths to support the Constitution the same as the justices. Consequently, said the New Dealers, when Congress passes a law, the court ought not to invalidate it, unless the departure from the Constitution is flagrant.

Congress Relied On Court Negative

THEORETICALLY, there was much in what the New Dealers said. But practically, what happened often was this:

Congress would pass a statute, feeling that probably it was unconstitutional. If there was momentary popular demand for a measure, many Congressmen would close their eyes to their doubt of its constitutionality. They would say, in effect: "Oh, well, the Supreme Court will stop it; many voters in my district want it; it will do no harm, the Supreme Court will take care of it."

In yet another way, the system worked to the same effect. A President would ask for a measure. Members of the President's party in Congress would want to pass the measure, even though many doubted its constitutionality. Mr. Roosevelt's words were: "I hope you . . . will not permit doubts as to its constitutionality, however reasonable, to block the suggested legislation."

That is the kind of Congress Mr. Roosevelt wanted—and at that time, 1935, had. (And he wanted a court of the same kind.)

Congress Made Court 'The Goat'

THE FREQUENT willingness of Congress to pass measures whose constitutionality they doubted was well known to the court. The court deplored it. The court realized that Congress was making the court "the goat." A justice who was on the court some years ago, before the Roosevelt Administration, once said, in a private conversation: "I am tired of Congress sending over here measures which they know to be unconstitutional; I am tired of Congress 'passing the buck' to us; I think we ought to stop it; we ought to uphold a few of these measures—and make Congress understand it is just as much their business as ours to keep within the Constitution; it is their business not to vote for a measure which they know to be unconstitutional or reasonably doubtful."

But the practice went on. Congress continued to pass doubtful measures, and the Supreme Court held many of them unconstitutional. Some measures that the court held unconstitutional were on the dividing line. Some of the measures might well have been held valid in the light of changing economic conditions.

It was this that gave rise to the New Deal complaint against the court. (To the extent that the New Deal complaint was reasonable—some New Dealers wanted practically to get rid of the court, or to emasculate much of its function.)

So far as the New Deal has now given a mandate to a changed court, so far as the New Deal justices on the court reflect New Deal thought, their major mandate is this: that they shall not hold laws unconstitutional, except in the most plainly flagrant cases.

President Now Has Lost His Congress

WHAT NOW will happen? Congress—the present Congress and more certainly a future Congress—will pass conservative measures. And a court dedicated to sanctioning what Congress does, will be more or less obliged to support those conservative measures. A court that was changed for the purpose of sustaining New Deal measures will find itself sustaining anti-New Deal measures.

The present Congress, elected in 1938, has shown that it is an anti-New Deal Congress—at the least a non-New Deal Congress. It revised WPA, in a way Mr. Roosevelt did not want. It revised other New Deal measures. It rejected utterly the New Deal policy of spending. It reduced powers the President had. The Senate refused confirmation of extreme New Deal appointees.

This same Congress, in its session beginning next January, will go further in trimming down the New Deal. It will reduce the scope of the labor relations law, reduce the power of the Labor Board. It will revise other New Deal laws. It will decline to re-enact New Deal laws that come to an end.

Mr. Roosevelt has got his court—but lost his Congress.

And the changed court will be bound by the policy of greater deference to what Congress does. A court changed for the purpose of extending the New Deal, will find itself limiting the New Deal. If the court interprets laws in a way that a conservative Congress does not like, the Congress will change the laws, and insist on the court conforming. This condition will hold not only through the present Congress but in future Congresses that will be even more conservative.

"San Francisco is tired of Bridges," Rossi told the President. "San Francisco must mark time while this man spreads his communistic gospel of labor unrest and paralysis of business."

The Once Over

The Dining Out Problem

The expensive table d'hote dinner is on its last frog legs, hotel and restaurant men admitted at a culinary convention in New York the other night. This, coupled with the Frenchified menu, is why so many hotel dining rooms have that "halt-who-goes-there?" atmosphere, according to prominent speakers.

More chow at lower prices and with less fol de rol is the need in most hotel restaurants.

The trouble with those menus is that the customer can't tell for certain whether he is ordering a meal or taking part in a quiz program.

Not so many years ago the hotel restaurants were the right places to dine. That was in the era when dining out was quite a lark anyhow and before so many small restaurants and lunch rooms blossomed on the streets of any city that it became quite an adventure to eat home.

The small restaurant swept the country (and much of the resultant dust went into the hamburgers), but it gave the hungry man plenty of meat and potato at cut rates and in simple English.

Then came the cafeteria blight. These cash-and-carry beaneries were hard on the feet and trying on the nerves. They combined slumming, pedestrianism and eating and did it in the lower brackets. But they taught the public that all steak dinners needn't cost $3.25 with an extra charge for rolls

Some terrible cooking was introduced to the public within this period and a man who could eat regularly at some of these academies of advanced indigestion had to have a stomach like a concrete mixer.

The hotel restaurant men should have staged a counter-attack by the mere process of making it less involved to eat with them. But they stuck to the table d'hote which made $1.80 the bottom rate for a midget dinner, clung to the French language and continued to regard rolls and butter as extra equipment.

They have been slow to realize that nothing drives the trade away like the association of a square meal with a Federal loan.

Speeches at the recent convention indicate that biggies are waking up. But the customers will be cautious up to the time they see on the menu the simple inscription "Lamb Stew . . . 60c . . . No Charge for Bread" instead of the traditional "Ragout d'agneau a la Indienne . . . $1.65 . . . Butter by Appointment Only."

Gourmets Gather Monday to Feast

Members of the Society of Friends of Escoffier, who take food to their souls while their eyes gleam on culinary symphonies, will meet Monday night at the Mayflower Hotel. Chef Nicholas Marchitelli will be on trial.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Cutting Calories Is Dangerous if Carried Too Far; Exercise Also Is Needed

It takes quite a while to experience the completely devastating effect of a diet that is short in everything — vitamins, minerals and protein, as well as calories. But gradually these reducers begin to realize that they are fatigued most of the time, that their dispositions are in shreds, and that they don't look as well as they did before they started reducing.

Be sensible. Don't try to reduce on less than 1,000 calories a day—it takes that many to give you those vitally important protective foods that I'm always raving about! If you take considerably less food than will cover your basal requirements, your system is subjected to a terrific strain. Your skin suffers. Your eyes lose their sparkle. If this goes on, you will look haggard—and older.

The more you can eat and reduce, the better you will look and feel, for the more food you can take on a reducing diet, the higher your vitality will be. Losing weight on plenty of food requires two things: Consistent exercise and sufficient time for reducing.

The exercise you take will help you to burn more calories and to improve muscle tone. It will give you the firm, youthfully rounded and beautifully proportioned figure which is your main reason for reducing.

If you take your time in reducing there will be no sudden depletion of the cushion of fat just underneath the skin. A sudden loss in this fatty tissue will make the skin look wrinkled and baggy —particularly the skin of the face and throat. But if you reduce slowly, the skin has a chance to regain its youthful tone, and it contracts normally to fit your decreased size. For the sake of your skin—if not your health—you should not average a loss of more than two pounds a week.

You can average a loss of one to two pounds a week on menus ranging from 1,000 to 1,200 calories per day. That number of calories allows for the inclusion of all the foods important to your vitality and good looks. Don't try to reduce on less.

16 Unusually Pretty Stewardesses-to-Be In School at Airport

By Alice Hughes

OUR GREAT NEW airport at North Beach is geting busier every minute, with big airplanes stocking the hangars with equipment and many ships perfecting takeoffs and landings on the field. The population of the $40,000,000 plant has now been increased by 16 unusually pretty girls, who are not seeing sights, but are studying their lessons. American Airlines has just opened its school for new stewardesses with Prof. Hazel Brooks, chief stewardess, as boss of the faculty. Miss Brooks certainly knows her business, for she flew 250,000 miles in her first two years as a stewardess. She has spent the last two years as a teacher.

Alice Hughes

"At present we are instructing them in all kinds of things, such as the manners of an airline stewardess and many subjects which will enable them to answer passengers intelligently. They also get the full list of company regulations, such as the one prohibiting smoking in uniform."

The commonest questions the girls find, are "How high are we?", "How fast are we going?", and "When do we eat?" In connection with the last they must learn to tell passengers why some kinds of food are not served in airplanes, such as bananas, which turn black at 10,000 feet, and sponge cake, which completely collapses in the air.

The girls all are registered nurses, under 5 feet 5 inches and 120 pounds, unmarried and between 21 and 26 years old. The youngest girl in the class is Therma Turner, 22, of St. Louis. The prettiest blonde seems to be Catherine Bristline, of Perrysburg, Ohio, who used to model nurse's uniforms when not taking pulses herself. The line is changing her last name to Warns. Their top pay after three years is $140 a month, but few of them stay that long. Their average service is a year and a half; then, says Prexy Brooks, they get married.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Brenda Ducky Darling Frazier keeps creeping into the gossip columns, even though she has graduated from the debutante class. One story is that she is going to take a crack at the movies. Another says that she is going to marry Peter Arno, the twice-married cartoonist and man about town. Pete is a great deal older than the little Frazier girl . . . .

The great Garbo mystery has not yet been solved as this is written. The Great One's family name is Gustafson, and three of those arrived here on the liner Stavangerfjord the other day. Reporters figured they were Greta's mamma, her brother, Sven, and his wife. They vanished the minute after the ship docked but their baggage was found to be ticketed for Inglewood, Calif. They conducted themselves as mysteriously as Garbo herself, and it is quite possible they are the real Gustafsons.

THE BIGGEST AID to good grooming I've seen lately is a very tiny electric presser, which is just the thing to sharpen up skirt pleats and put a keen edge on the trouser creases of the boys. This miniature gadget is not much larger than an electric razer and you just fit the jaws over the fold or edge of the garment and slide the presser along it. No moisture or pressure is needed. Seems to me like a mighty handy stunt.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman of 36 Asks Why She Continuously Attracts 'Wrong People' Into Her Affairs

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: All my life, and I am 36, I have been attracting the wrong people into my affairs and associations. Frankly, this fact is a puzzle to me because, honestly, I do nothing to encourage them. Men whom I have never seen before and would not be interested in seeing again, try to strike up an acquaintance with me. Naturally, they get no further than their initial attempt, but I cannot unerstand why they attempt it. I don't look flirtatious and I don't act that way, as I was brought up in an old-fashioned home, firmly believing in proper introductions and proper conduct. Women, too, in whom I'm not interested and whom I would not care to cultivate, attach themselves to me and try to further their interests through me.

My less successful relatives and other persons at distant points who "knew me when," write me long and endearing letters which usually wind up with a request for something, which they think my influence or pocketbook can provide. It is my belief that the person who wants something should take steps to get it for himself, rather than secure it through favoritism or "pull."

I have a responsible position, and apparently the major portion of the female personnel of the office thinks I have a "stand in" with those higher up, so whenever they want a raise in salary, a better position, etc., their attitude of "playing up" to me is so obvious as to be ridiculous. Also, their attitude is unfair, because I do not "stand in" with my employers and would never attempt to influence their opinions for or against anyone in the office.

What do you think is the matter with me? What reasons can you offer why people take me for an "easy mark?" I take my friendships very seriously and prefer to select my associates, rather than be dragged into acquaintanceship with all and sundry. Most of the time, I find that my tastes and interests are far above those of people who try to "wish themselves off" on me, so I can't see why they want my company in the first place. Opposites may attract, but the interest seldom holds. I feel sure that your theories will be helpful.

PUZZLED.

Desire to Patronize Lesser Individuals

DEAR PUZZLED: I believe it was Henry Thoreau who said that the faults we find in others are evoked by faults in ourselves (or words to that effect). Thus, your involuntary appeal to second-rate individuals may mean that unconsciously you make a bid for their attention, possibly because you enjoy patronizing them, as a means of bolstering your insecure self-esteem. Perhaps you are the victim of an "inferiority feeling," a possibility suggested by your conscious preference for the society of "important people"—that is to say, persons of incontrovertible prestige or distinction.

You say that men you have never seen before and would not be interested in seeing again, try to strike up an acquaintance with you. If you are accosted by strange men in public places, the fault must be largely your own. You must be exerting an unaware hungry-eyed "come hither." But if, as I assume, you mean men whom you have met by chance in a business way, then you are being stuffy in thinking formal introductions are necessary before the conversation can take a pleasant, not-too-intrusively personal turn.

There is a certain rigorous artificiality, too, about your assumption that one doesn't and shouldn't achieve an affable social exchange with persons whose tastes and interests are dissimilar. At the core of every emotionally stable individual's life there are a few richly satisfying human relationships, but he also has cordial acquaintances by the dozens, scores and sometimes hundreds. Moreover, every person who gives the appearance of managing his affairs with easy competence, invariably attracts a following of frankly befuddled hopefuls, desirous of hitching their wagons to his star.

The person of mature mind, who has achieved some measure of success, philosophically adjusts himself to the continuing experience of the ingratiating approach; helps everyone he can in every way he can, without imperiling his own security or breaking faith in any direction; and avoids the mistake of complacently comparing himself with those who may have fewer talents or occupy less conspicuous positions. It is said of this sort of person that, "his success hasn't gone to his head. But I wonder if you deserve this particular tribute?

There appears to be a curious mixture of conceit and deprecation in your attitude toward yourself, which probably is reflected in an equally curious blend of (a) snobbish patronage of your coworkers, relatives and old friends "back home," and (b) diligent cultivation of your supposed "betters" in society and the professions.

All that is "the matter" with you, I think, is that you take yourself entirely too seriously, probably for lack of a sufficiency of responsive "love objects" in your private life to absorb your emotional energies. You are studying the reactions of all your associates for evidence to support your wistful theory that you really are a very special kind of person.

The best advice I can give you is to "forget yourself" and accept the fact that when any two human beings are drawn together it is because of a sense of need, which may be either mutually or only one-sidedly felt. What you are trying to acquire, through meticulously "selecting" your associates, others are trying to acquire similarly from you. So you see you aren't so very different from them, after all.

Fit Mood to Bath And Troubles Vanish In Perfumed Foam

Fit the mood to the bath or better still induce the mood that you wish to command at a specific time with a bath. It can be done. Even the morning hang-over from too much indulgence in alcohol or overwork or overplay vanishes in the steaming ammonia vapors that are the bases for two new bathing preparations that have just been introduced to Washington.

"Hangover" and "Pick-Me-Up" are twin preparations. The first has the delicate fresh scent of violets and the latter the fragrance of carnations. These twins help to relieve extreme physical depression caused by lack of sleep, overexercise or too much alcohol. Only 10 minutes is required to turn the trick.

Healthy Feet Add to Beauty Of Women

Chiropodists Here In Session Give Rules for Care

By Marshall Adams

The Post Fashion Editor.

THE GREATEST enemy of a beautiful, happy face is neither age nor an unhappy marital state. It's feet. Yes, troublesome, worried feet can rob the most beautiful woman of her serenity and poise. The smartest costume can also lose its appeal if the wearer limps about in tight, silly shoes and the look of an Inquisition martyr.

Marshall Adams

This is the opinion of local podiatrists who will participate in the Middle Atlantic Association of Chiropodists, which will hold forth in foot-problem discussions at the Washington Hotel tomorrow. They insist there is not a face cream made that can do anything for the facial furrows occasioned by foot distress.

A healthy foot, reflected always in the face, is free of corns, calluses, weak arches and "hammer toes," according to podiatrists. Research has proved that fatigue, legache, backache and nervousness, as well as loss of disposition, are a few of the results if feet don't belong in the above state of health. Realizing that many of us may be worried through ignorance rather than laziness, we prevailed upon the neatly shod public information director of the Chiropodists Association to provide the following foot rules.

Foot Health Rules

Wear only footwear tuned to the occasion. Oxfords for walking and household chores. High but well-proportioned heels for afternoon and evening.

After the usual routine of office or desk or counter, refresh feet with a hot and cold bath and gentle upward massage with a soothing lotion. Follow with a dash of alcohol and top with an antiseptic foot powder. Always dry between toes and if clusters of blisters appear, seek professional care, as it is unsafe to tamper with these sensitive "unnecessaryles."

Beware the family razor blade on corn and calluses and steer clear of medications of which you are ignorant.

Look to your toenails. Everyone else does these days, with open-toed evening sandals still prominent. Clip the nails practically straight across—not too short. The delicate nail bed needs protection and if it hurts a bit, keep the manicure scissors away. Insert a wisp of cotton under the nail in the groove with an orange stick. If pain gets acute, consult a reliable podiatrist at once.

Exercises Help

Today's chiropodist profession is a far cry from its rise 20 years ago when the "corn doctor" had little schooling, one sharp tool and a bottle of iodine to serve as credentials. Now alert podiatrists have even developed exercises, which if done slowly and consistently each day, can add beauty as well as comfort to the feet. Here they are

Walk around the dining room table on the outer borders of the feet several times with feet turned outward in opposition to the inward tilt most women give their feet while walking. This exercises leg muscles and equalizes and balances ordinary foot habits.

When standing, always keep the feet parallel and the weight of the body equally on two feet. Walk with toes straight ahead, feet parallel. This is really a 12-hour daily exercise, as the ball of the foot and the forefoot is strengthened and muscles limbered this way.

George Messersmiths Entertain at Tea

Diplomatic Notables Attend Party, Which Is Held at Home in Georgetown; Jose De Lasa Honors Princess Hohenlohe

Yesterday was a busy day for Capital society. For many of them, the first stop of the afternoon was at the home of the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George Messersmith, who entertained at a tea at their residence on Twenty-ninth street in Georgetown.

This house, one of the most attractive in this old part of the city, was originally two homes, which were joined together and remodeled several years ago. The drawing room is unusually large, with walls tinted a soft green, and red curtains. Mr. and Mrs. Messersmith received in this room, standing in front of the big fireplace. The hostess wore a green velvet dress, floor length, with flowers at the neck.

There were many diplomats present. The Peruvian Ambassador, Manuel de Freyre y Santander, who is now dean of the Diplomatic Corps, was an early arrival. Mme. Bostrom, wife of the Swedish Minister, was present, wearing a black dress and hat and a furpiece.

Tea and coffee were served in the patio. Beyond the patio is the dining room, where several of Mrs. Messersmith's friends took turns pouring tea and coffee. There were vases of yellow and rust-colored chrysanthemums everywhere, and the tea table was centered with a bowl of red roses.

Witold Wankowicz Attends Party

Witold Wankowicz, Counselor of the Polish Embassy, was present, though his popular wife was unable to attend, as she was busy hanging curtains for their new home. M. and Mme. Wankowicz have given up their house on Buchanan street and have taken a small apartment at the Argonne.

Mrs. Sumner Welles, wife of the Undersecretary of State, was an early arrival, wearing a brief fur jacket over her frock, and a bright, red velvet turban. Others present from the State Department included Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward, George T. Summerlin, chief of Protocol; Mr. and Mrs. Julian Harrington, Glen Abbey, and several members of the Foreign Service School.

Others included Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, who wore a yellow chrysanthemum pinned to her black fur coat; Mr. and Mrs. J. Lawrence Houghteling, the latter smart in a beige dress with brown gloves and a scarf of sables; Mme. Naoumoff, wife of the Bulgarian Minister; Clarence Hewes, accompanied by his attractive debutante niece, Miss Ellen Flowerree, and the Misses Patten.

One of the smartest dresses there was worn by Mrs. Alexander Legare. Black, simply made, it had red on the shoulders to match her red and black hat. Mr. and Mrs. Legare have recently returned from York Harbor, Me., and will be here until after Christmas, when they will go to their plantation in South Carolina.

Also at the party were Mrs. Edwin Watson, wife of the President's secretary and military aide, Gen. Watson; Miss Irene Boyle, Lewis Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Page, Mrs. Herbert Feis, and many others.

Princess Hohenlohe Is Guest of Honor

GUESTS of honor at a similar party yesterday afternoon were Princess Hohenlohe, daughter of Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, and her husband, Prince Hohenlohe, who recently arrived to serve as assistant to the Polish Military Attache here. Host was Jose de Lasa, of the Cuban Embassy, who entertained at the Georgetown home of his embassy colleague, Roberto Mendoza.

Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock was among the guests. Others included Miss Ann Mitchell, who is here from New York for the week-end; Miss Dolly Corbin, another New Yorker, formerly a resident of Washington, and Charles Gaines.

Mrs. Archibald MacLeish gathered a few friends in yesterday afternoon at tea time in honor of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth MacLeish, who have also come to Washington to make their home.

Mr. and Mrs. MacLeish have taken a most attractive house in Georgetown, on Thirty-third street. Guests yesterday gathered in the living room upstairs, which has green walls and red curtains.

Mrs. MacLeish, jr., who is a most attractive blonde, wore a black dress. The hostess chose a beige frock. Among those who dropped in were Justice Felix Frankfurter, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Acheson, Miss Jane Acheson, and several entertaining young bachelors.

Her brother, Archie Randolph, whose main interest is aviation, is delighted with his new job as pilot for a well-known airline and will fly in the East. Miss Aileen Harris, who has spent the past six weeks in San Francisco, recently returned East and now is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Douglas Laing, in Herndon, Va.

Navy Notables Are Guests Of the Starks' 'At Home'

A herd of ebony elephants marched solemnly down the mantlepiece and watched the gay throng around the tea table yesterday afternoon during the second "at home" of the season given by the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Harold R. Stark at their quarters on Observatory Hill. Of the elephants—an important part of the household—more later.

Special guests at yesterday afternoon's reception, which was from 5 to 7, were the officers and ladies of the Marine Corps and from several of the Navy's departments.

Receiving with Admiral and Mrs. Stark in the drawing room were the Commandant of the Marine Corps, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb and Mrs. Holcomb. Mrs. Stark was gowned in a floor-length model of hunter green, fashioned with a bodice of green and gold lame. With it she wore a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Holcomb was wearing a full length tea gown, with a black skirt and a figured bodice of a red and gold lame flower pattern. Her corsage was of gardenias.

Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. Ray Spear, wife of Admiral Spear; Mrs. A. H. Van Keuren, wife of Admiral Van Keuren; Mrs. S. M. Robinson, wife of Admiral Robinson; Mrs. John C. Beaumont, wife of Gen. Beaumont; Mrs. R. B. Putnam, wife of Gen. Putnam; Mrs. Seth Williams, wife of Gen. Williams, Mrs. W. D. Sharp and Mrs. Henry Williams.

Mrs. W. R. Smedberg Assists in Receiving

At the punch bowl were Mrs. Albert Mumma, Mrs. Jack Juhan, Mrs. Charles Welburn and Mrs. J. J. Crane.

Back to the elephants, though a dozen or more, ranging from 1 inch to a foot high, march across the mantle in the dining room, there are more than 20 scattered about the house. Admiral Stark collected them in Bombay when he was assigned to the U. S. S. Minnesota during the administration of Theodore Roosevelt. According to Mrs. Stark, "Wherever we went in the world, when the elephants made their appearance, the children knew we had stopped traveling and had arrived at a new home."

Col. Rupertus and Wife Are Present

Noted among the guests during the afternoon were the Commandant of Marine Barracks Col. William Rupertus and Mrs. Rupertus. She was gowned in a fireman-red frock with a necklace of strands of twisted pearls and a small veiled pancake hat. Col. and Mrs. Henry Larson were among the early arrivals, as were Gen. John C. Beaumont and Gen. Seth Williams, whose wives were pouring.

Also noted were Col. and Mrs. James L. Underhill, Maj. and Mrs. W. A. Wachtler, Maj. and Mrs. Luther A. Brown, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Hawley Garvin, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Joseph Knighton, Capt. and Mrs. S. S. Jack and Admiral S. M. Robinson.

Capt. Lucius Dunn, U. S. Navy, and Mrs. Dunn, came down from New York. Others included Col. and Mrs. A. A. Vandegrift, Maj. and Mrs. Randall Pate, Col. and Mrs. Samuel L. Cumming, Col. and Mrs. Harry Schmidt, Col. and Mrs. P. F. Geiger, Commander and Mrs. B. M. Young, Lieut. and Mrs. William L. Mrs. Mark Sullivan, jr., poured tea and Miss Elsie Ekengren also assisted the hostess. Mrs. Peters' attractive little Georgetown house has a living room done in white and plum color, and white chrysanthemums were used for decorations. The hostess wore a tailored green wool frock.

Among the guests were Mrs. John R. Williams, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Lee Ballard, cousin of the hostess, who is visiting in Washington, her daughter, Miss Jeanne Ballard, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Colt de Wolfe, Mrs. J. E. Murdock and several others.

Col. Mrs. Davis Plan 'At Home' For Daughter

Col. and Mrs. Robert Davis have issued invitations for an at-home Wednesday, November 29, from 4:30 to 7 p. m., when their daughter, Miss Dita Davis, will make her bow to society.

Inclosed with the cards are small maps which show the way to the Davis home at 3800 Columbia pike, Arlington, Va.

One of Miss Davis' sisters, Barbara Davis, made her debut here several seasons ago. Another of her sisters is Mrs. Raymond Soderberg, of Falls Church, and still another is the widow of Lieut. Paul Greenhalgh, U. S. A.

Col. and Mrs. Davis and their debutante daughter arrived here a few weeks ago from Los Angeles, where they have spent much time in recent years. Miss Davis, who has exceptional talent as a musician, has inherited this from her mother, who is widely known as Edwina McCarty Davis, musician and composer.

Harry Darlington to Sail With Adm. Byrd On Barkentine Bear for the Antarctic

HARRY DARLINGTON, son of Mrs. George Garrett, of Washington and Middleburg, Va., will sail with Admiral Byrd for the Antarctic on the barkenteine Bear. Mr. Darlington, who has a position in New York, asked if he could apply for permission to go on the famed expedition. Because he thought there was not the slightest chance of Harry getting on the list—as thousands of boys are clamoring to go—his superior gave him permission to try. Luckily however, the would-be adventurer got an interview with the admiral. A short time ago he heard that he was accepted, and is ready whenever the ship sails.

If Harry is unable to come to Washington before sailing, his mother and sister, Elaine Darlington, will see him off. Mr. Darlington spends much of his time in Virginia hunting at his mother's home, Chilly Bleak.

The marriage of Miss Susan Roy Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Carter, of Richmond and Millwood, Clarke County, to Felding Lewis Willic ns will take place this afternoon at Grace and Holy Trinity Episcopal Church in Richmond at 4 o'clock. Mr. Williams is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis C. Williams, of Richmond.

THE REV. BEVERLEY M. BOYD, rector, will officiate. Mrs. Walter Armistead Williams, of Richmond, will be matron of honor. Bridesmaids will be Miss Louise Burke, of this city, cousin of the bride; Miss Elizabeth Patterson, Miss Nancy Wortham and Miss Katherine Thomason, all of Richmond.

Richard B. Williams will be his brother's best man, and ushers will be William L. Clay, jr., of New York; R. Turner Arrington, jr., Ormond T. Jamerson, Samuel S. Jackson and Coleman Worth, jr., all of Richmond, and the bridegroom's brothers, the Rev. Peyton Williams, of McLean, the Rev. John Page Williams, of Groton, Mass., and Armistead Williams, of the University of Virginia.

There will be a reception at the Commonwealth Club on Franklin street after the ceremony. The bride and her family spend their summers at their home, Rosney, in Clarke County, where they are well known in the hunt country. She is the niece of Mr. and Mrs. H. Rozier Dulaney, as well as Dr. and Mrs. John Burke, of this city.

Among those going to Richmond today for the ceremony will be the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Atkinson; Miss Neville Atkinson and Miss Elizabeth Mayo Atkinson, of Middleburg. Still others planning to attend are Mr. and Mrs. Algernon Craven, of Charlottesville; Dr. and Mrs. Burke, Mrs. H. Rozier Dulaney, who will be accompanied by Mrs. Charles P. Howze, of McLean; Mrs. Roy Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Post Mitchell, Miss Agnes Mitchell, Roland Mitchell, Mrs. Edward Jenkins, all of Millwood; Mr. and Mrs. William Beverley, Mr. and Mrs. William Bell Watkins and Mrs. Karl Boyed, of Berryville.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT of the marriage of Miss Mary Branson Coltrane Dusch to George Benoit on Wednesday at Fredericksburg, Va., is of great interest in the hunting circles. Mr. Benoit is well known as a sportsman. He keeps a good string of horses which he shows on the Virginia circuit and hunts with different packs. His home, Snowden, near Fredericksburg, is one of the lovliest estates in Virginia. He is a member of the Fairfax Hunt, and last season went out frequently with Middleburg Hunt. After their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs Benoit will be at home at Snowden.

Hugenot Society To Lunch Today

Mme. Cantacuzene and Miss Lillian Chenoweth, State regent of the D. A. R., will be guests of honor at a luncheon of the Huguenot Society of Washington at the Highlands today. Mrs. Frank B. Steele will preside and Mme. Cantacuzene will speak briefly of her experiences in returning from Europe after war was declared.

The meeting will open the society's season and the luncheon will be followed by a regular business session.

The Huguenot Society of Washington holds only three program meetings aside from its annual meeting in April. A special commemofative church service was held October 15 at the Washington Cathedral. Other meetings will occur in January and March. The society includes in its jurisdiction the nearby States of Virginia and Maryland, and has a membership of nearly 250, including a number of nonresidents. It is affiliated with the Federation of Huguenot Societies in America, made up of member societies in many States, and of which Mrs. Steele is second vice president. Mrs. Joseph S. Wall and Miss Maud B. Morris, officers in the local society, are members of the council of the federation.

G. O. P. Women Prepare To Back Party's Plans

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Silent on "favorite sons" and planks in the party platform, members of the advisory committee of the Federation of Republican Women's Clubs, in session here yesterday, readily made pledges to support both the party's Presidential nominee and its policies. They also expressed confidence as to the outcome of the election in 1940.

Miss Marion E. Martin, vice chairman of the Republican National Committee and executive secretary of the federation, introduced representatives of the Washington press to members of the advisory committee at a conference held at the close of the morning session. Mrs. James R. Arneill, jr., of Denver, young and attractive president of the federation, sat at the head of a long table, around which the other committee members were gathered—all older women than their presiding officer and some of them more willing to discuss their views than she.

Although the women, both in the regular party organization and in the Federation of Republican Women's Clubs, are working steadily toward equal representation in the party councils—something they secured last year in Wyoming—they are not taking a hand in policy-making except through their national convention delegates.

"We are not here to decide policies," said Mrs. Arneill, "we will support our party and its candidate, whoever he is."

G. O. P. Meetings Gain Popularity

She added that there has never been a time in history before election when Republican meetings were as popular as they are now. The attendance everywhere has far exceeded expectations; all the rallies have "spread out into larger halls and buildings."

Miss Jane Todd, vice chairman of the New York State Republican Committee and head of the Federation of Republican Women's Clubs there, said that daily, from all counties of the State, Democratic women were lining up with the Republicans in their campaign for "a change in Government." "They are not leaving their party, but are working with us against the Administration," Miss Todd explained.

Replying to a question as to whether the women favored a liberal or a conservative trend in policy, Miss Martin asserted the Republican Party had always been liberal in that it has always stood for a protection of rights and freedom. "But we do not believe in a strong paternal government and all the influence the women can bring to bear against it will be brought," she declared.

Clubs to Study National Debt

The clubs have covered, in their study programs, the history of the Republican, Democratic and third parties; foreign affairs and the United States policy, and shift from agrarian to urban population. Next they will study the national debt, money and taxation.

Mrs. Arneill named Mrs. Humbert B. Powell, of Devon, Pa., chairman of the committee on program, and Mrs. Charles W. Weis, of Rochester, N. Y., as chairman of the committee on ways and means.

Miss Martin reported to the advisory committee that more than 600 new clubs had been admitted to the federation since the initial meeting of the organization. Of these, she said, 564 are member clubs of State-wide Republican women's organizations in Iowa, New Mexico, New York, West Virginia and Wyoming. The remainder are individual clubs scattered throughout other States.

In addition to Mrs. Powell, Mrs. Arneill named to the committee on program Mrs. J. Don Alexander, of Colorado; Mrs. Gordon E. Townsend, of Michigan; Mrs. Ed Graham, of Kansas, and Mrs. Grace R. Andrews, of Connecticut.

Those named to the committee on ways and means, in addition to Mrs. Weis, were Mrs. A. Edna Pitts, of Maryland, and Mrs. Joseph Dellinger, of this city.

Mrs. Fred T. Murphy, of Grosse Pointe, Mich., was appointed as chairman of the committee on organization extension, with Mrs. A. G. Natwick, of Washington, and Mrs. F. W. Dickey, of Wisconsin, as other members.

Mrs. Arneill selected Mrs. Albert Vestal, of Anderson, Ind., as chairman of the committee on publicity, assisted by Mrs. Helen Greenwood, of Pennsylvania, and Mrs. Zilpha Estcort, of California.

In attendance at yesterday's meeting, in addition to Mrs. Arneill and Miss Martin, were the chairmen of the four committees and Mrs. William E. Scott, Washington, secretary of the national Federation; Mrs. Charles W. Lewis, Baltimore, treasurer; Mrs. Edward E. Gann, president of the local League of Republican Women; Mrs. Eleanor B. Snodgrass, Nashville, Ind.; Mrs. Julia Gaylord, Lansing, Mich.; Mrs. William Chase, Riverdale, Md.; Mrs. Clarence Mitchell, Far Hills, N. J.; Mrs. Ann S. Wilson, Huntington, W. Va., and Miss Todd, Tarrytown, N. Y.

Golden Jubilee Reception and Tea Held at Washington Club; Gowns Date From 1724 to Period of Gay '90s

Trains were underfoot and willow plumes overhead yesterday at the annual reception and tea of the Twentieth Century Club, held at the Washington Club from 4 to 6 p. m. Costumes of other eras were worn by members in observance of the golden jubilee year of the organization—one of the oldest women's clubs in Washington.

Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, past president and chairman of the golden jubilee committee, greeted guests at the head of the steps as they arrived. She wore the costume worn at her wedding by her mother-in-law. It was of pink, opalescent satin with a jabot of lace, worn under a redingote of royal purple velvet, with a train, and with a matching hat, trimmed in plumes. Assisting her were Mrs. Alfred Brooks, club historian, wearing a white brocade cape, a period gown and a bonnet which had belonged to Mrs. Sidwell, of Sidwell Friends School; Mrs. Richard D. Stimson, chairman of the social committee, in a point d'esprit frock of the Gay '90's, and Mrs. P. Thomas West, chairman of the Gallinger Hospital committee, who was not in costume.

Mrs. Edward G. Montgomery, club president, wore another gown which had been Mrs. Smith's mother-in-law's. It was a Paris costume, white, with a panelled flower design in blue, made with a Watteau pleat and train behind, and opening down the front over an underskirt of real lace.

Receiving with Mrs. Montgomery were other officers, Mrs. Larrence Martin, first vice president, who did not dress in costume; Mrs. Francis M. Goodwin, second vice president, who wore a black velvet redingote dress with a picture hat trimmed in black and white willow plumes; Mrs. Stanley Young, recording secretary, whose gown had belonged to Mme. Duzois and was made in Paris 50 years ago, with tiers of flounces down the front and a bustle behind; Mrs. Ryland C. Bryant, treasurer, who wore white lace with a train, and Mrs. W. Hayes Yeager, assistant treasurer, also in white.

Miss Emma Strider, who made the introductions, was in jet-trimmed black brocade. She was assisted by Mrs. George Oliver Gillingham and Mrs. Eugene Whitmore.

Among other interesting gowns was a black brocaded velvet, worn by Mrs. H. T. A. Lemon, with which she had a quaint bonnet tied with ribbons beneath her chin. Mrs. Lyman B. Swormstedt wore a soft blue dress which had been her mother's and a beautiful white lace shawl. Mrs. D. Agnew Greenlees was in a dark red brocade, made in 1724, and wore her hair in curls to her shoulders, after the fashion of that period.

Mrs. Frederic E. Farrington was dressed in egg-shell brocade with a lamme shawl which was her father's wedding gift to her mother.

A deep red velvet dress which had belonged to her mother, Mrs. Alexander Graham Bell, was worn by Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor with a small ermine muff and stole.

Mrs. Fred Hopkins was the only "man" in the company. She was dressed in the wedding suit of her father-in-law and carried his watch and chain.

Among other costumes were those worn by Mrs. W. W. Husband, Mrs. Stephen Olop, and Mrs. Virgil Jackson. These were from Mrs. Husband's collection.

Most of the treasures, however, were selected on her flight to Hongkong two years ago, and during her stay in the Far East last summer, after a round-trip flight to Paris aboard the Atlantic Clipper in June.

Mrs. Loule Bean, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Edward R. Burke, is president of the Washington City Association of Theta Upsilon, and is in charge of the luncheon. Mrs. Dix Price will preside.

Carrie C. Catt's Portrait Given To Smithsonian

The official portrait of Carrie Chapman Catt, painted by Mary Foote in 1927, took its place in the Smithsonian Institution yesterday with the portraits of three other suffrage leaders, Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Dr. Anna Howard Shaw.

Presentation of this portrait, gift to the Smithsonian from Mrs. Stanley McCormick, of Chicago, was made by the board of the National League of Women Voters. Mrs. Catt, president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association from 1915, founded the league and still is its honorary president.

In a short speech of tribute, Miss Marguerite M. Wells, president of the National League of Women Voters, recalled the stirring address made by Mrs. Catt at the women's suffrage "Jubilee Convention" at St. Louis 20 years ago, the year before national suffrage was won and soon after the end of the great war.

"We had hoped to make it a 'Victory Convention,'" said Miss Wells. "But the suffrage amendment to the Constitution lacked one vote of passing the Senate. The far-seeing Mrs. Catt then said that the most patriotic memorial which could be given the suffrage crusade would be 'a League of Women Voters to finish the fight and aid in the reconstruction of the Nation.'"

The portrait was accepted for the Smithsonian by Dr. Alexander Wetmore, assistant secretary of the institution in charge of the United States National Museum.

Dr. Rasmussen Predicts Surge Of Religion

Says Scandinavians See Church as Bulwark For Their Democracy

Despite the European war, Scandinavians feel that a great surge of religion is about to sweep that stronghold of Lutheranism.

That is the observation of Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen, pastor of Lutheran Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, just back from Europe with his wife and children, Mary Elizabeth and Carl, jr. Somewhat disappointed because the war caused cancellation of his plans to study at the University of Lund, Sweden, he found time to study at the University of Copenhagen and met many church dignitaries.

Between landing at Cherbourg August 28, on eve of the war's outbreak, and arrival in Denmark, where even the intervention of church and diplomatic officials could secure no visa into Sweden, the clergyman and his family found plenty of adventure.

Heard Only One "Heil"

But last night at their home at 1441 Kennedy street northwest, they said their stopover in the land of Adolf Hitler convinced them the German people do not want war.

They reached Germany several days before the invasion of Poland, visiting Hamburg, Cologne and Aachen.

"I only heard one 'Heil Hitler'," declared Carl, jr., "and that came from some petty official."

Many of the German people with whom he came in contact wanted to know how America and other countries were feeling about the war situation, said Dr. Rasmussen.

Nazi Example Warns Labor

It was with some difficulty that the party entered Denmark, said Dr. Rasmussen, as a ban on visas was just about to be enforced.

The clergyman attributed the feeling of a coming wave of religion to a new responsibility in the ranks of labor and a rise of friendliness between governments and religion. "The ranks of labor have taken warning of what happened in Germany, and feel that a free church is one of democracy's greatest bulwarks," said he.

Among church leaders he was privileged to meet were Dr. Fuglsang-Damgaard, Bishop of Copenhagen; Dr. Paul Stiftproust Bridersen, and Dr. Michael Neiiendam, the Danish royal chaplain.

While the trip to Europe required only 4½ days, the return voyage took 16½ days, said the pastor. He and his family arrived in New York Monday.

12-Story Building 'Lifted' by Explosion Attributed to Gas

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, Nov. 17.—An explosion which witnesses said seemed to lift, then drop a 12-story office building, spread terror among hundreds of persons in the downtown business district today. Sixteen were injured, two seriously.

Scores of late workers in the Grand Avenue Temple Building told of feeling the blast rock the entire structure. Ceilings were cracked as were pillars in the auditorium, which houses a Methodist church.

Sixty feet of sidewalk was buckled. Plate glass windows along the block were shattered. The explosion left a hole 6 feet deep at the main entrance.

Most seriously injured were Mrs. Lee Hardwick, 23, daughter-in-law of Fire Chief T. J. Hardwick, and Richard Steele, 19.

Steele told officers the blast occurred as he lighted a match to search for coins which had rolled under a table in the basement.

M. C. Mustaine, assistant fire chief, said the explosion "undoubtedly" was caused by gas, the source of which he had not been able to determine.

Tips Listed on Thanks Turkey For Inexperienced Brides

While Belligerents in Europe Are Teaching Young Husbands to Wield Bayonets. U. S. Admoinshes Them on Art of Carving

Within a week thousand of young men will come of age as master craftsmen of the knife and fork, and thousands of young wives will crown their apprenticeship in the kitchen, when for the first time young couples place before their families and friends the splendor of the Thanksgiving turkey.

Kindly but firmly, in the current issue of the Market Basket, its weekly review, the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture tells them to buy, cook and carve the monumental bird.

A well-rounded body, a well-body, a well-fleshed breast, and a few pinfeathers mark a good turkey, the wife is told. Avoid chickens with crooked breasts—they are hard to carve.

To help the carver, put the bird on a large dish after cooking, with no more garnish than a few sprigs of parsley, and keep the water glasses well out of harm's way.

In the tips to the carver Uncle Sam avoids a few old controversies. Some proud carvers scorn to stand to their work; but small men with short arms find large birds demands that token of respect.

First and most ceremonious action, and one which reveals at once the carver's competence, is his style in sharpening the knife. A sharp blade makes difficult strokes easy, and a masterly flourish of the steel lends an air of distinction; but if you don't know how it is done, it is better to renounce the distinction and have the knife sharpened professionally.

First the leg, which is easy. Then the wing, which has been many a carver's Waterloo: Remember the joint is nearer the center of the bird than it looks. Then the breast: Hold the bird firmly with the fork astride the breast bone, and slice with a slightly sawing motion down and away. Then the stuffing comes out on a spoon.

If you've never done it before, don't be afraid; but it's as well to practice first. And tender meat is easiest to carve.

Courts Here Work Overtime to Aid Penniless Man

To protect the rights of a penniless colored laborer, in jail for perjury, the District Court and the Court of Appeals worked overtime last night.

William F. Robinson, 37, was married in 1933 to Dorothy Jefferson. He got a license in the District in August to marry Thelma Mattison. For swearing that he was single when he appled for the license, Robinson was convicted of perjury.

James J. Laughlin, Robinson's counsel, learned recently that the first wife was reported to have had a previous husband, from whom she had not been divorced. Laughlin prepared an appeal for Robinson.

Yesterday was the last day the appeal could be filed. The District Court refused to receive it unless Robinson paid the $12 court costs. Laughlin raced against time to complete papers necessary to obtain intervention by the Court of Appeals. But, the courts were closed when the job was done.

Nevertheless, the six justices of the court deliberated over the satuation. At 5:30 p. m. they agreed to command that the appeal be received, without the fee being paid.

West Virginia Bans Hunting As Fires Rage

13 Counties Closed To Nimrods; 2,000 Fight Woods Blazes

By the Associated Press

Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 17.—Conservation commissioner H. W. Shawhan announced today suspension of the hunting season in 13 Southern West Virginia counties because the forest fire "situation leaves no other choice."

More than 2,000 men were fighting approximately 100 fires in those counties. Some of the blazes were reported sweeping over 1,000 acre tracts.

The suspension will continue until the fire danger is past, Shawhan said.

The counties affected by the suspension were Mercer, McDowell, Mingo, Wyoming, Logan, Summers, Raleigh, Fayette, Boone, Kanawha, Lincoln, Putnam and Greenbrier.

Covington, Va., Nov. 17. (AP).—The George Washington National Forest, long a mecca for nimrods may be closed to hunters within the next few days unless there is a sudden drop in the number of fires caused by carelessness, M. C. Howard, forest supervisor, said today.

The entire Hot Springs CCC Camp was called out yesterday afternoon to fight two fires which raged through the forest, one burning 150 acres of wooded land on Warm Springs Mountain, while the other blackened 30 more acres on Back Creek mountain near Bacova.

Plan to Aid Handicapped Pupils Urged

Citizens' Committee Proposes Program To Educate Children Kept From School

A citizens' advisory committee to the Board of Education last night adopted a program for the education of a "high percentage" of pupils prevented from public school attendance because of social disease infection.

The Advisory Committee to Study Needs of Handicapped Children also recommended a series of steps to improve educational opportunities for children with defective hearing and subnormal mentality.

The report of the subcommittee on social hygiene, headed by Ray H. Everett, executive secretary of the District Social Hygiene Society, said that "neglect both of health teaching and sex education in school and home, together with lack of wholesome recreation facilities," are responsible for many venereal infections among adolescents.

Responsibility of Community

"The school and health department workers responsible for dealing with these children," the report read, "should be qualified to aid them to a better understanding of sex problems. The provisions of better recreational facilities is a community responsibility in which both public and private agencies should take part."

In the discussion of the social hygiene report, Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, chief medical inspector of public schools, revealed that approximately 80 per cent of the schools' social disease cases were girls; 80 per cent were colored children; 60 per cent were children below the age of 12.

Infected children are excluded from schools by the Health Department. Treatment is a long-time process, and since there are no special facilities to take care of them, the children get no schooling.

Special Classes Suggested

The committee urged investigating the possibility of special classes in the treatment clinics; increased cooperation between the Health Department and school officials in getting cured pupils back to school as quickly as possible; use of a more intensive checkup than the present "smear" method; instructing parents as to dangerous conditions.

A second report, dealing with children who are deaf or hard of hearing, offered an "immediate program" which includes a city-wide survey to determine the number of children suffering hearing defects; examination of these children by the school otologist; providing of lip-reading instruction; conservation of hearing classes.

A long-range program calls for establishment of a hearing conservation clinic; period checkup on school children; special facilities; aids to hearing, and vocational counseling.

The report was compiled by a subcommittee headed by Miss Betty C. Wright, executive director, American Society for the Hard of Hearing.

The sub-committee on mentally handicapped children included in its recommendations the following development of a special school for mentally deficient children in Washington, instead of sending them to the institution at Laurel, Md; limiting the special classes to 18 pupils; placing adolescents in junior high schools so they might get the proper social environment; emphasis on the practical arts, in-service education for teachers, setting up a psychiatric service, establishment of a vocational guidance and placement system.

Dr. Mitchell Dreese, of the George Washington University faculty, chairman of the sub-committee, submitted the report.

Capital News In Brief

Bricks Go Tumbling

There are brick walls, and there are brick walls, but which brick walls are the strongest?

Faced with that problem, the Bureau of Standards began building brick walls and knocking them down. After a year of building up and knocking down, the Government experts announced yesterday that the quality of bricks and the mortar isn't as important as the workmanship.

The series of tests was part of an investigation to determine how to lower housing costs.

Working in the close quarters of a receiving door in a downtown office building, a pickpocket robbed John H. Miller, 75, 3306 Ash street northwest, of a billfold containing $7.

Miller told police he felt the thief crowd him and a short time later discovered his wallet gone. He described the man as about 40, short and thin, wearing a brown suit.

Hazen Orders Drive Against Curb Bookies

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday planned a "relentless" drive against curbstone bookies whose activities on Washington streets have caused complaints to police and municipal officials.

As his first move, the Commissioner said he would meet this morning with police authorities.

"We have started many drives to rid the city of the bookies but they always come back," he said.

"This time we mean business," he added.

Commissioner Hazen said he had received letters from citizens, tourists and members of Congress complaining about the "open way these fellows accept bets."

He said the recently revamped vice squad would "put on the pressure" to eliminate "an evil" which not only is embarrassing but in violation of the law.

Motorcycle Kills D.C. Man; 76th Victim

Driver Held for Grand Jury in Death of Woman

The death of Norman E. Webster, 28, colored, of 1751 Willard street northwest, last night brought this year's traffic toll to 76. Webster died in Freedmen's Hospital where he was taken Wednesday after being struck down by a motorcycle in the 2000 block of Fifteenth street northwest.

The driver of the motorcycle, Henry B. Compton, of 1478 Clifton street northwest, was ordered to appear at a coroner's inquest later.

In the meantime Harold Hermanson, 50, of Bethesda, Md., was ordered held for the grand jury in the traffic death of Miss Ada Lee Powell, 49, of 4344 Ellicott street northwest. Earlier an Arlington man was injured fatally by a taxicab near Falls Church, Va., and a Virginia man was killed at Hyattsville, Md.

Miss Powell died Wednesday at Georgetown Hospital a few hours after she was knocked from a safety island in Wisconsin avenue near Ellicott street.

Witnesses testified at the inquest, that Miss Powell was hurled more than 30 feet. They said tire marks on the pavement, running through the safety zone, indicated the automobile had skidded 60 feet.

A. J. Tullius, of 3304 North Twenty-first avenue, Arlington, was injured fatally when he stepped from a bus in Lee highway and was struck by a taxicab, driven, police said, by Clyde B. Vaughan, 47, of 2714 Fourteenth street northwest. Vaughan was released in $1,000 bond pending further investigation.

William W. Day, of Catlett, Va., died at Casualty Hospital early yesterday after his motorcycle was in collision with a bus at Hyattsville, Md. Day was an employe at Greenbelt, Md., and had been visiting friends in Prince Georges County.

Archie R. Adams, of 3400 E street southeast, said by police to be driving the bus, was held under $500 bond pending a hearing.

Mrs. Mary Black, 50, of 4430 Grant road northwest, was treated at Georgetown Hospital for fracture of a rib and possible fracture of both legs after she was knocked down at Albemarle street and Wisconsin avenue northwest.

Senate Hearing May Speed D.C. Reorganizing

In View of Delays, King Weighs Call Before House Acts

The District reorganization legislative battle may begin in the Senate rather than the House next session, it was learned yesterday, as Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee prepared for prompt consideration of the subject.

Chairman King of the Senate District Committee said he is considering holding hearings before the House acts.

Some District officials who are favorable to the Seal plan in opposition to the Kennedy-Griffenhagen bill are hopeful that the Senate District Committee will act before the House, because they believe that it will be more sympathetic to the Commissioners' views.

Joint hearings, which were considered last session, are definitely out, it is understood, as committee members fear the meetings would not be harmonious.

While Senator King has expressed no criticism of the House District Committee's failure to report out a reorganization measure last session, he is known to have been displeased. He predicted that his committee would act promptly once the legislation reached it.

Chairman Randolph, of the full committee, yesterday had copies of both the Seal and the Kennedy bills sent to each member of the District Committee so that they might examine them during the congressional recess and be ready for a prompt decision when Congress reconvenes.

Police Press Crash Cases if Victims Won't

Fear of arrest for malicious prosecution largely removed, District policemen now are prosecuting motorists involved in accidents without aid from injured persons, the legislative and enforcement committee of the Traffic Council declared in a report adopted unanimously last night by the council.

Another report of the committee, commending the District Commissioners for endeavoring to stamp out ticket-fixing, was tabled by a vote of 11 to 10.

Serious traffic offenders, the report on prosecution said, have been permitted to go unpunished because eye-witnesses and victims were reluctant to prosecute. Policemen, not themselves eyewitnesses, "disliked swearing to charges . . . because . . . they might render themselves personally liable for malicious prosecution" if the offender is acquitted. The Corporation Counsel's office "freely admitted" it warned all prospective prosecutors of their liability for damages.

"As a matter of fact," the report said, "the Corporation Counsel's office was constantly being used as a collection agency by attorneys and insurance companies for the sole purpose of determining liability."

Negotiations were begun, the report continued, which resulted in a ruling under which policemen were invited, in case of clear guilt, to appear as the prosecutors under advice of an assistant corporation counsel that they would not be civilly liable. This ruling, the report said, was approved by the District Commissioners.

Hazen Blocks Parking Ban at Farmers' Mart

Restrictions Approved For 4 Streets; 2 Are Designated One-Way

The Commissioners yesterday approved further parking restrictions on four streets and designated two others as one-way thoroughfares.

Proposed restrictions around the Farmers' Market in Southwest Washington were omitted from the list approved by the Commissioners at request of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who objected because of the present limited parking space for customers.

It had been proposed to restrict parking on F, Tenth and Eleventh streets southwest between 7 a. m. and 7 p. m. as a means of relieving congestion around the automobile inspection station.

The new one-way streets both in the Northeast section, are Lang place, eastbound only from Bladensburg road to Nineteenth street; Lyman place, westbound only, from Nineteenth street to Bladensburg road.

Streets in the Northwest section affected by the new rules are:

Lanier place, from Adams Mill road to Argonne terrace, no parking on the south side at any time.

Streets in the Northeast:

Florida avenue, from Eighth street to R street, no parking on either side from 8 a. m. to 9:30 a. m. and from 4 to 6 p. m., except between Fourteenth and H streets, no parking on the south side at any time.

H street, from Florida avenue to Bladensburg road, no parking at any time on the north side except for the purpose of loading and unloading merchandise and passengers.

Streets in the Southwest section:

Mayan Relic 2,200 Yrs. Old Is Described

Exploration of what may be the oldest Mayan settlement yet discovered was described last night by Matthew W. Stirling, leader of a recent archeological expedition to Mexico sponsored by the National Geographic Society and the Smithsonian Institution.

Working at the foot of Mount Tuxtla, 150 miles westward of the previously accepted limit of Mayan settlements, Stirling said he had found a stone engraved with a Mayan date equivalent to 291 B. C.

A helmeted head carved in basalt, 6 feet high and 18 feet in circumference, also was discovered on the expedition, Stirling said. It had been seen first in 1858—but had been neglected by science until his expedition unearthed it, he added.

He spoke at Constitution Hall in the first of the 1940 series of National Geographic Society lectures. Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the society, read the annual report before Stirling's lecture.

Indorse Lodge Stand Against Dispensaries Near Public Buildings

Opposition to granting a liquor license to Samuel B. Newman for a store at 315 Cedar street northwest was voted last night by the Takoma Park, Md.-D. C., Citizens Association meeting in Takoma Park branch library. The association also indorsed the stand of Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the District ABC board, against licensing stores near churches, schools and libraries.

Thanks were voted to Dr. Guy Clinton and Burt W. Andrews for handling the association's interests before the Public Utilities Commission in the Butternut street car line fight at hearings Monday and Tuesday. The case is under advisement.

A delegation from residents of Fifth street northwest opposed laying a sidewalk on the west side of the street between Tuckerman and Van Buren streets northwest. A resolution adopted by the association last month advocating this paving was referred back to the streets committee.

Howard H. H. Harrigan, new Takoma Park, Md., town councilman, spoke on child delinquency.

Limestone Ordered for D. C. Armory

Fine Arts Agency Authorizes Change From Brick in Plans for Structure

The District National Guard Armory, soon to be built at the foot of East Capitol street, will be of limestone instead of brick, it was decided yesterday.

A consistent supporter of stone over brick, the Fine Arts Commission authorized the District Commissioners to change their plans, after Col. David McCoach, jr., Engineer Commissioner, pointed out that $10,000 to $15,000 would cover the additional cost.

The action follows the protests of a score of citizens' associations against specifications drawn up by Municipal Architect Nathan C. Wyeth providing for brick construction.

The armory was one of several public works projects considered yesterday by the Fine Arts Commission and National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which held separate meetings in the new Interior Department Building.

Gilmore Clarke Presides

With Chairman Gilmore D. Clarke presiding, the arts group approved designs for two murals in the Interior Building, passed favorably upon plans for a Spanish-American War Memorial in Tampa, and discussed proposed improvements to Meridian Hill Park.

The planning body, led by Chairman Frederic A. Delano, waived objections to the 110-foot height of a meteorological tower on the proposed Weather Bureau Building, approved location of a 38-acre housing tract submitted by the Alley Dwelling Authority.

H. P. Caemmerer, secretary of the Fine Arts Commission, explained that the Tampa war memorial will be turned over to the National Park Service.

According to plans approved by the planning body, the new Weather Bureau Building at Twenty-fourth and M streets northwest will be 74 feet high. A penthouse will go to 81 feet above the ground and the meteorological tower will have an elevation of 110 feet.

Dump Is Protested

Aroused by complaints that the Mount Vernon Memorial highway is acquiring a run-down appearance, the planners adopted a resolution condemning the proximity of a dump below Alexandria and requested the National Park Service to review the highway's landscaping plan and make necessary improvements.

Fairfax County authorities will be asked to co-operate in the elimination of dumps and other eyesores near the boulevard, said Thomas S. Settle, commission secretary.

The planners also approved plans for a dining hall on the grounds of the National Training School for Boys.

Exact location of the proposed low-rent housing site, submitted by the Alley Dwelling Authority and which was approved, was not divulged because the land has not been acquired. Settle said it is on the east side of the Anacostia River.

Mr. Hilton Does It Again In 'We Are Not Alone'

New Film Is Compelling Study of English Life; A Young Actor Refuses to Ape His Dad; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

WHEN THANKSGIVING DAY rolls around, as it almost inevitably will, one of the things discriminating picturegoers will have to rejoice over will be the Warner Brothers' picturization of James Hilton's novel of "We Are Not Alone," starring Paul Muni and adding new luster to the rising star of Jane Bryan, one of Hollywood's soaring young actresses.

There is nothing flashy or flamboyant about "We Are Not Alone." It reaches no tumultuous physical climaxes and strains for no false theatricalism. Despite the fact that the period of the story is that immediately preceding the outbreak of the first World War and the early days of hostility in 1914, the high points of the drama are psychological and emotional rather than physically violent. There are no marching troops, battle scenes or scenes of tragedy in No Man's Land. The film, however, is not without its desperate conflict and its resultant tragic outcome—all utilized to point the drama's study of a domestic cataclysm and emphasize its author's vigorous views on the lunacy and futility of armed strife.

BELL

In the first of his stories which he has personally assisted in adapting to the screen, James Hilton has seen to it that the salient features of his published work find their way with renewed emphasis to the silver sheet. It is a beautiful piece of writing, in either form, and will supply much that is worth thinking about to thoughtful audiences.

There is no present intention to review "We Are Not Alone" in formal fashion, but the temptation to remark upon the excellence of the cast is too strong to resist. Mr. Muni, for the first time in any of his recent pictures, plays without makeup—plays with repression, understatement and in wholly realistic fashion. His portrayal of the kindly doctor in the tale of middle-class, smalltown English life is one of his finest efforts. Jane Bryan, who did such notable work with Bette Davis and Miriam Hopkins in "The Old Maid," continues to grow in dramatic stature in one of her finest performances and Flora Robson, in one of the most distasteful roles imaginable, places the stamp of sheer artistry upon a thankless task.

The supporting roster bristles with distinguished names, among them Una O'Connor, in a part almost as unpleasant as Miss Robson's; Henry Daniell, Montagu Love, James Stephenson, Cecil Kellaway, Alan Napier, Ely Malyon, Crauford Kent, Billy Bevan, Holmes Herbert, John Powers, Colin Kenny and Ethel Griffies. Edmund Goulding's direction is as impeccable as the work of the players under his guidance. With such a cast, one suspects that his job was made considerably easier than usual.

There was at least one in yesterday afternoon's preview audience who would have been willing to swear that the all-important role of Gerald, the small, nervous and imaginative son of the Newcomes, was played by a younger brother of that prodigious little Britisher, Terry Kilburn. This lad is programmed as Raymond Severn. Not only does he bear a striking resemblance to Master Kilburn, with his big dark eyes, wide-spread teeth and appealing voice, but he made the same deep impression that Terry did at about the same age by the skill of his boyish acting. He is of tremendous helpfulness to Mr. Muni, Miss Robson and Miss Bryan. It will be nice if we are going to have two Terry Kilburns.

When the late Sidney Howard's last comedy, "Madam, Will You Walk?" is presented by the Playwright's Company in the National Theater, beginning Monday night, Keenan Wynn will be a prominent member of the cast supporting George M. Cohan. Mr. Wynn, son of the famous Ed, refuses to trade on his father's reputation and be a comedian, but sticks tenaciously to the task of being a legitimate actor. His most notable Washington performance probably was in Ann Nichol's production of "Hey, Diddle, Diddle," at the Belasco several seasons ago. That was the short-lived piece in which Lucille Ball and Alice White, of the magic lantern lots, also had conspicuous parts. It was shortlived by reason of flimsy backing rather than that kind of acting.

But don't let this Keenan Wynn fellow fool you. Offstage, he is no less a comedian than his father—well, maybe a little—and a tap dancer of no mean dimensions.

Unless you are already done in by close-ups of the European War, there are some realistic clips of the sinking of the British steamer Mandalay and the rescue of the officers and crew in the new issue of the Paramount News, currently on view at the Earle and Metropolitan Theaters. These are the first actual, uncensored pictures vividly portraying the almost daily tragedies of the U-boat sinkings. Also shown are shots of the rescue of the passengers and crew of the S. S. Yorkshire, as the sea warfare is intensified. Accompanying these exhibits is an exclusive story of the sinking as told by Darrell Brady, young American adventurer.

If you thought it was a chicken with its head chopped off leaping around yesterday, it presumably was Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's Theater, winding up final preparations for the Variety Club's annual banquet and ball at the Willard Hotel tonight. Mr. Meakin is general chairman of the committee on arrangements for one of the most gala of fetes, held annually on the Saturday night preceding Thanksgiving. This year's will be the sixth and, to hear Mr. Meakin tell it, will be six times as good as any of its predecessors. And don't get the idea that it is any mere coincidence that the next day is Sunday!

Speaking of Thanksgiving, if we are not careful next Thursday will turn out to be a holiday. With "We Are Not Alone" out of the way yesterday, Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller and Abe Tolkins, of the Little, shooting a preview of "Escape From Yesterday" this morning, Mr. Meakin—if he lives—unspooling Kay Kyser's "That's Right, You're Wrong," on Monday, and the Loew people coming through with their customary filtering Tuesday, there won't be much left for the drama desks on Thursday but their ham sandwiches and cokes.

in one of the romantic scenes in the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "Hollywood Cavalcade," which contributes importantly to the romantic development of a film that traces the progress of the cinema from the old days of the Mack Sennett Keystone Kops to the advent of the "talkies." It was things like this that broke up Mr. Ameche's mad love for Miss Faye—which came out all right, anyway. "Hollywood Cavalcade" is now on view at Loew's Columbia

New York, Nov. 17.

EARL BROWDER: Madison Square Garden was practically filled at your Communist rally there this week. But the Garden's checkup after the meeting showed that 5,000 of those admission tickets were counterfeit . . . Mayor LaGuardia: Here's one of the reasons why John De Salvio, Tammany's candidate for City Council, finally conceded defeat to Alfred E. Smith, jr.: When John T. Dooling, head of Tammany's law committee, demanded a recount, Gov. Smith was called by his son. The Happy Warrior warned Dooling that if Tammany insisted on challenging the honesty of the count they couldn't count on Smith's support in the next mayoralty election . . . Fritz Kuhn: The wife of one of your Bund officials has been barred from the Criminal Courts Building, where you're being tried now.

KATHARINE HEPBURN: Your car has been parked outside of the Warner Bros. office so frequently that it's practically a confirmation of the sale of "Philadelphia Story" to that studio . . . A C. Blumenthal: Although you and your wife have been appearing together in public, she still hasn't withdrawn that $25,000 action against you. . . . John L. Lewis: When the board of estimate convenes to discuss the removal of the Ninth avenue El, Boro President Isaacs will insist that jobs be provided for the employes . . . Cunard Line: The 24-hour-a-day police guard at all the piers was made permanent yesterday. This squad will patrol the waterfront for the duration of the war.

DAVID WARFIELD: Mrs. Louis Mann, widow of your contemporary and who co-starred with her husband, is selling the Mann estate at Montrose on the Hudson. The most famous theatrical personages of that day were guests there. The furnishings will be sold via public auction Monday . . . Jack Haley: Alex Aarons and Georgie Hale bought a show for you yesterday. It's a "Lone Ranger" satire by Eddie Davis and Matt Brooke. Guy Bolton will do the book . . . Gov. Lehman: Your Lieut. Gov. Charles "Oomph" Poletti, will leave for Arizona this week-end . . . Barbara Hutton: What were you and Bob Sweeny doing in Cartier's this week?

NEWSPAPER GUILD: P. M., the new tabloid, whose principal backer quit two days after war was declared, has found new backing. The setup will be completed January 1. It will be smaller than the present tabloids and half the pictures will be in color. The news will be departmentalized and there'll be no carryover on stories . . . Will Hays: Orson Welles at last has arranged for a leading lady for his picture. She's Diza Parlo, who will be brought from Paris . . . David Niven: Sam Goldwyn really is sorry you had to leave. Sam, with great fervency, said about you; "If he could cut my heart out he'd find 'Gratitude' written on it."

F. D. R.: The Col. Broadcasting System cabled its Berlin representative to ask what the staff's Thanksgiving menu would be. The reply was: "Beet soup and pumpkin pie, plenty of potatoes, creamed onions—if all the guests bring their onion rations—coffee, made of barley, and whipped cream, if we can get butter from Denmark."

W. W.: Here's how the Times rates columnists: Meyer Berger, after years of being a reporter, was recently assigned to writing a New York column. Many readers wrote to the editor asking: "Who is Meyer Berger?" The Times' editor's stock reply is: "Meyer Berger is a reporter for the New York Times" . . . Myron Taylor: That Brooklyn genealogist you hired has traced your ancestry back to the Mayflower in nine different ways.

JOHN L. LEWIS: All the employes at Mount Sinai Hospital have been requested to submit their photos, for identification purposes, this week. Some are balking, and a labor dispute may ensue . . . Henry Luce: Your magazine, Life, will devote nine pages to "Treasury of Art Masterpieces." Simon & Schuster have a $400,000 investment in that book . . . John Steinbeck: More than 100 men, working in day and night shifts, built a fully furnished house. Painters spent a week in "aging" it properly. Then it was destroyed in exactly eight minutes—while five cameras recorded the scene. This was done for the movie version of your "Grapes of Wrath" . . . Broadway Association: Jed Harris, who last spring announced that he was deserting Broadway for California, is back in town.

Bette Davis' Queen Reigns Another Week

'Elizabeth and Essex,' 'International Revue' Continue at Earle

"The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex" yesterday joined that increasing number of films to enjoy the prestige of a second week at Warner Brothers' local top-spot, the Earle Theater.

Because Elizabeth, of England, is as surely one of the most fascinating characters of history as Bette Davis, of Hollywood, is one of the cinema's most admired performers, this technicolor romance has, from scratch, fundamental elements of popular appeal. On the way to the Earle screen the film has picked up the highly regarded Errol Flynn, a knowing cast of players and a production best described as opulent.

Adapted from the Maxwell Anderson play, "Elizabeth, the Queen," the film employs those details which Anderson concocted for his purely imaginative romance of the Virgin Queen and her younger subject. As its title implies, it is a strictly fanciful love affair, the historical background being painted with that mixture of fact and falsity which our scholars so deplore and for which the vox populi shouts approval.

The queen values her public trust above any personal passions. The Earl of Essex eyes the throne with masculine envy, the queen with deep devotion. The tussle between love and duty forms the romantic screen drama.

Elizabeth Like Henry

Miss Davis' Elizabeth is a true dramatic daughter of Charles Laughton's Henry VIII. She shows us that the daughter inherited many of her father's most characteristic traits; traits at least which Mr. Laughton portrayed that doughty ruler as exhibiting. She makes the hands of the aging queen twitch from nervousness. She is as vain of her pitiably powdered face as her father was of his legs. Her features aged and he got the gout. Mr. Laughton's Henry liked nothing better than munching; his dyspeptic burps are cinematic celebrities. The Davis Elizabeth pops candy into her mouth in private, sucks grapes during a tempestuous cabinet meeting. Her humor is as lusty as his. That one is continually conscious of these mannerisms during the film make the characterization not so much a thrilling piece of acting, but rather a carefully thought-out portrait.

Mr. Flynn's Essex is undeniably handsome, more so on horseback than in Whitehall. His reading of the lines, "I love her . . . I hate her . . . I love her," is that of a perplexed 1939er in tights. Donald Crisp's Francis Bacon is finely sympathetic and Olivia de Havilland's Lady Penelope a vision of loveliness. Erich Korngold's musical score, too, is an interesting tapestry, and the Technicolor reveals refinements of great beauty.

Bagpipers on Stage

"Internatonal Revue," the Earle's stage bill, is smoothly staged entertainment, well blessed with variety, most novel of which are the Dagenham Girl Pipers, a bagpipe and drum corps of true British lassies. Bob Ripa, that fine Nordic juggler, personifies Scandinavia and Patrcia Norman represents Ireland. Georges and Jalna reveal once again the beauties of ballroom dancing and Gene Sheldon contributes his droll pantomime.

This Earle holdover then, is a worthy and engrossing entertainment; for the admirers of Miss Davis it is in the language of a reviewer, "an absolute must."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

San Francisco, Calif., Nov. 17 (INS). Bright and early Monday morning Madeleine Carroll checks into the Eddie Small picture, "My Son, My Son," as Livia, the siren who causes all the trouble between father and son. As I remember the girl in Howard Spring's novel, she was dark and exotic. But what's a little matter of coloring when Small was able to grab Madeleine for his pet story ahead of Paramount, who have her set for the Cecil De Mille opus, "Northwest Mounted Police!"

LOUELLA PARSONS

However, there's no hard feelings between the two companies. Madeleine's Para contract permits her one outside deal a year, with Para reserving the right to okay the script. When the home lot saw what a good part Livia is, they not only gave their blessing but told Madeleine she needn't report for the De Mille picture until January 26. As you know, Brian Aherne and Louis Hayward are the father and son, respectively, in "My Son, My Son."

M-G-M and Hedy Lamarr are moving their battles to the Los Angeles Superior Court Monday, where a judge will decide whether or not Hedy can accept the offer to play "Salome" on the stage. Frankly, I have never liked to get in the middle of these disputes. The only fair thing is to give both sides. The studio claims it has the exclusive contract for Hedy's glamorous services, while her lawyer will argue that the Lamarr contract is null and void. While the legal brains are matching wits, Mervy Leroy, in the meantime, is testing Irina Baranova, sensational ballerina of the Ballet Russe, for the part Hedy was to have played in "Ziegfeld Girl."

June Preisser's boss, L. B. Mayer, has heard how well San Francisco likes her and he sent me word today that she is going to have a very big part in "Broadway Melody of 1941." The little Preisser is playing competition to herself with "Babes in Arms" in its fourth week at another theater. She has to take four and five curtain calls at every show and they will hardly let her leave the stage. She is getting more fan mail than Greta Garbo at her best and, speaking of Garbo, you should see June's imitation of her in our act. Congratulations to M-G-M on a new star.

Chatter in Hollywood: A lady has a right to change her mind, but Geraldine Fitzgerald is almost overdoing the privileges about whether she is—or isn't—going to have a baby. When she was in Chicago the Irish actress intimated to a femme reporter that she was expecting the stork. When she arrived in Hollywood she denied the story, saying she was referring to a baby she has on the screen in "A Child Is Born." But now she's admitting to intimates that she and her English lawyer-husband, Edward Lindsay-Hogg, will welcome a little stranger sometime next summer. In the meantime, her husband is hurrying to Hollywood from New York to join her before "Disraeli" gets under way.

Snapshots of Hollywood and San Francisco collected at random: Charles Boyer and Pat Patterson fly from Lisbon tomorrow unless weather conditions hold up the Atlantic Clipper; Zorina's husband, Georges Balanchine, was not on the plane with her when she arrived in Hollywood today—but she quieted all rumor hounds by saying he would follow in a week; Ty Power got back in Hollywood from his Arizona hunting trip just long enough to pick up the bride and start for the high Sierras; Bud Ernst and Gwynn Pickford, driving across the country, ran into the whole "Virginia City" troupe in Arizona; wish we were going to be here for the S. F. opening of Leo Carrillo's play next week—and also for the Duncan Sisters opening in a night club show; Joe Pasternak is seeing a lot of June Storey lately; the Vic Orsatti-Anne Nagel dueting begins to look serious.

Just heard a funny one from New York: The Rainbow Room wouldn't admit Bob Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck, Joan Blondell and Dick Powell because they weren't dressed in evening clothes. Catch a Hollywood night club turning away that much glamour! Lyle Talbot and Adonel Massey resuming their romance at the Grace Hayes Lodge; Ida Lupino and Louis Hayward celebrated their first wedding anniversary today, and Ralph Forbes and Heather Angel gave a dinner party in their honor; Gaylord Hauser may be away—but Garbo is still being faithful to his diet. She was in a Beverly health store drinking a garlic juice cocktail. And if you'll pardon the pun—someone wanted to know how many "carrots" in the diamond ring he gave her; Warners have moved Mme. Ouspenskaya into Errol Flynn's dressing room on the lot and Madame is scared to death of all the sabers and guns.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Hollywood, Nov. 17.

Again our people are going into another business. They've built at the cost of about $2,500,000, one of the most beautiful hotels it's ever been my privilege to look up at — Arrowhead Springs. Besides its beauty; it's unique, because you can have a game of tennis or golf, if you prefer, on their 18-hole course. There's an outdoor swimming pool half a mile long, medicinal steam caves, which the Indians discovered and used long before anyone ever thought of our lantern slides—now called pictures. Bedrooms are air conditioned and you step onto a private sun balcony. There's a casino nearby for gambling. And they may get that famous doctor from Mad Nunhelm Germany.

HOPPER

And 30 miles away, there's a ski run for tobogganing and ice skating. I hear they may get Lucius Boomer from the Waldorf, or Ernie Byfield from the Ambassador in Chicago for a short time each year. Also Steve Hanningan (to me, the greatest praise agent in the country) to ballyhoo. It all looks great and if run properly it can do California almost as much good as the picture industry has done Hollywood. A newsreel in Technicolor is being made for your theaters—Al Jolson will be on the air to advertise it. You can shop at Magnin's, buy your jewels at Laykins, while having restful moments. But it doesn't sound peaceful for your pocketbook!

Now that "Fighting 69th" is finished, George Brent is off to his desert hide-out. He'll be gone two weeks—unless, that is, Bette Davis brings him back . . . And Pat O'Brien gave a party to celebrate the picture's end. Joke of that is, Pat's new house was built on property adjoining the old home. And he didn't know for sure if the new one would be completed in time for the party. So said: "If the light's are on in the new house, that's where the party will be, otherwise, come on over to the old shack."

That huge chromium framed mirror with the names of cast and crew of "Destry Rides Again" on it—which rolls around on rubber wheels gave Marlene Dietrich a narcissus complex. If she didn't look into it the crew was offended. If she did, others thought she was conceited. Marlene tells me that Jimmy Stewart is no longer shy. Mercy, does one picture with Marlene have that effect on him? She'll do her next picture with Joe Pasternak too, because she feels she owes him so much. Even though Goldwyn and Metro are both bidding for her.

Pgegy Moran, Universal's pet, made three different columns with three different beau-friends; Jackie Cooper, Jackie Coogan and Joe (or should we say "Jackie") Pasternak . . . That Lew Ayres romance with Patricia Morison is just so much blah—he'll marry Helen Gilbert just as soon as he gets his divorce from Ginger and Helen is free . . . June Knight, who will be seen in the George Raft-Joan Bennett picture called "House Across the Bay"—that is, if you look fast enough—just received a golden cocker spaniel from her husband. She immediately named it Golden Boy. We merely mention this so that if you see June linked with "Golden Boy" in other columns you'll know it's only puppy love.

When Hedy Lamarr went baby shopping and the clerk asked her what she wanted she said: "Nothing except what the baby needs. And I'll leave that up to you." Aghast, the clerk said: "You mean that you don't want the best of everything?" "No—just what the baby needs!"

When President Roosevelt changed our Thanksgiving date, he told everyone but the poinsettia growers. Now, they're in a panic, because their blooming flowers are as much a part of our Thanksgiving celebration as cranberry sauce is to a turkey. But this year, they won't open their petals until after the President's Thanksgiving has gone with the wishbone. What to do, what to do, say the posies!

Star Selects First 10 Film 'Singles'

With seven of its leading screen Romeos wedded within the last two months, the screen colony can settle down to the game of orienting the remaining field for the rest of the season.

First to cast her ballot is the glamorous Paulette Goddard, who took time out from "The Cat and the Canary" to select Hollywood's 10 "most eligible bachelors" today.

Paulette listed David Niven, James Stewart, Cary Grant, George Brent, Richard Greene, John Howard, Douglass Montgomery, Robert Preston, William Powell and Franchot Tone.

Actor to Attack Glider Records

In addition to a bid to lead this country's team in the Olympic games at Finland next year, Harvey Stephens, currently featured in "Television Spy," is preparing to try for the world's record in glider distance-flying early next year.

One of the best known amateur designer-builders in the country, Stephens has just finished the plans for a revolutionary glider.

He already has outlined details with the officials at Wichita Falls, Tex., for his record try at the next annual meet there, in May. He expects to reach Springfield, Mo., a distance of approximately 500 miles.

Metropolitan

For the fourth time in as many weeks, this page reports that "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" is continuing its downtown engagement. To keep the record straight, the Frank Capra comedy of Washington politics yesterday began its third week at the Metropolitan Theater, where the youthful senator took up his quarters after two weeks at the Earle.

If there is anyone left in town who has not yet seen this much discussed film, we have not met him. The adventures of the idealistic youngster who comes to his Nation's Capital with hope in his heart has given rise to many an argument, many a choice tid-bit of what Senator Tweet and Congressman Blather said after they had seen themselves as the Hollywoodians have seen them.

James Stewart exhibits the finest work of his career, in the title role, and Jean Arthur, as his cynical secretary; Claude Rains, as his compromising superior; Thomas Mitchell, as an owlish political correspondent, and Edward Arnold, as the ruthless politico, are others in the strong supporting cast.

Actress Protected AgainstMatrimony

Usually a player's studio takes the initiative in trying to preclude matrimony for its young players who are being groomed for stardom, but Virginia Dale, member of Paramount's Golden Circle, has revealed that she had applied to Lloyd's of London for a five-year insurance policy to protect her single blessedness.

The pretty blonde, currently in "Parole Fixer," said she not only felt that marriage would not be for the best interests of her career, but that if, for any reason, she should change her mind, she'd be in the not unpleasant position of having a nice nest egg with which to start.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Undefeated Georgetown moves into Yankee Stadium today in the position of a man who has built up a nice handful and is letting it all ride on one last roll. If the Hoyas can get over this one, against New York University, it will be one sweet killing.

POVICH

Georgetown needs but this one this afternoon to seal the success of its brightest season on the gridiron. There can be no gainsaying Georgetown's prowess if the Hoyas hurdle N. Y. U. The carpers who have looked down their noses at Georgetown's schedule would be silenced by a triumph over New York U., conqueror of Colgate, Carnegie Tech and Georgia.

Beyond the N. Y. U. game, if Georgetown wins it, stretches fame and fortune for the Hoyas. The fame would come naturally enough in the recognition that the Hoyas had completed two consecutive seasons without defeat. The fortune would be represented by Georgetown's share of the gate in one of the numerous Bowl games whose officials are already flirting with Georgetown on the suspicion that the Hoyas will be one of the Nation's rare unbeaten teams.

Hoyas Had Ability to Bounce Back

It's a picturesque Georgetown team that is bidding for its big victory today. It's the sort of a team that uncovered a field-goal kicker in the final minutes to beat Temple, 3 to 2; and the kind that shook Halfback Lou Ghecas away on a touchdown run in the last minutes against Syracuse to fetch the Hoyas a tie and save their unbeaten record. The Hoya's precipitated their own break by blocking a kick and recovering it for the touchdown that beat George Washington.

They were unbeaten last season, but they weren't supposed to be a hot sort of club this year. Not after George Mellendeck was lost to the team. To be blunt about it, Mellendeck was Georgetown's only good back in 1938. He was good enough to carry the entire load. But Georgetown found the ability to bounce back this season sans Mellendeck and without a standout back of any description. How have they been winning ball games? That is easy. For two seasons, Georgetown's lines have been superb.

That is a bit paradoxical, incidentally. Jack Hagerty, coach of the Hoyas, was a backfield star under Lou Little but as a disciple of Little he knows that more football games are won by the line than by the backfield. His lines have been making the breaks for Hagerty's backs. There may be nothing spectacular about Hagerty's backs, but the onlooker who watches Georgetown's line will have a thrilling afternoon, if he appreciates line play.

Linemen Hold Key to Hoya Success Today

Georgetown's hopes will be riding with its stalwarts in the line today. The Hoyas have no single back to counter Eddie Boell, the versatile Violet who has been eliciting rave notices from the Metropolitan critics. On the degree in which G. U.'s line can rush Boell on his passes and pile across the scrimmage line when he runs the ball will depend Georgetown's success today. If its line can restrain Boell, Georgetown will find a way to win the game. At least that has been the Hoya's habit.

The Georgetown-N. Y. U. battle today has a high mark to shoot at in point of thrills. In the past, Georgetown against the Violets has been one of Manhattan's outstanding football shows. In New York they still talk about the games of 1928-29-30 which launched what has become one of the most notable rivalries in the East.

That 1928 game will forever remain this department's favorite football game. N. Y. U., an Eastern colossus in football, had scheduled Georgetown as a breather. It was the era in which the Violets, under enterprising Chick Meehan had set their sights on the national championship and the Rose Bowl bid. Meehan, with college officials sympathetic, spent the summers gathering Violets, but not the shrinking kind.

Georgetown, under Lou Little, was regarded as a good little team. N. Y. U., which had beaten Fordham, 34 to 0, and Colgate, 48 to 0, was an overwhelming favorite. But the score that afternoon was 7 to 2 in favor of Georgetown.

Long Runs for Scores Mark G. U. Victories

At the outset there wasn't much indication that Georgetown would win. Ken Strong led an N. Y. U. attack in the first quarter that carried to the G. U. 11-yard line and was seemingly unstoppable. And then Strong fumbled the wet ball on a snap from center. Ken Provincial, Georgetown end, scooped it up and dashed 87 yards for a touchdown. Happily those were the days when a fumble could not only be recovered, but advanced.

A bit later that afternoon, Georgetown stopped the Violets on the 2-yard line when Ken Strong in two tries at the line lost a yard. N. Y. U. got its two points when Quarterback Johnny Scalzi deliberately grounded the ball in the end zone for a safety. That move gave Georgetown a free kick from its own 20 and Jim Mooney booted G. U. out of danger with a 65-yard punt despite the soggy ball.

The 1929 game was another Georgetown triumph. Johnny Bozek was the hero of that one, a 14-0 victory for the Hoyas. He broke off tackle for 33 yards and a touchdown. A bit later Provincial reared up to plague the Violets once more. He took a 25-yard pass from Quarterback Johnny Scalzi for a touchdown.

N. Y. U. got its revenge the next year. But it wasn't too satisfying. The Violets licked the Hoyas, 2 to 0, and for Georgetown it was a bitter break that cost them the game. After stopping an N. Y. U. assault on their 1-yard line, the Hoyas took the ball. Johnny Scalzi booted a magnificent 50-yard punt down the field and then—horrors! The referee ruled his heel had touched the last line bounding the end zone and that he had scored an automatic safety. Those were the only points of the game.

They're at it again today at Yankee Stadium—Georgetown and N. Y. U. That's cause enough for Georgetown men to rally for miles around.

With CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 17.—One million dollars isn't too big a chunk to expect from the efforts of United States sportswriters and promoters, who soon will be giving a hand to the annual campaign to raise money for the fight against infantile paralysis.

CONSIDINE

The sports program begins officially on Christmas Day in Miami when either Miami High or Miami Edison meets the best available team from another section in what certainly is the closest approach to a national high school championship game imaginable. Miami High and Miami Edison meet tomorrow night to decide which becomes the host, with High risking its unbeaten record of 23 straight.

A committee of sportswriters strung across the country will pick the opposing club, and the sportswriters of the country will in the meanwhile chip in and purchase what will be known—forever after, we hope—as the You Gehrig Trophy.

Every Sportswriter's Job

But before that game is staged, and even before the team is selected, the machinery of a curiously sentimental charity will be under way. Nearly every sportswriter now at large will take part in it. Their job is to approach the sports promoters of their district or city and ask them to put on sports shows out of whose "gates" will come a percentage for infantile paralysis work.

Few promoters, or coaches or schools, will be able to resist such an appeal. Some of the promoters, of course, will reject it on the grounds that if they do it for this charity they'll have to do it for all of them. That's their business, of course, and no sandbagging is allowed. But by and large, they'll enter into this with the good-natured flourish which only athletics provides: With a minimum of hammy histrionics, bleeding hearts, and the other seemingly inevitable byproducts of sweet charity.

One Thousand to $100,000

They'll go for this one because (1) they can make more money out of it than the 10 per cent they give to the fund, and (2) they are pretty close to the heart of sport this past year, with Gehrig, Georgia Coleman, and the cases of the gridmen at Loyola of Los Angeles. The medical profession is closing in grimly on the bug that causes these tragic consequences. But it needs money, for research, for "boilers" like the one that has saved the life of Fred Snite, and for other such equipment. The government has appropriated little or nothing for this fight, and it won't have to appropriate any if the kingdom of sports—from archery to zebra-baiting—comes through.

The sports council of the fight against infantile paralysis began two years ago in a modest way, and raised about $1,000. Last year, still casual, it raised $100,000.

This year—with a game like the high school championship in the Orange Bowl to start it off—the men and women who are sound of limb and body might well raise the sizeable fortune which the researchists need to lick this confounded bug.

Hagerty—Dubofsky—Murtagh

Jack Hagerty, former quarterback of the New York Giants, comes back to town tomorrow, in the role of miracle man. With Mush Dubofsky and George Murtagh, who played with him on the football Giants, Hagerty has fashioned a Georgetown University team which hasn't lost a game since somewhere along in the 1937 season. Often it has evaded defeat by movie-scenaria finishes, as it did early this season when it beat Temple 3-2 in the last seconds of the game. Mal Stevens, whose N. Y. U.'s meet the Hoyas tomorrow at the Yankee Stadium, says that it is one of the greatest defensive clubs in the game, and that when its freshman stars trickle onto the club next year that it will be a Bowl club.

It is a strange, cocky team that the three old pros have fashioned. In the Syracuse game, with a few minutes to go, Lou Checas, a back, ran 74 yards to a touchdown and Joe McFadden kicked the extra point that gave Georgetown an unexpected tie. Hagerty promptly sent in his best punter, Mike Kopcik, to kick and protect the hard earned tie. But the Hoyas wouldn't hear of it. Julius Koshlap, Georgetown's ambidextrous passer, stuck his head in the huddle, said, "to hell with a tie, let's win it," and the club went down swinging—tied, of course, but pitching.

Western and Eastern Win Sectional Titles

Red Raiders Turn Back Central High, 27-21, To Gain Title Round; Eastern-Tech Tie, 0-0; Maroons Gain Place in District Title Play-off

Western and Eastern, two of the oldest but most victory-starved members of the interhigh football family, won their way into the 1939 Thanksgiving Day championship game at Griffith Stadium yesterday, the first eking out a thrill-drenched 27-21 triumph over the defending champion, Central, and the latter holding McKinley to a 0-0 tie that kept its one-game lead intact.

A total of almost 10,000 watched the games at Central and Eastern, respectively, the largest schoolboy gathering of the season in the regular Friday double-headers.

Western Wins

Not since the "old days" of schoolboy football—and maybe not then—have spectators been treated to a display such as was presented in Central's aging bowl. Spectacular plays, honest-to-Ned football, power, long aerials—everything that could make a Rose Bowl engagement exciting was staged for 6,500 highly satisfied customers who saw the Raiders win, 27-21.

And after the yelling was over Western, whose grid efforts have brought home only two first-place ties in 46 years of trying, found itself only a tiny step from its first uncontested title. Eastern, its Turkey Day foe, has already been turned back by the Raiders, 13-0.

Like fans at a Joe Louis fight, those who came three minutes late missed the touchdown that spelled Western victory. It came on the opening kickoff. Carmel Nance, lanky Raider wingman, wrapped his frame around Jack Neam's boot into the end zone as Central's Johnny Bredbenner stood helplessly by, and six points went on the scoreboard for the winners. At the time it mattered little that George Barnes' pass to Roddy Snow for the extra point was wide.

Whatever else that sudden score accomplished, it made the 1938 titillists fighting mad. It made them so mad, in fact, that they took the next kickoff and marched on the strength of four first downs 62 yards to the tying touchdown. And a 7-6 lead went to Central when Benny Steiner, its ace quarterback, place-

Eastern Gains Finale

Given scant hope for interhigh titular honors in preseries ratings, Eastern High's big grid machine back-pedaled into the Eastern Division championship yesterday at Tech High's expense by playing a scoreless deadlock at the Lincoln Park Stadium.

The game was the climax of a highly successful season which saw the White Tide lose its first two games of the season, 13 to 6, to Episcopal, and, 14 to 2, to Washington-Lee, only to stage a grand comeback in interhigh play, and, like true champions, come from behind to win the title.

In its first interhigh game Eastern trounced a green Woodrow Wilson eleven, 19 to 0, but this game proved costly to the Parkers, as they lost the services of Bob Beyer, promising sophomore end, for the season. Beyer suffered a broken leg when he was blocked out of a play by a Wilson stalwart.

Eastern followed the Wilson rout by taking the measure of Anacostia, 12-0. Never was Eastern's come-from-behind methods better exemplified than in this contest. Anacostia started off by completing five straight passes but Eastern held for downs and marched right back down the field. A second-half drive wore the Indians down and the Parkers pushed across two scores.

The next game for Eastern resulted in the only blot on its interhigh record as it dropped a 13-0 contest to Western, which eventually won the Western division

Hoyas Await Orange Bowl Invitation

Locals Would Accept Trip to Florida If They Defeat New York U. Today

By Jack Munhall.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, Nov. 17.—Georgetown University already has turned down two offers to play post-season football, while awaiting the result of its game with New York University and an expected bid from the Orange Bowl or possibly the Sugar Bowl, it was learned from a reliable source today.

The Hoyas would seem to have little chance of winding up their season in New Orleans, but prospects of a trip to Florida are bright. All depends, of course, on a Georgetown victory over the Violets tomorrow.

Refuse Sugar Bowl Bid

Hilltop officials recently refused a proposition to meet the best available opponent in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's and before that a bid to face Kentucky on a date to be set in a charity game at Charleston, W. Va., The latter offer was made Georgetown when Kentucky was still undefeated and the game would have benefited a tuberculosis fund.

Although Georgetown last year admittedly paid little heed to "feelers" from the Orange Bowl, the Sun Bowl and from West Coast promoters who talked of arranging a Catholic charities game between the Hoyas and either Santa Clara or St. Mary's, it does desire a post-season game this year.

This desire has not been made known officially, for obvious reasons, most important of which is the disastrous effect it might have had on the Georgetown football team. The players have been under enough strain, officials believed, while protecting their undefeated record week after week in close battles.

Seek Orange Bowl Bid

Georgetown's change of heart toward playing after football school is out is said to have been prompted by the assurance that the current Orange Bowl assignment will be a profitable one for the Eastern invader. In past years, including 1936 when Catholic University defeated Ole Miss at Miami, the Orange Bowl invader from the East has taken away scant profit at best.

Increased seating capacity plus the growing prestige and prominence of Miami's answer to the Rose and Sugar Bowl classics has combined to make the Orange Bowl a leader among the many post-season engagements. Recently C. U. attracted more than 17,000 paid admissions for its game at the Orange Bowl with Miami University. Experts predict the New Year's contest in the Orange Bowl will attract upwards of 25,000 fans.

At an option of the "take" of even at a flat guarantee, the coffers of Georgetown might be enriched by as much as $12,500 if it permits its football players a brief mid-winter vacation in the land of sunshine. The players and coaches would welcome the game.

And, as they say in the fight racket, $12,500 ain't exactly peanuts.

25,000 to See Hoyas and N. Y. U.

New York, Nov. 17.—Because New York University would treasure a victory over Fordham two weeks hence even more highly than the prestige it would obtain by smashing Georgetown's great winning streak, the Hoyas' chance of withering the Violets before 25,000 at Yankee Stadium tomorrow may be highly enhanced.

Latest reports here indicate that Jack Bamrack, the Violet's crack blocking back, and Eddie Boell, the spearhead of their offense and one of the outstanding forward passers of the country, will be used sparingly, if at all, against Georgetown. Coach Mal Stevens said yesterday that while neither star has serious injuries, he was skeptical of exposing either to aggravation which might cause them to miss the game with Fordham.

While it may be hard for some to understand why Coach Stevens would do Georgetown any favors, those who realize the seriousness of the Violet-Ram rivalry might understand Stevens' decision.

Of course, there is more than a slight possibility that the Hoyas will discover tomorrow to their consternation that Boell is very much in the ball game. Ditto for Bamrak, whom Stevens considers his "most valuable back" next to Boell, although Stevens said without qualification yesterday that Bamrak definitely would not play against Georgetown.

The probable absence of Boell and Bamrack from the N. Y. U. line-up was hardly causing Hoya Coach Jack Hagerty any worry yesterday as he drove the Georgetown squad through a short but snappy drill at Yankee Stadium, less than an hour after they arrived here.

Rain Forecast

Hagerty's biggest concern for tomorrow is the weather. The forecast is for rain and that would suit Hagerty to a tee, although he is fully cognizant of what can and often does happen with a wet ball.

The Georgetown coach believes, and logically so, that the heavier Hoya team would have an advantage on a wet field, because of its superior

Arkansas U. Stuns S.M.U., Winning 14-0

By the Associated Press

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 17.—The University of Arkansas Razorbacks said it in touchdowns today as well as statistics and drove to a 14-0 upset victory over the highly favored Southern Methodist Mustangs before 8,000 fans in the Little Rock High School Stadium.

The Ponderou Porkers ate up the yardage on the ground and in the air to turn back a stunned Methodist eleven, which penetrated deep into Arkansas territory only once and that in the final minute of play. For the Razorbacks it was the third win in nine times out.

Kay Eakin, ranked as the Nation's No. 1 passer and ground gainer, did everything but lead the band for Arkansas. He received plenty of offensive aid from Ralph Atwood, a rabbit back, whose 48-yard run in the third period was the longest of the game and set up the second Arkansas tally.

The Razorbacks stormed down the field on the opening gun. Repulsed on the 13-yard stripe, they came back after a punt with a sustained 55-yard drive for a score when Eakin passed 12 yards to Estes McDoniel on the S. M. U. 1. Eakin went over standing up on the first play of the second quarter. Simington converted with a placement.

The Porkers clinched it in the third period with an 80-yard march, featuring Atwood's long dash which carried to the Mustang 32. Eakin

Boys Clubs Play For Title Today

An estimated attendance of 2,500 people will be on hand to witness the Police Boys Clubs, No. 10 and No. 4, grid playoff today that will determine the 125-pound championship in the Boys' Club League. The game will be played on the Monument Grounds.

Maj. Brown and directors of the club will be on hand to witness the playoff as well as the club's 70-piece band. The winning team will receive from the club a trophy as well as gold footballs to each member of the team. In addition to these awards Sports Center will give to each team and directors of the club a regulation football.

Conn Beats Lesnevich In N. Y. Title Bout

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 17.—Prof. Billy Conn gave his usual 15-round boxing lesson before an enthusiastic audience in Madison Square Garden tonight to retain the world's light-heavyweight championship against the challenge of Gus Lesnevich, a willing but inept pupil in the finer points of the game. Conn weighed only 171¼; Lesnevich, 174½.

For the entertainment of a crowd of 13,704 of the fistic faithful, who contributed to a gross gate of $45,067, the professor sprinkled his usual left-hand lecture with a series of classy right crosses and frequent wild-slugging sessions to easily win a one-sided decision.

Second Defense

Successfully defending his 175-pound throne for the second time, the fighting Irishman from Pittsburgh got off to his customary slow start, and seemed all but asleep for the first three rounds. Then he woke up and from there on he slapped the "Russian bear" from Cliffside Park, N. J., into defeat all the way.

Most of the time through the first half of the fight it was a battle of lefthands, with Lesnevich trying to score with his solid southpaw hook, and Conn flicking with a straight left.

Above all, however, it was Billy's masterful boxing which told the story, along with his ability to pace himself over the long route.

Foe's Eyes Cut

At the finish, he had cut small gashes alongside each of Lesnevich's eyes and had blood dripping from his nose.

Thus Conn remains far and away the king of the 175-pounders, but still has a long way to go before achieving his goal of fighting it out with the heavyweights. For he came into the ring two pounds under even the meanest hopes of Manager Johnny Ray, who has said the "Fighting Harp" won't mingle with the big boys until after he passes 180.

Lesnevich did all his fighting in the first three rounds. After that, Billy started cutting Gus' right eye with a left hook in the fourth; hurting him badly with a two-fisted flailing about the head in the sixth; slicing his left eye with a right cross in the seventh and just about closing the right eye in the eleventh.

For the last half of the fight, Gus rarely laid a glove on Billy, so clever was the Pittsburgher's de-

Dr. R. N. Miller, who attended the youth, said death resulted apparently from a concussion. Davies' home is at Hastings, Nebr. It was the first death to occur on a cornhusker football field.

D. C. Taxi Driver Redskins' Most Rabid Football Fan

Cabbie Has Missed Only One Game In Three Years

By Eddy Gilmore.
Associated Press Staff Writer

One of the country's most rabid football fans is a taxi driver named W. L. Triplett, who admits he can't afford his hobby.

For three years, ever since the Redskins moved their National franchise from Boston to Washington, he has been on the warpath with the team.

"I've missed one game," he said yesterday, "but I think I made up for that by not missing any practices."

That's loyalty, when you consider that the Redskins practice six days a week.

The game he missed was the encounter with the Green Bay Packers in Milwaukee. It was just too far for Triplett's finances at the time.

Each day Triplett's cab pulls up in front of the Redskins' hotel at 9:30 a. m. He loads it with football players, takes them to their practice field and later loads it up again and brings them back. For the round trip his charge is 60 cents.

All the time the players are practicing, Triplett not only watches—he works. He is a volunteer shoe-cleaner and headgear-shiner.

On days when games are played in the rain, the devoted taxi driver shows up four hours before the kickoff time and helps put mud cleats on the shoes.

When the team is not at home, Triplett follows his heroes to New York, Detroit, Chicago, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

Some of his trips are in his cab, others are on the train—always at his own expense.

The taxi driver's loyalty was stretched almost to the breaking point two weeks ago. He had an argument with a new trainer and the best seat he could get for the game was in the rain. He also had to pay for it.

"That's all right," he said. "The boys are my friends and they didn't have anything to do with my rainy seat."

Toddle On Captures Leonardtown Purse at Bowie Track

October Ale Is Second In Feature

Maryland-Bred Victor Brings Followers a $7 Ticket; Royal Business Takes Show

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 17.—Over the same track where his sire and dam were stars in their youth, Toddle On, owned by Mrs. Elmer Trueman, of Washington, lasted to win by a head margin in the Leonardtown Purse, featuring the day's program here. Second money in the modest test for $1,500 went to Elizabeth C. Bosley's October Ale, with O. S. Jennings' Royal Business third a nose in front of H. E. Enger's Pumpgun and a length and a half away from the place award.

Toddle On, Maryland-bred by Bud Lerner out of Grace Troxler, was a favorite with the crowd of 8,000 and supplied a $7 mutuel. She ran the mile and a sixteenth in 1:48 3-5 over a fast track and under sunny skies. Apprentice Jockey Charlie Friedman did a good job of riding and was a factor in holding the filly together in the all-important final jumps.

Scrooge, with Jockey Don Meade in the saddle, was the first real leader in the field of eight. The Tall Trees Stable entry opened a long lead but Toddle On was next and being rated. October Ale, in the meanwhile, had dropped far back. On the swing for the stretch, Scrooge and Toddle On battled it out with the former weakening. Toddle On then opened a gap but Pumpgun came up on the rail and threatened to win.

Friedman had to drive Toddle On hard at this stage and the filly drew out again. It was in the final 25 yards that October Ale, coming like a wild horse on the outside, just missed getting up. However, his effort forced the judges to call for the photo.

Toddle On added $975 to bring her earnings for the year to $3,465 and the triumph was her third in 14 starts.

The daily double pay-off of $247.80 fell far short of a parlay on the two winners which figure. In fact, the winnings of Durable, $8.40 shot in the first race, played on to Victory Light, the $87.10 proposition in the second event, would have brought $365.

Apprentice Jockey M. Caffarella, who rode Victory Light, came back to score another victory in the third fest aboard Merry Onig, which brought a return of $15.20. Knitetta and Toy Foot were second and third in the battle over the sprint route of 5½ furlongs.

The Tall Trees Stable's Early Morn, rival of Dr. Whinny for the consistency championship, turned in her fifth straight triumph in the fourth race, winning easier than the final margin of a length and a half suggests. The Belaire Stud's Wise Lady was second with J. B. Partridge's Moonfolly third. Jockey Don Meade rode Early Morn, conserved her speed, turned her loose only long enough to take command and then put her under a grip. Early Morn paid a mere $2.80.

Maryville Closes With Victory; Open to Bowl Bids

Warrensburg, Mo., Nov. 17 (AP).—Maryville Teachers College Bearcats won their eighteenth straight football game today, finished their second straight undefeated season and began listening seriously for "bowl" talk.

They turned back the Warrensburg Teachers, 12 to 0, to keep clean their record in the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

Coach Ryland Milner said his team was open to any bowl offers but has yet to make any arrangements.

More than a week ago another unbeaten teachers' college team, at New Britain, Conn., suggested a "Brain Bowl" with either Maryville or Slippery Rock, Pa., as the logical foe. The St. Joseph (Mo.) Chamber of Commerce stepped in and offered to sponsor such a game there either November 25 or December 3. New Britain had to drop out of the plans on academic orders, but Slippery Rock and Maryville still are interested.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LITTLE LADDIE, $14.30, $8.30, $6.80; HADNOGAL, $14.40, $11.20; DOROTHY POMP, $14.70.

LITTLE LADDIE, well placed from start and sent up on outside of leaders approaching stretch, took command with good energy and drew out to win easily. HADNOGAL had to be rushed to gain forward position at first turn, pressed pace of GHOST FLYER and continued willingly at close. DOROTHY POMP was forward factor from break and showed a good effort. SYRACUSE came willingly at close.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:27. Off 4:29½. Winner, Mrs. W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS TROY, $95.20, $36.80, $16.00; FLYING CENTAUR, $10.50, $6.60; ANNIKIN, $7.10.

MISS TROY, within striking distance from start, went to leaders with bold move to take command in midstretch and withstood closing bid of FLYING CENTAUR while improving position and just missed getting up. ANNIKIN lacked early speed gained with good speed along backstretch, moved up menacingly and then hung in final strides. GAONA was hustled to front at once, drew far out, but weakened gradually after being caught. COURSING showed nothing. BULLET B. dropped far out of it after a half and was pulled up.

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al—This track offers the second of its stakes today. A field of 14 distance horses has been named for the $5,000 added Prince George Autumn Handicap at a mile and a sixteenth. It is an all-ages affair and, although it lacks Challedon and Kayak II, it has a well-balanced field and some good racing should materialize before a winner is declared. High weight of 117 pounds goes to Conde Rico, a South American importation. The absence of the top flight stars has allowed most of the other horses to get in very light. Aethelwold, winner for W. L. Brann at Pimlico, carries 107 pounds. Bosley, winner here of a sprint, gets in with 110, and War Minstrel totes 112. Manie O'Hara, stake winner at Pimlico, has an assignment of 106 pounds and will draw some backing. Bowie fans will remember the thrilling dead heat that marked this race last year, Conquer and Honey Cloud came into the wire together. I still say that Honey Cloud won even after seeing the photo, but that's ancient history now. The case of Jockey C. F. Simpson isn't ancient history. This boy, whom I do not know, has a wife and two children. He has been working horses and doing stable chores trying to scrape up a living. He was suspended for keeping his horse from running over at Laurel. The horse came back in the next race and won. The horse was a maiden which had been sick all summer and it was in the first outing of the fall season that Simpson is alleged to have done the pulling. Everywhere I go somebody brings up the subject of his suspension and the consensus, I mean among owners, breeders and horsemen, is that Simpson got a raw deal. Everybody seems to have a case of more flagrant breaking of racing rules to point out. However, these involve big shot owners and big shot trainers. Simpson's chief trouble seems to be he is only a twice-a-week jockey. Horses were schooled out of the Puett gate here yesterday. Among those introduced to the electrical boxes was Clodion, notorious as a bad actor. Clodion stood like a lamb and broke in good fashion. Jockey Don Meade went on top in yesterday's program with a record of 246 winners for the year. The Brandywine Stable has shipped in Masked General to prepare for the $10,000 Bryan and O'Hara Memorial Handicap on Thanksgiving. One of the boys came through with a mouthful when he remarked, "Bowie should do all right. It has three Saturdays and two Thanksgivings." I'd give thanks for a few more winners. Bill.

First race—Praetor was not partial to the Laurel track when beaten off in his only start there. At Havre, he was fourth to such as Abrasion and Son Altesse, and off that race received high figure. Pistol Pete, second to Betty's Bobby at Pimlico, looms as the chief threat. Argos might surprise.

Second race—Close Kin has continually been drawing a heavy play on New York tracks and though still a maiden appears a good bet in this company. Nilon has raced well with cheaper grade platers this fall and may provide stout contention. Gossip Time has speed but quits.

Third race—Challamore has won several races this fall, beating some classy juveniles. He meets mediocre competition today and is the best bet of the day. Rumba Gus was badly beaten recently by the top horse in his first start since Saratoga but should improve off that effort. Rapid Way was a fair sort in New York.

Fourth race—Prairie Dog whipped Bill Farnsworth at Pimlico and the latter came on to Bowie to finish second to Rough Time in a handicap. He figures to beat these platers. Deep End and Selmaiad, comprising the Paragon Stable entry, are a hard-hitting pair that should handle the second money, Clingendaal has class and might be dangerous.

Fifth race—Conde Rico receives the call in the feature event after his good second to Heelfly in the Grayson Stakes at Pimlico. Sandy Boot is in rare form and if he races soundly he may threaten the top horse. Bosley won over this track and has a good money chance.

Sixth race—White Sand has some fair races to her credit on local tracks and as she has beaten all the contenders in this field in recent races she should win today. Transmitter is a trifle outclassed by the top horse but his present good form gives him a chance. Brown Knight would prefer a longer route.

Seventh race—Room Service was beaten a length for all the money in his race opening day. He races cheaper than usual today and connections report he has a better than average chance. Bar Play is a consistent plater in this company and will be the one to beat. Count Maurice has class and might better recent efforts.

Best bet—Challamore.

North Carolina-Duke Game Holds Grid Spotlight Today

Oklahoma U. Seeks Second Big Six Title

Sellout Crowd to See Sooners, Missouri; Cornell Favored To Beat Dartmouth

By Bill Boni
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Nov. 17.—Oklahoma and North Carolina, charter members of this season's college football "top ten" will have everything to gain and even more to lose tomorrow as they clash with natural rivals in the day's two biggest "naturals."

The Sooners, who have battered their way past six rivals since Southern Methodist tied them in the opening game, can sew up the Big Six title for the second straight year and virtually clinch another bowl bid by knocking down Paul Christman's passes to knock over Missouri. Carolina, which came from behind with aerials to tie Tulane and has won its seven other starts, runs up against Duke, the club it's been pointing for all fall.

Capacity Crowds

For each game, there will be capacity houses—51,000 at Durham for the Southern Conference duel; 28,000 at Columbia, Mo., for the Big Six battle.

But interest will not be restricted entirely to these two games. Unbeaten and untied Cornell, hopeful of repeating in the Ivy League, will battle Dartmouth up in the New Hampshire hills; Northwestern against Notre Dame, Minnesota against Iowa and Illinois against Ohio State should furnish Midwestern fireworks; Tennesese and Georgia Tech, two of the Southeastern Conference's three tied leaders, will take Vanderbilt and Alabama, respectively; the potent Texas Aggies will be heavily favored over Rice, and unbeaten but tied U. C. L. A. should have a West Coast war on its hands with Santa Clara.

Going out on its favorite limb, where the company is sparse but very choice, this corner's predictions are (probable attendance figures in parentheses):

Duke-North Carolina (51,000)—This may develop into something extra-special in the way of backfield battles, with the McAfees on one side and Stirnweiss and Lalanne on the other. Taking the McAfees and Duke in the full knowledge that, given any sort of opening, those Tarheels are terrors.

Missouri-Oklahoma (28,000) — Those smashing Sooner ends will be leaders in the campaign to prove that Christman "can't pass sitting down." Oklahoma.

Dartmouth-Cornell (18,000)—There's little behind the Dartmouth first string and, last Saturday, that first string wasn't much. Cornell.

Tennessee-Vanderbilt (25,000) — The substitution of Johnny Butler for George Cafego probably will make very little difference in the Volunteer strength. Tennessee.

Notre Dame-Northwestern (56,000)—The Irish beat Purdue, 3-0; Purdue beat Northwestern, 3-0, and Notre Dame should be just about those six points better.

U. C. L. A.-Santa Clara (40,000)—Well-rested U. C. L. A. by a shade.

Rice-Texas A. and M. (30,000)—The Aggies appear to be over their highest hurdle and coming down the straightaway.

Alabama-Georgia Tech (25,000)—Because it's more tricky and resourceful, Georgia Tech.

Penn-Michigan (45,000) — Believing Penn more interested in saving something for Cornell next week, the choice is Michigan.

Oregon State-California (25,000)—Oregon State.

Yale-Princeton (40,000) — Yale's been shifted around so much, even Ducky Pond's confused about his starting backfield. Princeton, and it might be a runaway.

Iowa-Minnesota (50,000)—Off the scores of their Michigan games, the Gophers are five touchdowns better. Hardly that, but still Minnesota.

Army-Penn State (15,000)—State to upset the Soldiers.

Louisiana State-Auburn (20,000)—The pick is L. S. U.

Pitt-Nebraska (30,000)—Looks like too many injuries at Pitt. Nebraska.

Texas-Texas Christian (25,000)—A long shot on T. C. U.

Fordham-St. Mary's (30,000)—The Gaels talk a good game, but Fordham.

New York U.-Georgetown (15,000)—Though the Hoyas will shoot the works to protect a two-year unbeaten streak, the choice is N. Y. U.

Wisconsin-Purdue (30,000)—Purdue.

Syracuse-Colgate (28,000) — Syracuse, to cut loose with one good one.

Kentucky-West Virginia (7,5000)—Kentcky.

Michigan State-Indiana (20,000)—A toughie, Indiana.

Stanford-Washington State (20,000)—Stanford hasn't won yet. This book doesn't show why they should start now. Washington State.

Georgia-South Carolina (10,000)—Georgia.

Holy Cross-Carnegie Tech (25,000)—If it hadn't been for that L. S. U. defeat, the Crusaders would be right up there. Holy Cross.

Detroit-Manhattan (15,000)—Detroit to beat a crippled Jasper Club.

Elsewhere:

East—Temple to shade Villanova, Harvard over New Hampshire, Boston College over Boston U., Rutgers over Springfield, Lafayette over W. and J., Amherst over Williams, Catholic U. over Loyola, Brown over Connecticut.

Midwest—Kansas State over Iowa State, Washington U. over Drake, Kansas over George Washington, St. Louis over Tulsa.

Far West—Colorado over Brigham Young, Utah over Colorado State.

Colonials Due To Face Hawks Minus Star

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
A Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, Nov. 17.—Coach Bill Reinhart sent the George Washington Colonials through an two-hour workout here today at Washington University, prepping for the Kansas U. game tomorrow, and at the end of the session was doubtful if Bob Nowaskey, bidding for All-American recognition, would appear at end against the Jayhawkers.

Nowaskey suffered a leg bruise in a practice session during the Colonials' two-week layoff, and, although he was out with the team today, his playing possibilities will not be decided until tomorrow.

Reinhart and Line Coach Botchey Koch also had a guard problem on their hands after the workout in the 70-degree temperature, as Tim Swett, regular guard, and Frank Farkas, first sub, did not accompany the team and the six guards that are bidding for the starting berth were none too promising in practice. Stan Ziobro will start in his usual post at left guard, while John Kokoski will probably take over the post on the right side of the line, his first start since a September appendectomy.

A crowd of 15,000 is expected for the third renewal of the George Washington-Kansas rivalry in Lawrence tomorrow, the teams having split even in two games in the Nation's Capital, G. W. losing, 7-0, in 1933 and winning, 9-7, last year.

The Jayhawkers were impressive in defeat last week, losing 7 to 0 to Nebraska but outplaying the Cornhuskers in every department but the scoring. They hold a lone Big Six Conference victory, over Iowa State. G. W. is still looking for its first major victory, losing to Georgetown, Clemson and Butler while beating the Citadel and Davis-Elkins.

The day's workout was confined mainly to getting the kinks out after a 20-hour train ride, then kicking, passing and signal drills. The team left immediately afterward for Kansas City, where they will spend the night and make the 40-minute train ride to Lawrence tomorrow, home of the State University, arriving just before game time. Frank August will see action at end if Nowaskey is on the injured list, while Johnny Picco will start regardless.

Catholic U. Plays Loyola at Brookland

14 Cardinal Seniors Will Play Last Game As Collegians; Injured C. U. Stars, Shine and White, in Starting Line-up

Victim of an upset last week that spoiled a six-game winning streak, Catholic University's Flying Cardinals attempt to regain favor with local football fans today when they make their final home stand of the season at Brookland stadium against an in-an-out Loyola of the South eleven. The opening kickoff is slated for 2:15.

Fourteen seniors, including Co-captains Rocco Pirro and Al Calabrese, and Lou Shine, Carmen Pirro and Art Sabo, will be playing before a local gathering for the last time as collegians. For that reason, excluding the sting of last week's 39-13 loss to lowly St. Anselm, the Cards go into the clash intent on winning.

Their chances to achieve that end were helped immeasurably yesterday when Coach Dutch Bergman announced that his two "cripples"—Shine, an end, and Johnny White, center—would be in the starting lineup. Charley Moutenot, who suffered a gash in the St. Anselm debacle, will also be available probably in a starting capacity.

Whatever hope C. U. entertains of getting back a measure of prestige will probably hinge on its ability to stop Joe Fracchia, the "Memphis Iron Man." The latter has featured Loyola's four winning outings to date, and three losses were undergone despite his brilliant work. The losses, incidentally, were to L. S. U., Southwestern and Creighton, and the triumphs from Louisiana College, Birmingham-Southern, Mississippi College and Southwestern Louisiana Institute.

Coached by Larry "Moon" Mullins, fullback of the last Knute Rockne-coached eleven at Notre Dame, the Wolfpack has developed a good ground attack and sturdy defense. The passing—what there is of it—will be handled by Loyola's Fracchia and Catholic's Pete Sachon.

Little Hoyas, Loyola Battle To 0-0 Score

Georgetown Prep held a pair of Loyola Prep stars, Jerry Mellendeck and Joe Sheldt, to reasonable gains yesterday at Garrett Park to earn a 0-0 tie with the favored Baltimore eleven.

Mellendeck, brother of Georgetown University's star of 1938 and a passing sensation in his own right, sparked a Loyola drive to the Little Hoya 5 in the first period, from which point Sheldt advanced to the 1-yard stripe. With the goal so close, Loyola was unable to advance and gave the ball up on downs.

The main threat of the Little Hoyas, under the guidance of Tommy Keating for the first year, was made in the third period when they staged a 37-yard march to the Loyola 17. There "Sport" Barrett fumbled, however, and the game wound up without either team making further threats.

Four Major Thanksgiving Grid Changes

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 17.—College football authorities had as hard a time making up their minds what to do about the President's brand-new Thanksgiving Day as did the Governors of the 48 States. Some of them decided to stick to the original turkey day, November 30; some of them switched to the new one, November 23, and others decided to ignore both and play either on Saturday, November 25, or Saturday, December 2.

Four major changes occurred in the East. Pennsylvania and Cornell, traditional Thanksgiving Day rivals, instead will play at Philadelphia November 25; New York U. and Fordham and Duquesne and Detroit moved their dates to December 2, and Maryland and Syracue, scheduled to meet at College Park, Md., November 25, instead will play two days earlier and will start their game at 11 in the morning.

In the South, the Richmond-William and Mary game at Richmond and Virginia Military-Virginia Tech at Roanoke were moved from November 30 to November 23; in the Midwest, Missouri and Kansas switched from November 30 to November 25, and St. Louis and Washington U. from November 30 to December 2; out in the Mountain States Big Seven, Denver will play on both holidays, meeting Idaho on November 23 (shifted from the 18th) and Colorado on November 30.

Professional football's muddled picture may be considerably clarified tomorrow afternoon when the five National League teams which still retain title hopes take the field in various sectors.

In the East, the Redskins, tied for the Eastern lead with the Giants, meet the Cardinals in a game which finds the Washington team an overwhelming favorite. But the Redskins, even by a victory, may be unable to break their deadlock with the Giants, who are pronounced choices over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

In the West, the Green Bay Packers, the Detroit Lions and the Chicago Bears all rule favorites to win their games, but an upset defeat is apt to eliminate any of the trio from title consideration.

Upset Likely

The Packers will invade Brooklyn to meet the Dodgers and the Lions will be playing the Rams at Cleveland. The Bears oppose the Eagles at Chicago.

Detroit and the Packers are currently tied for the Western lead with six victories and two defeats each, but the Bears, with three defeats, are not yet out of the reckoning. If the Bears hurdle the Eagles, and the Lions and Packers encounter defeat, the upshot will be a three-way tie in the West. One more defeat for the Bears, however, would eliminate the Chicago club.

The most plausible scene of an upset in the West is Cleveland, where the Rams are opposing the Lions. Cleveland, coached by Earl (Dutch) Clark, former Detroit mentor, has been pointing for tomorrow's game and is famed as an upset club. Last season the Rams defeated the Bears and Lions on consecutive Saturdays.

Important Game

Tomorrow's game for the Redskins is no less crucial than any of their so-called more important battles. If the Washington team is licked by the Cardinals, a defeat the following week by the Lions would dash the Redskins' Eastern division hopes. If the Redskins hurdle the Cardinals they could remain in the running even if they lost to the Lions the following Sunday.

Coach Ray Flaherty has been drilling his Redskins by day and lecturing them by night as the Cardinal battle approaches. He has been attempting to drive home to his athletes the folly of underestimating the Cardinal team, which he highly respects despite their one victory in eight games.

The Cardinals have been following the Redskins onto the Griffith Stadium practice field daily, working in strict secrecy. Coach Ernie Nevers indicated yesterday that both Marshall Goldberg and Frank Patrick, the former Pitt stars, will be in his starting backfield.

Friends School Boasts Two Undefeated, Untied Teams

Six-Man Seniors, Regulation Juniors Hold Four Straight Victories Apiece

Georgetown University and Washington-Lee High may boastof one undefeated football record apiece this season, but there's one school in Washington with two undefeated records to its credit. That's Friends School, the little Winconsin avenue institution without enough players for a full-sized team. Friends senior boys, therefore, play the only scholastic six-man ball in the city and so far they've won four straight games.

Friends' juniors, too, have gone through four straight without a loss, their opponents all being the regulation 11-man teams.

Latest endeavor of the seniors occurred Thursday when a 37-0 victory was taken over Woodberry Forest High's 6-man aggregation. Armand Newmyer scored three times on passes from Al Dulcan and the latter tallied once on a pass from Newmyer. Juniors had a little more trouble with the Landon Juniors, but managed for a 27-19 judgment. Johnny Carter hung up his sixth and seventh touchdowns of more than 40 yards this season, and Delos Smith and Bob Fergus lent their efforts to the final outcome.

As important to the Friends youngsters as is Georgetown's engagement with N. Y. U. today are their final two games next week. The seniors toss their four-game streak into a clash with Locust Valley, of Long Island, next Saturday, and the juniors meet the Cleveland Clippers, a sandlot aggregation, Tuesday. A pair of undefeated records depend on the two scores.

W.-L. Defeats St. John's Eleven, 28-13

Washington-Lee High extended its sensational winning streak this season to nine straight yesterday on its home gridiron, the victim this time being St. John's High and the score 28-13.

In closing out their season with a record of four won and three lost, the Johnnies managed for a brief lead at the start of the game but fell behind a devastating ground attack paced by the Little Generals' Jimmy French. The burly halfback rang up three of his club's four touchdowns, Bill Arnaud scored the other, and Berle Hoover continued his scintillating placement record with four perfect ones in as many tries.

Johnnies Go Over

Before Coach Johnny Baker's charges had set themselves, St. John's rushed downfield and saw Substitute Back Cordus carry the ball over from the 8-yard stripe. Frank Cady, regular half, kicked the extra point and the Johnnies led, 7-0.

Washington-Lee's powerful offense wasn't to be stopped, though, and the Generals came back to tie the score in the second quarter and put the game on ice in the third. French was almost single-handedly responsible for the first score with his 60-yard dash through the whole Johnnie team. And in the third period he put the eventual winners in the van with a 10-yard slant over the goal after Wally Legg and Arnaud had lugged the ball into scoring territory from their own 40. French's 20-yard pass to Arnaud accounted for the second third-quarter tally.

Makes Final Bid

On the short end of a 21-7 count as the final period opened, St. John's made its final bid. Cady passed to Brogan from deep in his own territory and followed that with a 15-yard trip to the W.-L. 45. Cordua, Tom Chisari and Steve Burnes brought the ball to the 20, and Cady went off-tackle for 16 to the 4. On the next play Cady went over, but failed in his placement effort.

Apparently Washington-Lee was displeased with this attack on its lead and by way of retribution scored again for good measure. It was French again on a 2-yard plunge, and as in his three previous efforts, Hoover booted accurately to close the scoring.

Maryland Meets Favored V. M. I. Eleven Today at Norfolk

Terrapins Underdogs In Battle

President Byrd Accompanies Team On Trip by Boat Down Potomac

By Al Hailey

Maryland University's football squad, flanked by college officials and students, the band and a corps of cheer leaders set sail last night on the District of Columbia for Norfolk, Va., where they meet a favored Virginia Military Institute eleven today at 2 p. m.

The party, headed by President H. C. (Curley) Byrd, is scheduled to arrive in Norfolk at 8 o'clock this morning. The Terps will run through a light session on Foreman Field, Norfolk's new stadium, and rest until game time.

Next to Last Game

The Keydet encounter is Maryland's only Southern Conference game of the season—the game originally scheduled for November 30 with Washington and Lee having been canceled.

Coach Frank Dobson's lads' venture over the bounding main brings them into their next to the last game of the season with a five-game losing streak behind them.

Although they are out for the season with injuries, Bob Smith and Pop Wharton, regular centers, made the trip along with the entire squad. With those two on the sidelines today, Maryland will take the field the 8-5 underdog against V. M. I.'s Fighting Squadron.

New Faces in Line-Up

Paul McNeil and Frank Blazek, conscripted for the center position, and Edward Lloyd, a senior, are the only new faces in the Terps' starting line-up. Lloyd will start at leftguard, instead of the regular, George Lawrence, to act as captain for the game. The seven other seniors on the squad have had the captaincy honor already this year.

Scores of the past 17 games between Maryland and V. M. I. give the Terps a shade of nine won, six lost and two tied. Scores have been close in all but two games. V. M. I. trounced the Terps, 47 to 14, last year, and Maryland holds a 41-to-0 victory scored back in 1931.

In addition to the burn of last year's humiliating experience with the Keydets, the Terps will have their own present record to inspire them to victory.

Lack Scoring Punch

The Terps have put up a hard fight in every game, but their lack of scoring punch has handicapped them. They haven't scored in three straight games. On the other hand, V. M. I. has won four, tied one and lost three. The Keydets defeated Virginia—who beat Maryland 12 to 7—by a score of 16 to 13, if you want comparative statistics, and have been a threat in every game.

The Terps line-up today will have Beamer and Shaffer at ends; Brown and Albarano, tackles; Glenger and Lloyd, guards; McNeil, center; Murphy, quarter; Boyda and Skotnicki, halfbacks, and Lumsden, fullback.

bulk and because its attack depends more on power than deception. Conversely, a muddy field and a soggy, slippery ball likely would wreak havoc with N. Y. U.'s contemplated passing offense and razzle-dazzle tactics which have won it the title of "the most unorthodox" eleven around New York.

Georgetown will shoot the works in this game, Hagerty declared last night, for since this last scheduled game there is nothing to hide from scouts. Moreover, Hagerty, who has a host of friends here, where he starred with the New York Giants' pro eleven a few years ago, is anxious to make an impression with his team.

Record at Stake

To Georgetown, this N. Y. U. game means everything. First, of all, it will decide whether the Hoyas carry their undefeated streak into a third season and retain a chance to set some sort of a record for consecutive games won. Secondly, a win over a team rated by most leading critics as one of the top ten in the East would establish Georgetown as a truly great outfit, a distinction some are now denying the Hoyas because their schedule is none too robust.

Lastly, Georgetown's showing tomorrow will make or break its hopes for a possible post-season game, which would be accepted if offered.

The Hoyas' tentative starting line-up for the Violets, as announced last night by Coach Hagerty, includes: Mike Kopcik and John Lascair, ends; Earl Fullilove and Joe Daniels, tackles; Augie Lio and Mark Ostinato, guards; Jim Reichey, center, and Jules Koshlap, Lou Ghecas, Joe McFadden and Jim Castiglia in the backfield.

"Bullet Benny" Bulvin, stocky sophomore halfback, and Al Blozis, mammoth sophomore tackle, are not listed as starters but both are destined to play a prominent role for Georgetown. Bulvin, finally having overcome his defensive shortcomings against passes, will be used to relieve Ghecas and Kashlap, and Blozis, as well as Ed Kowalsky, are due to split up the game with Fullilove and aniels.

Western and Eastern to Meet For Interhigh Grid Honors

Steiner, Harry Martin and Jim Porter divided that devastating push between them, unfolding every conceivable trick in the fertile mind of their coach, Hardy Pierce. Porter got credit for the score when he romped over right end for 5 yards after a lateral from Steiner.

From then until the close of the half, the clubs battled on near even terms. Central, on the strength of a 25-yard pass from Johnny Bredbenner to Steiner, reached the Raider 20, but there lost the ball on downs.

Then, still employing its fazzle-dazzle, the Piercemen took a Western kick on their own 28 and started toward the points that seemed to give them a cinch on the game. Bredbenner starred in this drive with 21 yards gained in three attempts, and it was the same pile-driving fullback who went over from the 10-yard stripe. Again Steiner converted, to make it 14 to 6 in Central's favor.

Lecture Helped

Coach Dan Ahern apparently gave his charges a thorough going over at half-time. They came out and brought the count to 14 to 13 before three minutes had elapsed. Taking possession on his own 38, Jake Hilleary gained 5 yards through center, Barnes went off tackle for 24, Hilleary contributed 3 more, Fullback Buck Herrlein reeled off 10 to the 28, and Hilleary slanted through guard for the remaining distance, dragging Porter the last few yards with him. Barnes seeped easily through the Central wall for the extra point.

It was a 39-yard pass from Barnes to Bill Grey that put Western back in the lead. Young Grey grabbed the ball out of a huddle on the 5, walked over, and again Barnes rushed the conversion. Then occurred the final and conclusive Raider touchdown, the most sensational of the game.

Backed up to his 1-yard line by a freakish Steiner kick, Barnes was sent at the middle of the line instead of kicking out of danger. That effort was good for 8 yards, and 14 plays later as the fourth quarter was starting, Barnes plunged the last 6 yards to make the score 27-14. The longest run in that 99-yard drive was Hilleary's 20-yard end run just after the final quarter started. Barnes rushed the extra point, but it was called back and an offside penalty imposed. The next time Snow passed to Nance to make the conversion good.

Central Didn't Quit

It was up to Central then. Full credit for not giving up despite Western's very obvious superiority in the line must go to Steiner and his cohorts. Western supporters had cause to gnaw their nails as Benny went into the air with a vengeance.

Starting at its 35, Central got to the Western 46 along the ground. Four passes by Steiner, then three to Dick Farr, got the ball to the 20 and the fourth to Dan Magnuson on a tackle pass covered the crucial 20 yards.

That wound up scoring except for Steiner's third successful placement. Western came within 18 yards of scoring again due to Hilleary's dash of 24 yards, but the whistle stopped things. It was a heart-breaking loss for the Mount Pleasanters—witness the tears shed by most squad members—just as it was a gratifying victory for Western. Barnes, in the final analysis, proved the winning margin with the best exhibition of football schoolboy addicts have seen in many a year.

title. The Parkers are eagerly anticipating their next meeting with the Raiders and hope to avenge the former defeat.

Too much credit for Eastern's title march can not be given to Mike Kelley, its genial coach. He gave the boys the complicated Notre Dame shift at the beginning of the season and many critics were quick to point out that this would impair his team's chances. It was a bit difficult at first, the boys admitted, but once acclimated to it, the shift proved a tartar to opponents.

Trainers Hold Edge

Three thousand spectators turned out yesterday to watch Eastern's big line and Tech's pony backfield hook up in a deathless battle and at the end they were no more satisfied as to the superiority of either faction than they were at the start.

The statistics gave the Manual Trainers a slight edge, six first downs to Eastern's three. Tech also held a slight edge in yards gained rushing and in passing.

The fact that neither team was able to penetrate the opponents' 30-yard line lends mute testimony to the closeness of the battle. From beginning to end it was hard fought, with play being confined to the area continguous to the midfield stripe.

At the end of the game both teams joined in hearty cheers to each other. A few Eastern students raised a mild demonstration, but it was quickly dispersed by the gendarmes.

Victors Score Three Touchdowns on Passer To Beat Alexandrians

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hopewell, Va., Nov. 17.—Hopewell High School's passing attack wrecked the defense of George Washington High, of Alexandria, here this afternoon as the Blue Devils counted three times on aerials to turn back the Northern Virginians, 25 to 0. A crowd of about 2,500 fans saw the hosts record their fourth Virginia Class A Conference victory of the season.

The Presidents succeeded in checking their opponents' ground attack and recorded seven first downs to five for the Blue Devils, but they had no defense for the accurate passing of Polich and Pritchard.

Hopewell scored first in the second period on a pass from Pritchard to Parr for a net gain of 57 yards. Hobbs' kick was wide.

Passes produced two more scores in the third period, less than three minutes after the kickoff. The Pritchard to Parr combination recorded the first, while a minute later Pritchard passed to Phelps from the 10-yard line, to make it 18 to 0.

Hopewell's final score came in the final quarter, when Polich plowed through the line from the 4-yard stripe, after Parr's 55-yard gallop had set up the score. A pass from Parr to Pritchard was good for the only extra point recorded by the winners.

Jimmy Taylor and Gordon Herrel sparked A. G. W. offense that clicked spasmodically, but bogged down inside the 25-yard line.

fense at picking off and blocking blows. Meanwhile, Billy just went on piling up points. At first he didn't do much punching with his right hand, but in all the two-dozen or so times he fired the "cross" with that fist during the fight, he never missed once.

The ninth and thirteenth rounds, when the two stood toe-to-toe and slugged it out, were the best rounds. At the finish of the thirteenth and during the late going in the fifteenth, however, Gus was a thoroughly whipped fighter, and Billy's only mark was a slight scratch on his shin bone, which he acquired somehow in the busy going.

Fred Henneberry, Australian middleweight champion, made his first American start in a tough eight-round semi-windup and was awarded a draw with Georgie Abrams, of Washington, D. C., Henneberry weighed 162¾, Abrams 160¾.

Patrick Edward Comiskey, the Paterson, N. J., Irish heavyweight prospect with the club-like right hand, chalked up his twenty-second knockout victory in 24 professional starts by stopping Murray Kanner, 197¼, game Washington, D. C., battler, in 2:48 of the second round.

Stanley Hasrato, 157¾, Yonkers, N. Y., and Izzy Redman, 156, Brooklyn, went six rounds to a draw.

Billy's Conn's "Kid" brother, Jackie, was stopped in 2 minutes, 59 seconds of the first round by Maynard (Mutt) Womer, of Charlottesville, Va. Conn weighed 163¾; Womer 161½. Womer, who defeated Jackie once before, dropped the Pittsburgh youngster with a right hand twice. Conn staggered to his feet, helpless, after the second knockdown, and Referee Johnny McAvoy stepped in to halt the proceedings just before the bell.

One of the officials tonight was Steve Hamas, the former Pennsylvania State College athlete and leading heavyweight contender, making his first appearance in the garden as a fight judge.

Kingsport Routs Morristown, 40-0

Kingsport, Tenn., Nov. 17 (AP).—Bobby Cifers wrote "finis" to a sensational high school football career tonight by scoring 20 points in leading Kingsport to a 40-to-0 rout of Morristown.

The 185-pound halfback, who led the Nation in scoring last year with 235 points in 12 games, reeled off touchdown runs of 67, 16, and 20 yards to boost his scoring total for ten games this year to 127 points. He added the extra point from placement after two journeys.

High Quintets Will Maintain Playoff System

Shaughnessy Idea Is To Be Employed for Championship Teams

The same Shaughnessy system, used to decide the 1938-39 basketball champion of the public high schools, will be in effect again this season, release of the 1939-40 schedule yesterday revealed.

Unlike last season, however, when several teams were forced into playoffs to decide participants in the final round-robin a few days before the tournament, this year's court tangle will start on January 9, leaving sufficient time after the regular schedule for playoffs.

Once more the season will be played with Tuesday afternoon and Friday night double-headers. The night bills, with the exception of February 2, when an open date is scheduled, will be staged at McKinley's spacious hall, and afternoon engagements on various other floors.

Tuesday, January 9, 3:30—Anacostia vs. Eastern, at Eastern; Central vs. Roosevelt, at Roosevelt.

Friday, January 12, 7:30—McKinley vs. Western; Woodrow Wilson vs. Anacostia, at McKinley.

Tuesday, January 16, 3:30—Eastern vs. Central, at McKinley; Roosevelt vs. McKinley, at Roosevelt.

Friday, January 19, 7:30—Eastern vs. Roosevelt; Anacostia vs. Central, at McKinley.

Tuesday, January 23, 3:30—Woodrow Wilson vs. Western, at Roosevelt.

Friday, January 26, 7:30—Roosevelt vs. Western; McKinley vs. Woodrow Wilson, at McKinley.

Tuesday, February 6, 3:30—Anacostia vs. Roosevelt, at Roosevelt; Central vs. Western.

Friday, February 9, 7:30—Eastern vs. McKinley; Roosevelt vs. Woodrow Wilson, at McKinley.

Tuesday, February 13, 3:30—Anacostia vs. McKinley, at Anacostia; Eastern vs. Western, at Eastern.

Friday, February 16, 7:30—Central vs. Woodrow Wilson, at McKinley; Anacostia vs. Western.

Tuesday, February 20, 3:30—Eastern vs. Woodrow Wilson, at Eastern; Central vs. McKinley.

Championship Series

Friday and Saturday, February 23 and 24, or Friday and Saturday, March 1 and 2.

If there are no ties in percentage standing that necessitate additional games, February 23 and 24 will be used. If additional games are necessary, the dates March 1 and 2 will be used.

Frankie Wills, Brookman Matched

Two Welterweights to Meet Monday in Special Six Rounder at Arena

Frankie Wills, who dropped a hard-fought eight-round decision to Phil Furr this week in Turner's Arena, will return in a special six-round bout Monday night to fight El Brookman, another local welterweight.

Killer Lamar and Al Hart, local colored heavyweights, will share the headline spot with Joey Spangler and Milo Theodurescu, a Rumanian importation, in eight-rounders.

Both Spangler and Wills are seeking a return match with Furr. Spangler dropped a questionable decision to Furr several weeks ago, while Johnny Bowen, Wills' manager, claimed his fighter never got the cobwebs out of his head after Furr floored him in the first few seconds of the fight.

Al Gilbert and Art Lind, middleweights, will fight a return six-round match. Lind, Ken Overlin's protege, scored an upset over Gilbert after being knocked down in the first round. Two four-round bouts will bring the total to 36 rounds Monday night.

Coach Crisler Explains Reasons For His Wolverines' Defeats

'Too Much Ballyhoo' And Injurieh 'Reason' For Team's Flop

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 17.—The downfall of Michigan's highly touted football team was described by Fritz Crisler today as due primarily to "too much ballyhoo" and injuries.

Here with the Wolverines for tomorrow's game with Pennsylvania—a contest each team hopes will put it back on the victory trail after disappointing defeats last week—Crisler admitted "we started the season expecting to be world beaters."

"But there were three factors that I knew we'd have to combat before we were successful," the Wolverine mentor said.

"First, our line had to be rebuilt. Then we got too much ballyhoo. All the experts picked us for Big Ten or national champions. These boys are good football players, but when they read they are national champions they take things too easily.

"The third factor was injuries. There were a couple of spots I knew would be harmful to us if the first-string players were oadly injured.

"Well, Paul Kromer was the first to be knocked out. He got his in the first game of the season—Michigan State—and hasn't been at top form all year. Then in the Illinois game, Forrest Evashetski was badly bunged up. I doubt if he'll be able to play against Pennsylvania. There are two injuries that hurt us badly.

FRITZ CRISLER

Crisler said his prize back, Tim Harmon, is "a natural," but as for being the best back he ever coached, well, "it would be better to put it this way: I've coached three great backs in my short career. There was Manders at Minnesota, Constable at Princeton and Harmon at Michigan. All three were fine backs, but I wouldn't say which was the best."

Young, Swope Retire From Gen. Electric

Philip Reed, 40, to Be Chairman; C. E. Wilson, 53, to Be President

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 17.—Two of the Nation's outstanding industrialists—Owen D. Young and Gerard Swope—announced their retirement today from active management of the General Electric Co.

Young, the chairman of the board, is 65; Swope, the president, is 67. Both have passed the company's retirement age.

Succeeding the veterans are Philip D. Reed, 40, as chairman and C. E. Wilson, 53, as president. They will shift from their respective offices as assistant to the president and executive vice president on January 1.

After that date, Young and Swope will precede their present titles with the word "honorary."

Wilson began his career as an office boy at the age of 13 with the Sprague Electric Co., a former constituent company of General Electric. He is a native of New York City. Reed, who was born in Milwaukee, Wis., joined General Electric in its law department in 1926. The elevation of Reed and Wilson came almost as a birthday gift to both, for yesterday Reed was 40 years old and tomorrow Wilson will be 53.

65 Cents Voted on Common

The directors declared a dividend of 65 cents a share on the common stock, payable December 20 to holders of record November 24. It brings the total common stock payments for the year to $1.40 a share compared with 90 cents in 1938.

Young, who is 65 years old, was born in Van Hornsville, N. Y., and put himself through Boston University's law school by tutoring and serving as a librarian. His law work brought him into engineering circles where he attracted the attention of Charles A. Coffin, then General Electric president. In 1913 Coffin named Young general counsel for the company. His work with the electrical concern widened and he became known as one of the leaders in the public utility industry.

When Coffin resigned in 1922, Young was chosen chairman of the board to succeed him. Subsequently he has taken the part of an active leader in national business and political affairs.

Swope will be 67 on December 1. His first job came as a result of a desire to go from St. Louis to see the Chicago World's Fair in 1893. There he obtained a job as helper at $1 a day in the Chicago service shop of General Electric. He worked his way from there to a directorship and vice presidency in Western Electric, and after a period of war service coffin brought Swope back to General Electric. He became president of General Electric in 1922.

Wilson a Self-Made Executive

Wilson, who had only a primary school education before his first job with General Electric, is considered a "self-made man" in industry, who rose to the top by demonstrated ability. He has spent most of the time in New York, except for a spell in Bridgeport, Conn., with the same company. He is married and lives in Scarsdale, N. Y.

Reed holds degrees in electrical engineering from the University of Wisconsin, 1921, and a doctorate of law, Fordham University, 1924. He is a member of Tau Beta Pi, honorary engineering society. He was studying law at night in Fordham when he became vice president and patent counsel for the Van Heusen Products Co., of New York. Previously he acted as patent attorney for J. M. Van Keusen, of Boston. He is married, has two children, and lives at Larchmont, N. Y.

In a joint statement issued by Young and Swope they said: "When we took office, we indicated our views that it would contribute to the morale and effectiveness of the organization if as a general rule men in important administrative positions would consider retirement when they reached the age of 65 . . . Having adopted that policy of retirement during our administration, we now apply it to ourselves."

Disston to Expand Light Armor Plant

Philadelphia, Nov. 17 (AP).—Henry Disston & Sons, Inc., announced today plans for a $250,000 addition to their plant to meet increasing orders for light armor plate for tanks and airplanes. Horace Disston said orders from the United States Government "have been coming in so fast that we cannot meet requirements in our present quarters." He said the new addition would cost about $65,000, with the balance of the cost representing machinery to equip the building.

The improvements will add 60 additional workers to the plant's present force of 2,000, Disston said.

Earmarked Gold Drops Further in Week

Gold imports gained a little last week, the Commerce Department said yesterday. Imports in the seven days ended November 8 totaled $27,057,711, compared with $19,977,092 in the preceding week. Imports have been sharply reduced since the war began.

The department also said the amount of gold deposited by foreign governments and central banks in the Federal Reserve Banks of this country declined during the week by $1,621,433 to $1,174,837,265. Presumably both the imported gold and the gold taken out of earmark were sold to the United States Treasury.

Wheat Turns Weak in Final Pit Trading

Corn Steady, Oats Unchanged, Rye and Lard Lower

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 17.—Turning weak in the final hour after a listless early trade at unchanged prices, the wheat market today closed fractionally lower.

Selling based on the wavering action of securities and on continuation of unsettled weather in eastern portions of the hard winter wheat belt accounted for the reaction. July wheat, representing the 1940 crop, led the decline, although it is the cheapest contract traded on the board.

Wheat closed ⅛ to ½ lower than yesterday; December, 87¼ to 87⅜; May, 85⅛ to 85¼, while corn was ⅛ off to ⅛ up; December, 50¼ to 50⅜; May, 52⅜. Oats closed unchanged to ¼ down; Rye, ⅜ to ⅝ off, and lard 8 to 13 lower.

Although light rains reported so far were confined mostly to Eastern areas of the hard winter wheat belt, which received some relief a week ago, the moisture was not regarded as sufficient to bring much fresh help to the crop. Dry areas in the West, which need rain the most, apparently were missed. Further rains are likely in eastern sections of the belt, the forcast indicated.

Oil Institute Fights Federal Regulation

Chicago, Nov. 17 (AP).—The board of directors of the American Petroleum Institute adopted a resolution today opposing passage of a bill by Representative William P. Cole (Democrat), of Maryland, providing for Federal regulation of petroleum production through a national bureau.

Earlier in the week Gov. Leon C. Phillips of Oklahoma and other speakers had counseled the oil industry to fight all efforts to place it under Government control, declaring the oil producing States had proved themselves able to cope with the conservation program.

The resolution, affirmed that "The American system of free enterprise is indispensable to the continuance of the American form of government."

Selling Develops in Closing Hour; Traders Lighten Holdings Over Week-end; U. S. Bonds Firm Despite Liquidation

New York, Nov. 17.—As on previous occasions this week, stock prices today failed to carry through the promising upswing of the preceding session. Levels held fairly well during most of the day, but toward the end a modest volume of liquidation developed and prices slipped a little bit down the hill up which they struggle from time to time. Trading also dwindled and aggregated only 770,840 shares on the big board. Pricewise, the net result of the session was a decline in the composite verge of 0.09 point.

There was a distinct tendency on the part of traders to lighten commitments toward the end of the trading period, for the war in Europe can produce unpleasant week-end surprise, however inactive the struggle appears to be at the moment. But the financial community was not greatly perturbed by that trend. In the see-saw movements of the week, gains usually outstripped the recessions and activity was most pronounced during the advances.

Investment Aspect

Also comforting, to a degree, was further evidence that the investment aspects of the market are beginning to overshadow the speculative fervor that was touched off by the war. The most active stocks continued to include many modest-priced issues, but the blue chip stocks were well represented.

Among the groups, manufacturing issues managed to close with a small average advance, while the merchandising, food and utility sections likewise improved. But the steel, oil and motor divisions fell, and carrier stocks likewise drifted lower. Big steel lost 1½ points, and General Motors proved almost as vulnerable, although Chrysler held close to its previous close. Loft remained in the limelight with a rise of 1¼ points. Curtiss-Wright remained the volume leader, but varied only a little in price.

Carrier stocks were dampened especially by the proposed New Haven reorganization plan, put forward by an ICC examiner. Under this latest proposal, interests of stockholders would be disregarded, and the tendency to bear down on equity interests thus finds another illustration. The New Haven problem is highly complex, and assuredly will provoke numerous disputes before it can be settled.

Third-Term Talk

There were few other developments to affect the trend of the stock market. Wall street agreed thoroughly with Mr. Roosevelt that his quips about the third-term issue are "funny as a crutch," that being a most lugubrious instrument. The tendency everywhere seems to be toward a resumption of the debates on internal affairs, which badly need attention. Something might be gained, the market thinks, if the budgetary, taxation and other problems again receive the public notice they richly deserve.

Bond market developments of the day were of some significance, for the Treasury list survived ably a test which the Federal Reserve banks afforded through sales from the heavily overloaded open market portfolio. The banking statistics showed liquidation of nearly $17,000,000 bonds and notes in the week to last Wednesday, and there is every reason to believe the sales are continuing. Prices, nevertheless, managed to move fractionally higher, which is an excellent indication of a heavy underlying demand for sound investments. Institutional buyers are chiefly interested, of course, as returns on such investments would not interest many private investors.

Latin Americans

The bond market also reflects a good deal of speculation in Latin-American default issues, based upon the various indications from Washington that means are being sought for Administration boondoggling in that fertile field. The expectation appears to prevail that any money loaned south of the Rio Grande by Uncle Sam will result in a trickle of payments to holders of the currently defaulted bonds. A degree of caution seems advisable, in view of the failure of the plan evolved last March with Brazil.

Listed bond trading was quiet today, but the undertone remained good, especially in United States Treasury and foreign government securities. The rally in Treasury issues surprised dealers, for it occurred in the face of selling by the Federal Reserve Banks.

Dealers in Treasury securities reported excellent demand for all maturities. Longest datings showed the largest advances, which ranged to ⅝ point. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations likewise developed strength. It was generally agreed that insurance company buying was the principal reason for the improvement. Some of the highly rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds also were better, but others tended to lag.

Secondary rail liens and the more obviously speculative issues of that group managed to move higher by small fractions, in most instances. The buying of Interborough and B. M. T. bonds continued, while Manhattan Railway obligations drifted downward. Holding company and share privilege bonds were idle and uncertain, owing to the vagaries of related stocks. Other special groups attracted little attention.

Court Affirms $7,000,000 Claim Against Calif. S. O.

San Francisco, Nov. 17 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed today an award of about $7,000,000 to the Federal Government against the Standard Oil Co. of California in connection with oil fields in the Elk Hills district of Kern County, now a naval oil reserve.

The case grew from the action of Secretary of Interior Ickes, who held in 1935 that the Elk Hills land never should have been deeded to the State of California as a school grant in 1903, and subsequently, never should have been acquired by Standard Oil.

Secretary Ickes contended the original deed was not legal because it was known at that time the land was rich in mineral deposits.

The court today held, in effect, that Secretary Ickes' decision was correct, and that Federal Judge Leon R. Yankwich, of Los Angeles, held rightfully in awarding the Government $6,214,102, plus interest from date of judgment, nearly two years ago.

ICC New Haven Plan Wipes Out All Stockholders

By the Associated Press

An Interstate Commerce Commission examiner proposed a plan of reorganization yesterday for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, calling for sharp reductions in capitalization and fixed charges.

The examiner, Harvey H. Wilkinson, proposed a capitalization of $365,000,000 for the reorganized company, as compared with $475,871,843 as of October 23, 1935 (date of filing petition for reorganization), and fixed charges and guarantees of $6,385,019, as compared with $20,329,920.

Wilkinson said the equities of holders of both the common and preferred stock "are found to have no value." He made no provision for the present stockholders to participate in the reorganized company.

The proposal calls for the transfer of property and assets of the Providence, Warren & Bristol Railroad and the Hartford & Connecticut Western Railroad to the New Haven. Wilkinson also recommended that properties and assets of the Boston & Providence Railroad be acquired by the New Haven.

He said that in view of the existing unfavorable earning position of the Old Colony Railroad no plan for its reorganization should be approved at this time.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Nov. 17 U. S. Dept Agr.) (AP).—An increased amount of interest was being shown today in domestic wools by users in the Boston market. Few sales were being closed, but the quantities of wool involved were usually small. Good French, combing-length, fine, territory wool in original bags were selling at 95@1.00, scoured basis, mostly on the low side of the range when only small quantities were desired. There was a moderate demand for 12-month Texas wools at 95@97, scoured basis, but sizable quantities were held mostly at 1.00 and above.

Big Railroads Report Jump In Net Income

S. P. Turns $9,293,444 Loss Last Year Into Profit of $1,724,389

By the Associated Press

Union Pacific

Union Pacific Railroad, for the nine months ended September 30, today reported net income of $9,487,884 after charges, equal after preferred dividends to $2.92 a common share, compared with $8,746,408 or 2.59 a common share in the like 1938 period. For September alone net income was $3,352,951, against 2,404,729 in September last year.

Illinois Central

Chicago, Nov. 17 (AP).—The Illinois Central Railroad reported today net income for September totaled $1,106,553, compared with $439,865 last year. For the first nine months this year the railroad had a net loss of $1,352,668 for the like 1938 period. Figures were exclusive of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley Railroad.

Great Western

The Chicago Great Western reported net income of $142,700 for September, compared with 23,129 a year ago. For the first nine months this year the railroad had a net loss of $350,811 against a loss of $1,320,611 for the corresponding period in 1938.

Scrap Melting In October Sets All-Time Record

New York, Nov. 17.—Steel mills, blast furnaces and foundries in October consumed 3,974,000 gross tons of iron and steel scrap in producing new iron and steel, according to the estimate of the Institute of Scrap Iron & Steel, Inc. This is an all-time record and is a 68 per cent increase over the 2,393,000 tons melted down in October, 1938.

For the first 10 months of this year domestic consumption of scrap has totaled 27,176,000 tons, compared with only 16,385,000 tons in the corresponding period of 1938. In fact, the 10-month total for 1939 is well ahead of the 21,528,000 tons consumed in 1938.

Assuming a continued high requirement for scrap over the remainder of this year, the indicated consumption for 1939 is about 34,000,000 tons. The all-time record for the use of scrap is 38,006,272 tons in 1937.

The current ratio of domestic consumption to exports of scrap is about 11 to 1.

Security Offerings Expand in Week

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—The new capital market showed signs of revival this week, public offerings of new securities reaching $41,462,500, the largest amount since the period ended August 24, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today.

The total, covering the week ended yesterday, was approximately three times as large as any other since the beginning of the war in Europe put a damper on activity. A $30,000,000 issue by New York City was mainly responsible for breaking the stalement. Latest offerings were 97 per cent for obtaining new capital rather than for refunding existing obligations.

British Foreign Trade Picks Up in October

London, Nov. 17 (AP).—British foreign trade in October showed a slight gain over the first month of the war but declined in comparison with a similar period last year. Imports totaled £61,841,464 (about $247,365,856), an increase over September by £11,917,197 (about $47,668,788) but £17,237,439 (about $68,939,756) below that of October, 1938.

Britain exported goods valued at £24,622,840 (about $78,491,360), an increase of £1,535,595 (about $6,142,380) over September but £17,937,156 (about $71,748,624) under that of October a year ago.

Exports of Cotton 51% Above Year Ago

Sales of American cotton and cotton products for export totaled 3,700,000 bales between August 1 and November 15, the Agriculture Department reported yesterday. Included were cotton products equivalent to 187,000 bales. The quantity actually reported during this period totaled 2,057,382 bales, compared with 1,387,723 in the same period last year.

The sales were made under the Government's export subsidy program.

Foreign Markets

London, Nov. 17 (AP).—Buyers got busy in the stock market in late dealings today after uncertain early price changes. Demand was mostly from investment sources and concentrated on gilt-edged issues. Brazilian loans were favorites among foreign bonds. Gold shares and rubbers attracted fair inquiry while oils tended lower. International issues moved decisively against the main trend. Industrial leaders kept in the background.

Paris—In brisk trade Bourse securities slanted higher today. Buying centered on domestic equities while foreign shares shifted unevenly. Rentes closed 20 to 235 centimes higher.

Amsterdam—The Bourse broke out of a recent trading rut with substantial gains today.

Cotton Prices Decline From New Highs

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 17.—The cotton futures market shifted into reverse today and crushed out early gains that had placed prices at new high levels. Old contracts closed 2 to 4 points lower while new October advanced 3.

Buyers became timid as December rose to 9.71 cents, apparently fearing further advance might attract more cotton out of 1938-39 loan stocks and thus depress the entire market with more supplies than can be currently handled. Southern selling and profit-taking were attracted and this was enough to trim quotations.

The market got off to a good start in line with stronger foreign markets and in response to substantial buying from Liverpool, the continent and Bombay, especially the last.

Traders were cheered by the concrete evidence offered by the Department of Agriculture that cotton is moving into export channels.

N. Y. Banks Favor Closing All Saturdays

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—The bulk of New York's banks not only are in favor of shutting up shop on Saturdays during the summer, but also the year round, replies to a questionnaire circulated by the New York State Bankers Association revealed today.

The association sent the questionnaire to 303 banks which closed on Saturdays during July and August this past summer and got 251 replies. Of the 251, a total of 214 said they would favor an amendment to the Quinn bill making Saturday closings during July and August mandatory. Only 26 were opposed, while 11 were undecided. In answer to the question of whether they favored an amendment making Saturday a full holiday throughout the year, 147 replied in the affirmative, 78 were opposed, and 26 undecided.

Reich Denied Venezuelan Pact Benefits

Poland and All Other Areas Nazis Control Named by Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

Germany and all the territories Hitler has acquired in the last few years were lumped together yesterday by the United States economic blacklist.

In proclaiming a trade agreement with Venezuela, President Roosevelt excepted Germany and the territories under her control from tariff concessions granted the South American country.

"Because I find as a fact," Mr. Roosevelt said, "that the treatment of American commerce by Germany is discriminatory, I direct that such proclaimed duties (in the Venezuelan agreement) shall not be applied to products of Germany. Products of territories now under the de facto administrative control of Germany shall be regarded as products of Germany for the purposes of this paragraph."

All Rest of World Benefits

Consequently goods coming from the Germany of the Versailles Treaty, plus the Saar, plus Austria, plus most of former Czecho-Slovakia, plus most of Poland, must pay the tariffs of the 1930 tariff act, and may not receive the benefits of reductions in duties made under the trade agreements the United States has concluded with 20 nations.

Under most-favored nation policy, the reductions apply to all the world aside from Germany.

In addition to not receiving the benefit of the tariff reductions, German products must pay 25 per cent countervailing duties imposed this year on the grounds that German exports were being subsidized.

No Recognition of Conquests

The President's announcement was contained in a letter to Secretary Morgenthau directing him to apply the duty reductions in the Venezuelan agreement.

An official pointed out that the President's lumping together of Germany and the territories she has absorbed does not in any sense imply a recognition by this Government of the conquest of those lands. He called attention to the phrase used by Mr. Roosevelt "de facto administrative control"—as meaning solely the territories under Germany's factual control.

The Venezuelan agreement becomes provisionally effective December 16, and fully effective the moment is is ratified by the Venezuelan government. The principal concession granted by the United States was a 50 per cent cut in the excise tax on petroleum imports up to 5 per cent of domestic production.

Eviction Delay Won by 3 Sisters On Remnant of Old Estate

The Misses Riley Fight to Keep Rental Home Near Norbeck on 600-Acre Farm With Its 10-Room Mansion They Once Owned

Miss Harriot C. Riley, a woman who loves the land and the look of the earth as it was last night under a sickle moon, stood on the drooping front porch of the tenant house and said she would fight for her "place."

What she referred to is in all its ramifications like a lawyer's brief. It involved the surrender of even the slight hold the Maryland sisters, Misses Elizabeth B., Ellen R. and Harriot C. Riley have on 25 acres of the once-blooming 600 acres owned by the Rileys in Montgomery County since 1864.

Miss Elizabeth was within the house, bed-ridden. On the porch were Miss Harriot and Miss Ellen for a last look at the land before retiring and to talk over the postponement granted yesterday by Justice of the Peace Ralph G. Shure in Silver Spring when the trespass charge came up.

The legal ramifications go back 15 years, involving transactions reaching $100,000, the slipping of the acres from the Riley ownership, their eviction from the 10-room mansion last April 26, their residing in a barn until October 18, and finally their moving into the tenant house through a technicality hinging on a tax title.

The owner of the tax title, Miss Terry M. Earle, of Washington, permitted them to occupy the tenant structure, squatting on 25 acres of the orginal 600—and thereby the Misses Riley found themselves yesterday in court where the mortgage owner contended they had returned to land they didn't own any more.

They will argue when the time comes, Miss Harriot said, that the tax title, until disposed of, is as good as the title of the mortgage holders who had foreclosed. But all that to the Riley sisters was so much legal technicality. What they talked of last night was the land, when 400 acres were in blooms and 200 were in stout timber.

They had been dirt farmers, and still were farming as best they could, though the ground couldn't be scratched now in the uncertainties.

A herd of goats, a good many ducks and some chickens were kept. The hound, Bunt, still lazed around the yard.

"I am certainly going to fight it through," said Miss Harriot. The Rileys weren't new on this land. Philander Chase Riley, their father, first had the land in 1864. The boys left for professional pursuits, but the three girls stayed on and Miss Ellen became one of the first women ever to drive a tractor.

All three acquired good arm muscles from plowing. They ran the place and it was a farm to cause countryside talk out Norbeck way. They learned to take the weather and the rise and fall of farm fortunes in the stride of landed ladies.

They refused to grumble when moving from the ten-room mansion to the barn last spring. The barn, like all others, let in the star light through the sides. At least the last possessions were kept there—the ducks, the goats and the chickens. All of that was in the conversation on the porch of the tenant house while the hound made crunching sounds in the brown creepers in the front yard. "I'm not through fighting," said Miss Harriot, her eyes ablaze in the moonlight.

Early Chrysler Settlement Seen

Detroit, Nov. 17 (AP).—Settlement possibly by early next week of the Chrysler labor dispute keeping 100,000 workers idle was hinted in both corporation and C. I. O. quarters tonight, with a hopeful sign, too, from a Federal mediator.

Conciliator James F. Dewey of the Department of Labor, announcing negotiations would be resumed at 10 a. m. (Eastern standard time) tomorrow, said he expected at that time to hear "proposals from each side on all matters necessary to end this difficulty." He said "some tentative agreements" had been reached today.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A sample of the caliber of play by college club members is shown in today's hand, contributed by William J. Huske, friend of J. Horace Block, who is chairman of a college club's tournament committee.

The hand shows how Block, of Yale, at the perilous contract of four spades, redoubled, won his contract through clever cross-ruffing and an end play with two overtricks to spare. The adversaries' previous bidding and hasty double presented him with the opportunity for correctly appraising their cards.

Bill Huske says in describing the play:

"The hand I give you was played in duplicate, and Block was the only one to make six, although he played it in a contract of four doubled and redoubled. The score of 1,780 points, 480 the value of tricks contracted for, 800 for the two overtricks, and 500 for game, proved very satisfactory compensation for the slam which had not been bid.

"The opening lead was the jack of hearts. Block, who sat North as declarer, won with the ace and led the spade five. East played the deuce, and the four from dummy, and the trey from the West hand completed the trick.

"Still in the lead, the diamond five was laid down, and the finesse of the queen held. The diamond ace was cashed and West discarded a low club. Now a diamond was ruffed by Block, and a heart ruffed in dummy.

"Block rightly reasoned that West for his rebid in hearts held a six-card suit. Dummy returned another diamond, and this was ruffed with the queen of spades. Two good diamonds were now established in dummy and the stage was set for the happy ending.

"The spade ten was overtaken with the jack in dummy and the ace of spades cashed. East was left with the high trump and the minor tenace in clubs. He could do nothing about the matter, except win the high trump and then lead up to the club tenace, giving Block 12 tricks, where others had failed to make as many as 10."

NUTS AND JOLTS

Seasoned Timber

By Dorothy Canfield

Chapter 56

NOR DID HE make any great or long-continued effort to imagine it. Every time his attention rested for a moment on the thought that after all he would need to go on living after election day, he found that in his subconscious mind was not the prosaic perspective of a move to another town, but the picture of what life would be in the small stone house at the end of the steep road, alone with Aunt Lavinia, with $20 or less a month for income eked out with what food could be grown on those rocky fields. To his surprise he had fleeting instants when for the first time he understood the poetic Celtic relish in frustration, and bit hard on the certainty of failing with the inverted satisfaction of a man biting on a sore tooth. Who wins his love shall lose her—who loses her shall gain—there was deep truth in that. His memory brought up to him some of the other countless examples of praise lavished by poets on lost causes, their scorn of the grossness of success. They were right. There was something inferior and plebian about accomplishing your purpose, something elegant and aristocratic about being crushed by destiny. To hit what you aimed at, could show nothing but that your aim had been mean. Whatever nobility there was in human life could almost by definition be summoned up as having your reach exceed your grasp and—since Browning's time — having learned what that simple-minded Victorian never suspected, that there is no beneficent heaven in which your hands can grasp what they reach for.

ONE DAY of hurrying, straining effort succeeded another. Night after night he started up from a light doze with a new detail of the campaign to be seen to, with a new device for coping with some insoluble difficulty, snapped on his light, made a memorandum, and finding it impossible then to go to sleep again, rose, went to his desk and worked out in detail the memorandum he had made. He grew more and more tired. And as his physical vitality was lowered, he not only understood but deeply felt the twilight Celtic pleasure in defeat. He was filled with an emotional nostalgia for the end of struggle that would come with failure. To lose was not only finer, more poetic, more glamorous than to win, it also involved infinitely less effort, since you could fling down your broken sword with honor, and stand with emptied hands, burdened by no implied obligation to take up a tiresome spade and go to work. To have risked your all in a good cause—and lost your all—that was tragedy, yes, but it was austere, dignified, restful, for it put you in a position where the world had no right to expect more effort from you.

At such moments, it was with real longing that he looked forward to the stagnation of life up there in the low-ceilinged small house. With each new intimation of failure (and there were plenty of them) he took refuge in imagining an existence which would be literally as well as spiritually at the end of the road. He would no longer need—since it would be seldom that anyone would appear in that backwater—to go on struggling to be self-controlled and patient with others; he could stop the pretense of being interested in what bored him. Every time he thought of it, his imagination presented him with a new detail—why, he could give up the never-ending fatigue of the effort to keep clean. He could let himself go, as Aunt Lavinia had already. Why not? As time went on and his fatigue deepened he saw the two of them more and more distinctly as backroad eccentrics, Aunt Lavinia's mind quite blurred, a crazy old crone who went to bed with her clothes on, who had dirt in the deep creases of her face and neck. He embroidered on his theme, put himself in overalls—ragged ones—and a hickory shirt. He would let his beard grow. It would soon be gray. He saw himself in a torn shirt, with a straggling gray beard stained at the corners of his mouth with tobacco juice, for he would have no money for cigarettes. He would chew tobacco vacantly as he sat hour after hour on a broken-down chair under the maples. And there would be no one to be surprised, to be disappointed, to criticize, to comment. For no one would have any occasion to go to that dead end. He could—at last—do exactly as he pleased, that is, do nothing.

THERE WERE MOMENTS when, exhausted after a long day he got his clothes off somehow and fell into bed, he could scarcely wait for the beginning of that death-in-life of defeat and inaction, so highly prized by those who have not tried it and by those who dread the responsibility to make something out of success which comes with its achievement. "The star is yours to win or lose and me the dusk has won," he told himself, stretching out on his bed, escaping in his imagination to his future from the strain of his present. The disheartenment with the ominous news-items from Asia and Europe (this was the summer of 1937) found an outlet in this foreknowledge of the corpse-like peace of accepted defeat, and lay down gladly in the imaginary coffin up there under the old maples. From it, green with the mold of quiescent impotence, he would look down not only on Clifford, but on the human race, still sweating, still trying—and he would pity them—and scorn them—he who knew that all trying comes in the end to dust and nothingness and that one event happeneth to them all.

BUT THIS WAS as yet but a faint scrawl on the margin of his page. The time was not come for the steady relishing of frustration, nor did he often have even an instant's pause to drink of things Lethean. Until that day of the election he was constantly in the thick of dusty panting business, which more often than not clenched his teeth in the crass, unpoetic, vitalizing, do-or-die determination of a man playing a tournament match with a formidably skillful opponent on the other side of the net. Almost every day brought a new fierce challenge, the violence of which struck out from him a violent reaction—not so much of the conscious will as, he sometimes thought wonderingly, involuntary, reflex, biologic—of more power, more ingenuity, more doggedness, more resourcefulness than he had thought he had.

There were reporters to be seen, with their endless questions, every one of which was to be answered with watchful patience and circumspection, for Mr. Dewey constantly charged those working for Dr. Foote's election, "Nobody on our side is to lay back his ears, nor show the whites of his eyes, nor bite. This is a difference of opinion between citizens, not a gougin' and kickin' match in a lumber camp." When one of the younger or more hot-tempered of his supporters was irked by this tight rein, and protested impatiently, the old man added, "And it's just horse sense too. Everything that's the right way is only just sense. There ain't a more foolish thing to do in an argyment than to back the other fellow into a corner he can't get out of without eatin' crow. Then he's got to fight!" Another time he remarked, "No, sir, not while my say-so counts for anything, is anybody goin' to say that folks that don't agree with us are [illegible], or liars, or are just out to line their own pockets. 'Tain't so, for one thing. And 'tain't good policy either. Leave'm a pole to slide down on, that they don't have to sing small to take." So there was no recourse to the calling of names, no accusations, no slurs, no denunciations either in what was said to reporters and in campaigning visits or in the endless bulletins and circular letters which Timothy composed.

These statements, signed by Timothy, or Mr. Dewey, or Dr. Foote, and, occasionally, by someone else willing to do it, went, as needed, to alumni in Clifford and out of town, to the Parent-Teacher Association, to the Windward County Ministers Association, to the Rotary Club, to the Fish and Game Club, and the Catholic Daughters of America, and the Masons and the Order of the Eastern Star, to St. Andrew's Guild and to the Grange. As carefully as he knew how, Timothy wrote each one to fit the special readers to whom it was to go. Each one stated over and over again the principles at stake, took up, one by one, the arguments in the statements from their opponents, and their attitude toward the Wheaton bequests as that attitude was reported by the flying squad of workers, young and old, who met in Timothy's office every morning at 9 to lay their heads together for the day's work.

"Rug Milner said to the man he was playin' tennis with yesterday, it was somebody visitin' the Pete Gardners, that Mr. Dewey is dead set against this just because he don't want anything in town different from what it was when he was a boy." Pete Gardner, the most prosperous merchant in town, was the candidate running against Dr. Foote.)

"MY MOTHER SAYS that Mr. Hawley, from the other side, told her when he brought the eggs this morning that if Prof. Hulme had children of his own to be eddicated at the 'cademy' he'd feel some different about gettin' this money to improve the school."

"Down at the barber shop yesterday when I was getting my hair cut I heard some men saying they figured taxes could be cut 'way down, with a whole lot of new buildings added to the grand list."

"At the last meeting of the Guild the ladies asked why ever Prof. Hulme thought the 'cademy would have to get high-hat just because it had enough money to run on."

"Rev. Harker told the Young People's Club Sunday evening that the best people in town are saying there's something kind of Communistic about running down somebody just because he was rich, the way our side's been running down Mr. Wheaton."

Timothy planned his bulletins accordingly: one on taxation to point out the elementary fact that buildings used for education pay no taxes; one with statistics of attendance at other New England academies and seminaries showing the relation between the size of the tuition fee and the number of local students still enrolled; he went to see Mrs. Merrill, president of the Ladies Guild, and did not leave till he had an appointment to speak at their next meeting; he made a memorandum to go with Mr. Dewey to see the Rev. Harker for a plain talk about what Mr. Wheaton's personality and ideas had been. The traditional, idiotic and Wheaton-like bogey-tales about Jews, of which there was occasionally an echo, they left scornfully unanswered, trusting to Clifford common sense.

"Does that history text give any quotations from Froissart, Delia? No? Well, it should. Nobody can study the Hundred Years War without reading some Froissart. I'll look up an edition I have before your next lesson. Now, suppose you were asked in an examination to explain how archers armed with the English longbows were used at Crecy? Let's hear what you would answer."

HE HAD A REST, occasionally, from the considerable effort of writing bulletins, when the clipping bureau to which (for the first time in his life) he had subscribed, sent him an editorial comment from the press. Most of the newspapers in the eastern large cities had commented with bland approval at least once on the campaign being carried on in Clifford:—"sturdy old-Americanism" they had said, and "picturesque campaign going on in a country town in rural Vermont," and "farmers in overalls and housewives in gingham, asked to refuse large gift to their school as a matter of principle." But on the whole, Timothy made little use of his unimpassioned support from the outside. For one thing, Clifford people, although their vanity was as normally susceptible to praise as that of other humans, were prickly to the last degree about being told how to run their affairs; and for another, the general tone of many of the editorials, although correctly idealistic, fell on the ear like the sound of dollars with a good deal of lead in them. Clifford people were unsophisticated but they were by no means inexperienced in life;—they knew as well as anyone else the brisk, ringing resonance of genuine silver, they knew how much weight to give a perfunctory compliment from a man who, even as he talked, let his eyes wander absently over their insignificant heads; already turning in thought from their little problems to one of the important things of life. As Canby said, "It's no skin off their nose! Talk's cheap. But did you hear a peep from any of them about Yale's accepting the million for scholarships for Aryan boys? Maybe, you did. I never. And would you know, from anything they ever print, that summer hotels and country clubs all over New England won't take Jews? Not on your life."

"But even lip service to an American ideal shows it's still a force," suggested Timothy.

"Nobody denies you've got the talking points on your side, Uncle Tim. But when it comes to the voting points . . ."

AS TO THE CLAIMS occasionally advanced seriously in some other papers and magazines, that the campaign in Clifford proved Vermonters to be not really as they seem, stagnant and reactionary, but intelligent and progressive, communists at heart, or at least socialists, ready to revolt from the rule of etc. and to welcome in the proletarian etc., Timothy read them aloud to the accompaniment of wild screeches of laughter from Canby and amused snorts from Mr. Dewey and dropped them into the wastepaper basket.

This was in the first days of those feverish two months, when Canby was still active, coming once in a while with suggestions to the morning meetings of the general staff, even making a few campaign visits of his own. He soon stopped these, heartily out of patience with Clifford silent unresponsiveness. "Hell! I can't talk to that bunch o' deadpans!" he said indignantly. And he appeared less and less often at the principal's office, absorbed in those plans of his for reconstructing and selling old houses to summer people, about which he volubly talked at Miss Peck's supper-table, monopolizing the conversation, night after night, with as ruthless a concentration on his own interests as ever Mrs. Washburn showed.

AAA to Make Checks Depend On Farm Care

Land Is Wearing Out, Wallace Tells Session Of Land Grant Colleges

The Agriculture Department is preparing to require farmers to take better care of their farms in order to be eligible for the benefit payments of $500,000,000 annually, Secretary Wallace yesterday told the concluding session of the Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities.

"As soon as the farmers themselves really understand the needs of their soil," he said, "it will be possible to make AAA payments conditional upon full protection of farms against wind and water and erosion."

Changes in the program to be announced shortly, however, will merely place greater emphasis on "proper" farming practices.

Holds Land Wearing Out

"Land is still wearing out faster than we are able to restore it," Wallace said.

The European war makes it doubly important, he added, that this country build up a strong defense against waste of its farm resources because of the possibility that the economic cycle of the last war will be repeated.

"Fair prices are essential and must continue to be a primary objective of public programs," he said. "But good prices, good income, and conservation should be wholly compatible and inseparable. One should not sacrifice the other."

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt discussed farm and retail prices and preservation of peace in this country.

Prices Worry First Lady

The First Lady said she received many letters asking why the spread is so great between farm and retail prices. She asked the President, she added, but wasn't satisfied with his answer and so was passing the question along to the experts represented at the gathering.

Mrs. Roosevelt also suggested that the line between city and farm workers be eliminated or at least brought to the lowest possible point.

"We have to show labor in the cities and labor on the farms," she said, "that their problems are close together and that they have mutual interests."

Farrell Elected President

Dr. F. D. Farrell, president of Kansas State College, was elected president of the association, succeeding Dr. Julian A. Burruss, president of Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

W. C. Coffey, of the University of Minnesota, was elected vice president, and Thomas Cooper, of the University of Kentucky, was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Dr. T. B. Symons, dean of the agricultural college, University of Maryland, was elected a member of the executive committee.

H. F. Cotterman and C. O. Appleman, both of the University of Maryland, were named chairmen of resident teaching and graduate work.

D. C. Clerks' Dance to Honor M. C. Hargrove

Purchasing Agent to Retire Dec. 1 After 52 Years of Service

Marion C. Hargrove, veteran District employe, will be honored by more than 200 fellow workers tonight at a dinner dance at the Mayflower Hotel.

Purchasing officer for the District since 1905 when his position was known as property clerk, Hargrove will retire at the end of the month after 52 years of service with the local government. He is 71 years old.

Born in Nelson County, Va., in 1868, Hargrove came to this city at the age of 5. He was a page in the Supreme Court from 1884 to 1886. While employed as a page he attended night school at the old Spencerian Business College.

When he had grown too large and old to be retained as a page in the court, Hargrove applied for a position with the District government and, when he was told there were no vacancies, he volunteered to work for nothing until one occurred. His offer was accepted by the Engineer Commissioner. One month later he was appointed at $2 a day to serve with an engineering field-party. Six months later he was transferred to a clerkship and in 1894 he was appointed deputy property clerk at $1,200 a year.

In 1908 he was promoted to property clerk at $2,500 and, when the title of the office was changed to purchasing officer, his salary was increased to $2,750.

Hargrove will be succeeded by Roland N. Brennan, former secretary to the Board of Commissioners. The retiring purchasing agent is a bachelor and lives with his widowed sister, Mrs. Harry Moore Payne, at 2600 Thirty-sixth street northwest.
